PREFACE

THIS book owes its existence to the Boden Professor of Sanskrit, Dr. A. A. Macdonell, who suggested to me the writing of it, and who secured its acceptance for publication by the Delegates of the Clarendon Press. Professor Macdonell was also so good as to read the proofs of the first three sheets before he left England in 1907 for his tour in India, and for this and all the other help he has given me in the course of my Sanskrit studies I desire to express my most sincere thanks.

The editing of the text has been rendered possible for me by the liberality of the India Office and of the Royal Asiatic Society, which lent to me the manuscripts on which the text is based. To the Secretary of the Society, Miss Hughes, and to the Librarian of the India Office, Mr. F. W. Thomas, I owe grateful acknowledgements of the assistance afforded me in this and other ways.

I have tried by the translation and commentary to extract as much as possible from the Aitareya Āranyaka, as I recognize that a text of this class should as far as practicable be made by its editor to yield all that can be derived from it for the knowledge of the period when it was produced. With this end in view I have added a series of Indexes which contain in great fullness the lexical material of the work, while the material will also serve for grammatical purposes, as in each case the precise form which occurs is specified. I need make no apology for the distinction made between the Mantra, the Āranyaka, and Sūtra forms; not to distinguish the different strata of the text would be merely misleading.

In the commentary I have tried to avoid repeating what can easily be found in such standard works as the St. Petersburg Dictionaries, Colonel Jacob's Concordance to the Upaniṣads, and Deussen's treatise on the Philosophy of the Upanishads. Nor have I thought it worth while to note in detail the verbal coincidences between the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa and the Āraṇyaka. As might be expected they are constant and show unmistakeably the connexion of the two works. Some other points arising out of the book I hope to deal with elsewhere.

I had not originally any intention of including in the book the text of a portion of the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka which now forms the appendix. I hoped that Dr. Friedländer would complete his projected edition of that text, and it was only after a considerable portion of the book was in type that I learned that there was little or no prospect of the appearance of an edition at any early date. I then obtained the permission of the Delegates to print so much of the text of the Śāṅkhāyana as was unpublished, and the Royal Asiatic Society were so good as to include a translation of the whole Āraṇyaka in their series of Oriental Translations, and to publish an article of mine on the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka in the Journal of the Society for 1908. The translation and the article will be found to supplement in some important points the information as to the Śāṅkhāyana contained in this book.

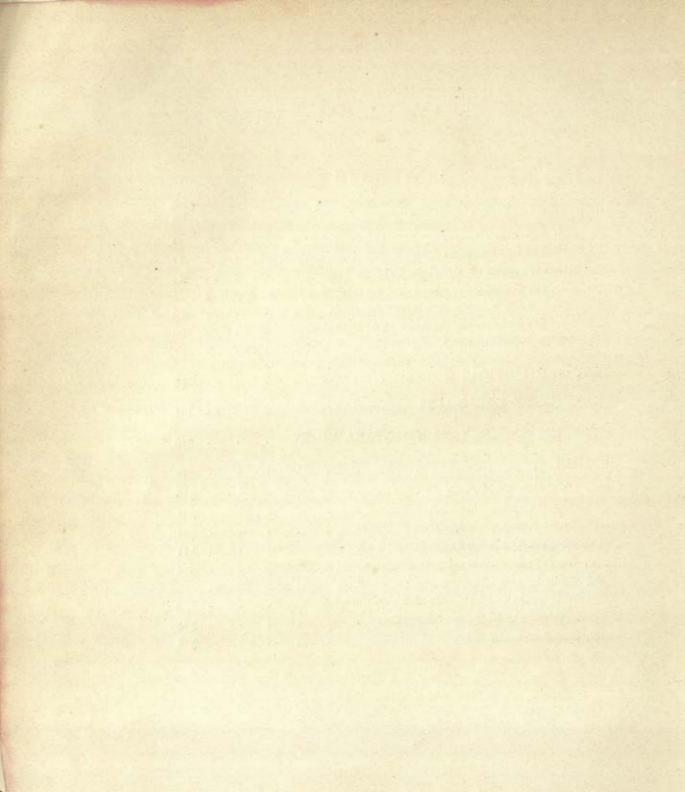

The printing of the work has occupied over two years, and has entailed a good deal of trouble on all those concerned with it. I desire to express my thanks to Mr. R. W. Chapman, of the Clarendon Press, for the interest which he has taken in it and for valuable suggestions which he has made from time to time on points of form. It gives me also much pleasure to acknowledge the great pains taken by the Oriental Reader of the Clarendon Press, Mr. J. C. Pembrey, Hon. M.A. of Oxford, in dealing with the proofs. For such errors as remain I must accept responsibility. This is the fourth book of mine which has had the advantage of Mr. Pembrey's care and skill, and I feel that it would be difficult to exaggerate the value of his assistance.

A. BERRIEDALE KEITH.

THE AITAREYA ĀRANYAKA

INTRODUCTION

I. The Text.

WHEN, in June, 1905, I commenced preparations for the production of an edition of the Aitareya Āranyaka, I was mainly influenced by the expectation, raised in part by the reference in Prof. Bühler's Report 1 on his Kashmir journey to differences in the text in a birch-bark MS., that it might be possible to amend considerably the text of Rajendralala Mitra's edition. Rājendralāla used only two complete MSS, of the text, and three of Sayana's commentary, besides three other MSS. of parts of the text or commentary, and it seemed reasonable to suppose that the employment of additional MS. material would add to the correctness of the text. This expectation has not been justified. The use of additional MSS, enables me to correct a good many slips and one or two serious omissions in Rajendralala's text, but it establishes the fact that the tradition as to the text seems unbroken. Variant readings occur here and there, but none of sufficient importance to justify the idea that any different recensions of the text ever existed, and it is hardly ever possible to feel serious doubt as to the correct reading. What is especially important is that MSS, from both the extreme north as Bühler's MS. from Kashmir-and the south agree in presenting the same text. Further, the commentary of Sayana presents the same text as the commentaries of Sankara on Books II and III, and of Anandatirtha and Viśveśvara on the same books.

The MS. Material.

The MSS which directly or indirectly have been used for this edition are as follows:—

1. A. This MS. is dated samvat 1854 (= A.D. 1797), and contains the text of the Aranyaka complete. It belonged to Colebrooke, who annotated it, and used it when writing his Essays. The substance of his note on the authorship, Essays, I, 46, occurs on fol. 60° of the MS. The MS. is No. 78 in Eggeling's Catalogue of the Sanskrit MSS. in the Library of the India Office, Part I. Written on paper in Devanāgarī.

2. B. This MS. is on birch-bark and in Śāradā characters. It contains the Rgveda Samhitā, the Khilakāṇḍa, and on ff. 188v-191, the Aitareya Āraṇyaka, Book III, only. It was discovered by Prof. Bühler, and the information it offers regarding the Khilas is discussed by Prof. Macdonell, Bṛhaddevatā, I, xxxi. See also Max Müller, S. B. E., I, lxxviii, lxxix, who used it in preparing his translation of the Upaniṣad, and Dr. Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, pp. 32 sq., 167, 168.

It probably dates about A.D. 1575.1

The variants of this MS. have been referred to as important, both by Bühler and Dr. Scheftelowitz. This view appears to me erroneous. Whatever may be the value of the MS. for the criticism of the text of the Rgveda,2 it contributes, in my opinion, not a single correction to the text of Āranyaka III. It contains many errors, e.g. prajaya, prajayah for prajayā; samhitāya for samhitāyā; sandhīny for sandhīn; ābhyāśam for abhyāśam, &c. Most of its variants can be proved incorrect from the context. In III, 1, 4, cen is omitted in the first clause, but in the second cen occurs and it is most improbable that the word should be omitted in the first of two precisely parallel clauses. Then also chaknuvantam is read without the negative, which reduces the passage to nonsense. In III, 1, 5, pūrva is omitted before rūpam, but the context urgently requires its presence; the words putra āha are also omitted, but leave madhyamah unintelligible, and ekīkurvan for anekīkurvan is contradicted by the next clause. In III, 1, 6, a whole clause is omitted because it begins and ends with the same words as the preceding clause; tam is omitted in a Rgvedic quotation, while by diplography sa saisāditih stands for saisāditih. In III, 2, 1, an unnecessary iti is inserted before etat proktam, presumably because an iti is expected with the form proktam, and the whole phrase trayam to eva na ity etat proktam is repeated in III, 2, 2, where it is not in place. In III, 2, 1, it is required because it contradicts a view of Hrasva Māṇdūkeya that there was a fourth class. In III, 2, 2, the threefold division is accepted. The same tendency to diplography is seen in the double ahar in the same section. In III, 2, 3, the obvious brāhmaṇam appears for brahmāṇam, but just before we have brahmā rasaḥ. In the list in III, 2, 2, manomayaḥ is wanting, but it appears in the precisely similar list in III, 2, 3. Another omission is seen in nasyānūkte, III, 2, 4, for na tasyānūkte, and 'mato has fallen out between 'gato and 'nato. The defective āskandati is balanced by jīvavisyati.

 Cf. Oldenberg, Gött. gel. Anz., 1907, pp. 235 sq.

Other alterations are inferior in sense. In III, 2, 4, vāśarīram for vāśirasam after jihmaśirasam postulates the possibility of perceiving a disembodied spirit, which is difficult; candramā evādityo, ibid., is inferior to ivādityo; apagirati is required rather than avagirati, &c.

The only passage in which B offers at first sight a better text is III, 2, 6: Prajāpatih prajāh sṛṣṭvā vyasraṃsad ā saṃvatsaram, where it may be suggested to take ā saṃvatsaram as = over a year. This is not quite impossible, but it is not likely, and then the proper form is undoubtedly the middle, cf. visraṃsata, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 27, &c. Further, it is very difficult to see how the standard text could ever have been altered from this reading. But palaeographically the corruption found here is quite easy. d and t are not very different in Śāradā MSS., and t actually appears for dh in III, 2, 3, anuvitān for anuvidham, a much less easy mistake. Then a and \bar{a} are often interchanged, as in anuvitān just cited, and in ānyāni, III, 2, 3, for anyāni; anusaṃhitām, III, 2, 6, for anusaṃhitam. saṃvatsaram may have followed when a became \bar{a} , or have been an independent attempt at an easier reading.

Other errors are the interchange of a and i, samhitah, III, I, I, I, If or samhatah; baṭirakāṇi, III, 2, 4, for baṭarakāṇi; of a and e, the characteristic stroke for the latter being omitted, agnar and rāṭrisūkṭana, III, 2, 4. r is treated like ri and so written in rite, III, 2, 2; so in the Khilas, V, 3, vajrin rūjase is written for vajrinn; cf. Scheftelowitz, p. 175. i and ī are also confused.

In some points the MS. is accurate. Before gutturals and labials the appropriate sign for h is used. For h s or h s, s or s always occur, and anusvāra is practically never misused. After r and m duplication of consonants is regular, and for d ha is always written d d ha.

But on the whole, I consider the MS., though in many ways valuable, yet to contain many corruptions due in part to the errors inevitable in transcription and copying of Śāradā MSS. and in part to attempted correction of the text. The result of the comparison with the text of the Aranyaka and with the Śānkhāyana Āranyaka leads me to look with doubt on the readings of the MS, where they differ from other sources.

3. C. This MS. was written in sake 1585 (= A.D. 1663), sobha āṣāḍhavadi 7 bhṛgau by Śāradānandavaṃśodbhava Mahādeva. The first sixteen leaves, however, are in a different hand and originally formed part of another MS. They contain part of Book II, while the rest of the MS. contains part of Book III (ff. 17-103) and the last Khanda of the third Adhyāya of Book V, in each case with Sāyaṇa's commentary. See Eggeling, No. 83. Written on paper in Devanāgarī.

4. D. This MS. is one of the Whish collection in the Library of the Royal Asiatic Society. It is on palm-leaves and in Grantha characters, legible and not very incorrect. See Thomas in Winternitz, Catalogue of South Indian Sanskrit Manuscripts, No. 191. It contains the Āranyaka complete. Its probable date is A.D. 1700.

5. E. This MS. was presented by Dr. Burnell to the India Office. It is fairly well written in Grantha characters on palm-leaves. It is No. 84 of Dr. Burnell's collection, see Catalogue of a Collection of Sanskrit Manuscripts, Part I, Vedic Manuscripts. It contains the Āranyaka complete. It probably dates from the eighteenth century.

6. F. This MS. belonged to Colonel Claud Martin, and like G appears to have been presented to the India Office by Colebrooke. It forms part of a corpus, consisting of the Aśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, Pūrvaṣaṭka (ff. 1–20), Uttaraṣaṭka (ff. 1–11), Gṛhya Sūtra (ff. 1–17), Sarvānukramaṇī (ff. 17^v–24), and Āraṇyaka (ff. 25–35). It contains the Āraṇyaka complete. See Eggeling, No. 80. Written on paper in Devanāgarī about the end of the eighteenth century.

7. G. Like F this MS. belonged to Col. Claud Martin, and was presented to the India Office by Colebrooke. It also contains a corpus, consisting of Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, Pūrvaṣaṭka (ff. 1-64), Uttaraṣaṭka (ff. 1-40), Gṛḥya Sūtra (ff. 1-26), Sarvānukramaṇī (ff. 1-28), and Āraṇyaka (ff. 1-45), complete. See Eggeling, No. 79. Written on paper in Devanāgarī about the end of the eighteenth century. This MS. is closely connected with F.

8. H. This MS. contains the commentary of Viśveśvaratīrtha on a commentary by Ānandatīrtha on Books II and III of the Āraṇyaka. The text is not cited in full, but the commentary shows that it was identical with the text of Sāyaṇa. See Eggeling, No. 84. Written on paper in Devanāgarī in the seventeenth century.

- 9. I. This MS. contains Sāyaṇa's commentary on Book II, 4-7. It is dated śake 1685 (= A. D. 1763). See Eggeling, No. 88. Written on paper in Devanāgarī. It formerly belonged to Colebrooke. Very inaccurate.
- 10. J. This symbol denotes two copies of Śańkara's commentary on Book II, 4-6, dated śake 1665 (= A.D. 1743) and samvat 1848 (= A.D. 1791). See Eggeling, Nos. 85 and 86. Written on paper in Devanāgarī. Only pratīkas are cited, but the commentary shows the usual text. They formerly belonged to Colebrooke.
- 11. K. This MS. contains the Āraṇyaka complete. It was written by Devagovinda Rāya at Benares in saṃ 1827, śāke 1692 (= A. D. 1770), and was presented by Colebrooke to the India Office. See Eggeling, No. 81. Written on paper in Devanāgarī.
- 12. L. This MS. contains the Āranyaka complete. It was written in sake 1684, samvat 1819 (= A. D. 1762). See Eggeling, No. 82. Written on paper in Devanāgarī. This MS. is closely connected with K.
- 13. M. This MS. contains the text of the Upaniṣad together with Śaṅkara's commentary and Ānandatīrtha's super-commentary. Ānandatīrtha here is styled Abhinavanārāyaṇendra as in several other MSS. This is one of the MSS. in the Bodleian, and is described in Winternitz and Keith's Catalogue of the Sanskrit Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, No. 977. Written on paper in Devanāgarī in A.D. 1819.
- 14. N. This MS. has the same contents as M, and Ānandatīrtha is here also styled Abhinavanārāyaṇendra. It is one of the Wilson collection in the Bodleian; see the Catalogue, No. 1010 (5). Written on paper in Devanāgarī about A.D. 1801.
- 15. O. This MS. contains, like H, Viśveśvaratīrtha's commentary on Ānandatīrtha's commentary on Books II and III of the Āraṇyaka. It is one of the Wilson MSS. in the Bodleian, see the Catalogue, No. 1011 (3). Written on paper in Devanāgarī about the end of the sixteenth century.
- 16. P. This MS. contains Sankara's commentary on Book II of the Aranyaka, but is imperfect, extending only to Adhyāyas 1-3 and a small part of 4. It is one of the Mill collection in the Bodleian and is described in the Catalogue, No. 1014 (1). Written on paper in Devanāgarī in the eighteenth century.
- 17. Q. This MS. contains the Upanisad with Śankara's commentary and Ānandatīrtha's (called Abhinavanārāyanendra) super-commentary.

(= A. D. 1796).

18-25. R¹⁻⁸ are the MSS. used by Rājendralāla Mitra for his edition, Aitareya Āranyaka with the Commentary of Sāyaṇa Ācārya, Bibl. Ind., Nos. 325, 329, 335, 337, and 345, Calcutta, 1875-1876. Their description is (Introd., pp. 20, 21) as follows:—

Ka (= R¹), lent by Paṇḍit Vāmana, of the Benares Sanskrit College, dated saṃvat 1816 (= A.D. 1759), virodhisaṃvatsare kārttikaśukla-saptamyāṃ Viśveśvararājadhānyāṃ. It contained the commentary of Sāyaṇa on the whole Āraṇyaka.

Kha (= R²), from the Sanskrit College at Calcutta, containing Sāyaṇa's commentary on Books I and II. Apparently old.

Ga (= R³), from Dr. G. Bühler, of Bombay, dated śrāvaṇavadi 30 śanivāre śāke 1788 (= A.D. 1866) kṣayanāmasaṇvatsare, containing the commentary complete.

Gha (= R⁴), copied for Rājendralāla under the superintendence of Bābu Amṛtalāla of Benares and collated with two different codices, the codex copied being dated saṃvat 1828 (= A. D. 1771) śrāvaṇavadi 3. It contained the commentary complete.

Ka (= R⁵), copied for Rājendralāla under Amṛtalāla's superintendence and collated with a MS. dated saṃvat 1775 (= A. D. 1718) kilakanāma-saṃvatsare dakṣiṇāyane varṣā ṛtau bhādrapade māsi kṛṣṇapakṣe bhṛguvā-sare taddine pustakam samāpṭaṃ. It contained the text complete.

Kha (= R⁶), copied for Dr. Burnell, of Mangalore, and lent to Rājendralāla. The original belonged to a paṇḍit in Tanjore. It contained the text complete. Cf. E.

Ga (= R⁷), from the Library of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, containing Book II only of the text, written in the śaka year named Vyaya by Nārāyaṇa, of Candrapūra, for his master Śivarāma.

Gha (= R⁸), from the Library of the Sanskrit College, Calcutta, containing Book IV, with Sāyaṇa's commentary.

Of these ka and kha (presumably R⁵ and R⁶) are said to belong to the same class. But it is clear that Rājendralāla merely compiled an eclectic text from the various MSS., and that he did not contemplate a critical text. R denotes the reading of the edition when it appears to rest on all the MSS, available.

26-34. S1-9 are the MSS. used in the edition in the Anandasrama series, 1898, No. 38, with Sāyaṇa's commentary by Bābāśāstrī Phaḍake. They are as follows:—

 $Ka (= \mathbf{S}^1)$, containing text and commentary complete, belonging to Śrīmat Gurumahārāja, of Karavīrapura.

Kha (= $2), containing text and commentary complete, belonging to Gangādhara Śāstrī Dātāra, of Punyapattana.

 $Ga (= S^3)$ and $Gha (= S^4)$, containing text and commentary complete, from the Ānandāśrama library.

 $\dot{N}a$ (= \mathbf{S}^5), containing text and commentary of Books II-IV, belonging to Bhāūsāheba Bālāsāheba Kibe, of Indūrapura.

Fha (= S⁹), containing text only, belonging to Śańkararāva Bhāgavata, of Thāne.

There is no doubt that some care has been taken in giving the variant readings which are practically confined to the commentary. Where the MSS appear to agree, S is used to denote the reading of the edition. The text of the Āraṇyaka in this edition contains some errors and omissions, but is superior to that of Rājendralāla.

35. T. This is the version found in the collection of 108 Upanisads published in Telugu character at Madras in 1883. It contains no important variants, and seems conclusively to prove that the South had no separate recension. See Deussen, Sechzig Upanishad's des Veda, p. 534. In view of Śańkara's influence in Southern India, this was only to be expected.

36. U. This symbol is used to denote the text of the Upaniṣad with Śaṅkara's commentary, Ānandatīrtha's super-commentary, and with Vidyāranya's (Sāyaṇa's) Dīpikā, published in the Ānandāśrama series, 1889, No. 11. For this edition were used five MSS. (ka, kha, ga, gha, na) of the text, commentary, and super-commentary; six MSS. (ca, cha, ja, jha, tha, da) of the commentary, two MSS. (ka, kha) of the text alone, and four MSS. (ka, kha, ga, gha) of the Dīpikā, besides two editions (na, ta). The variants are, however, almost confined to the commentary.

37. W. This MS. contains Sāyaṇa's commentary on Book I of the Araṇyaka. It is on palm-leaves and in Malayālam characters, and is very inaccurate. It is one of the Whish MSS. in the Library of the Royal Asiatic Society. See Winternitz, No. 1 (b), who assigns it to the eighteenth or nineteenth century.

38. X. This MS. contains Sankara's commentary on Books II and III of the Aranyaka. It is written on palm-leaves in Malayalam characters. The MS. is much damaged. It is No. 158 in Winternitz's Catalogue, and may be assigned to the seventeenth century.

Of these MSS. I have collated all save R¹⁻⁸, S¹⁻⁹, and those used in U. There are many other MSS. and editions of the Upaniṣad in existence and several MSS. of the Āraṇyaka (see Aufrecht, Catalogus Catalogorum, s. vv.), but there is no reason to suppose that any of them would add anything new to the text. Max Müller used (cf. S.B.E., I, xcvii) a MS. of the text with Śaṅkara and Ānandatīrtha's commentaries, and also a commentary by Śaṅkara¹ on Book III, Adhyāya I, but he states that the MSS. he used gave little aid. It appears from Weber's Catalogue that the Berlin MSS. have no independent value.

The MSS. used are on the whole decidedly inferior. They are modern copies and contain many clerical errors. No useful purpose would be served by recording all the blunders of the scribes. I have therefore printed only those which seemed of more importance, either textually or palaeographically, save in the case of B, in view of the special—if somewhat artificial—interest of that MS.

In Rājendralāla's edition, and in Max Müller's translation of the first three books of the Āraṇyaka (S.B.E., I), the text, besides the division into Adhyāyas and Khaṇḍas shown in all the MSS., is divided into short sections which are numbered. These numbers seem to be attributable to Rājendralāla himself, as there is no trace of them in any of the MSS. I have used or in the Ānandāśrama edition. The divisions follow the treatment by Sāyaṇa of the text in his commentary, but they cannot be said to be always satisfactory, consistent, or convenient, and I have not felt bound to adopt them. None of the MSS. show any satisfactory or consistent punctuation—such a punctuation being practically unknown in Sanskrit MSS. of prose works—and I have therefore adopted what seemed to me the most convenient punctuation.

In the Upanisad (II, 4-6), within the Khandas there is a division into sections in accordance with Śańkara's commentary which differs greatly from that of Sāyaṇa, and which has been adopted in the editions of the Upanisad. This enumeration might have been retained for convenience of reference, but for the sake of consistency I have preferred to omit it.

With regard to the text of Sayana's commentary it may be observed that neither Rājendralāla nor the Ānandāśrama edition gives a very correct version. It is clear that Rajendralala freely corrected his MSS., and that even the numerous variants given in the Anandaśrama do not exhaust the variations of reading. Curiously enough the editors of the latter cannot have consulted the former. For example the commentary on madhumati in V, 2, 2, reads: saraso (cāsau is suggested as a correction) madhvādimādhuryarasopetatvān madhumān. Rājendralāla has: sa ca somājyādimādhuryarasopetatvān madhumān, which, as the noun is (upa) prakse glossed as yagapradese, is neat and convincing. Or again V, 2, 1, where Rajendralala has the obvious savah vairinam balam, while the Anandaśrama has [vairi] nām [śavo?] balam, while just after īm ativyathir is rendered according to Rājendralāla enam šatrum atisayena calitavān, and according to the Anandāsrama imam sattum &c. One MS., S3, has santum, and of course there is no easier mistake in MSS. than that of tr, tt, and nt, while interchange of sibilants is constant. Or again in the quotations at the end of V, 1, 5, both editions present bad texts, but Rājendralāla has etac carma while the Anandāśrama has etac ca karma, which in view of the context is absurd. Many other instances could be quoted, and undoubtedly either in many places Rājendralāla's MSS. were superior or his critical judgement was better, probably the former. Further, there are repeated,-sometimes very serious, e.g. I, 5, 2, -omissions in the Anandāśrama text, and in places, e. g. I, 5, 1, the text has been badly confused.

On the other hand, there are many instances where the Ānandāśrama text is superior to that of Rājendralāla. For example the note in the latter edition on II, 3, 4, p. 226, line 3 from foot, dhyānajapyam¹ anenaikapakṣaḥ is meaningless, but a perfectly good sense is given by the Ānandāśrama reading (see note on p. 135) Dhānamjayyam.

The comparison of the two editions would give a satisfactory text in all respects save in quotations from unknown works. In these Rājendralāla is usually superior to the Ānandāśrama, but neither is very accurate, and further MS. authority would be requisite.

From a comparison of the recorded readings the MSS. of the commentary appear to be divisible into the following classes. (1) R¹, and R³, with which may be classed C, and so far as it goes I; (2) S¹, S², S⁴, S⁵, which approach closely to class (1),—in this class S¹ and S², and S⁴ and S⁵ are closely related; (3) S³ which falls into a distinct class of its own; (4) R² and R⁴ which again form a distinct class, and (5) W.

The MS. material available would not suffice to form a text either of Sankara's commentary on the Āraṇyakas II and III, or of Viśveśvara's super-commentary on Ānandatīrtha's commentary on those Āraṇyakas, the more so in the latter case that no MSS. of the commentary itself have yet come to light.

In the edition of Rājendralāla and in the MSS. A and E only are accents used. These accents are clearly confined to those verses not occurring in the Rgveda Saṃhitā which are quoted in full in the Āraṇyaka V. Unfortunately in the edition the accents are often obviously incorrect, one word having two accents, or a series of words being incorrectly accented so as to show that an error in printing must have taken place. The MSS. also, as often, are carelessly and inaccurately accented, and it is therefore not possible to lay stress on the accentuation of any rare words, especially compounds. The matter is of little consequence, however, as the total number of accented words is small, and nearly all, save a few compound words, are recorded in well-accented texts.

It may here be mentioned that I have, wherever necessary, restored correct spellings, e.g. pattram, not patram, and have, in accordance with the normal practice of the MSS., omitted visarga before a sibilant followed by a hard consonant. In the case of ch I have never inserted the c, but in deference to the ordinary practice I have always written tad dhi, not tad hi, and, of course, uddhrtya for ud-hrtya. On the other written everywhere, even when cch represents an assimilated letter +ch, e.g. brhachānti, in which case cch is used in this edition. Cf., however, Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 154 sq.; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 31.

² Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 227. In Lanman's edition of Whitney's translation of the Atharvaveda ch is hand, duplication after r has been omitted, though it is usual in all the MSS., while the avagraha is inserted wherever it is properly required despite its omission in the MSS. The nasal in Pluti is represented by the ardhacandra mark. In R the ordinary anusvāra is used as is done in the MSS., but not in S.

II. The Commentaries.

The commentaries on the Aranyaka which I have used are the following:-

1. Śańkara's commentary on the Upaniṣad (II, 4-6). Śańkara's date has now, through the evidence of the Āryavidyāsudhākara and Paṭhak's researches (Journal Bombay Branch Royal Asiatic Society, XVIII, 88, 218 sq.), been definitely fixed from A. D. 788 to the middle of the ninth century. The date A. D. 820, formerly assigned to his death, must refer to the commencement of his labours. This commentary has been repeatedly printed, best in the Ānandāśrama series, Poona, 1889.

2. Śańkara's commentary on Book II, the first part of the Mahaitareyopaniṣad. This is only available in the MSS. P and X, neither of which presents an accurate text. In the Adhyāyas 4-6, it is, of course, identical with (1). Fortunately the analogy of Sāyaṇa's commentary on Adhyāyas 4-6 and comparison of the two commentaries on Adhyāyas 1-3 establish the fact that Sāyana followed Śańkara with considerable fidelity.

3. Śańkara's commentary on Book III, the Samhitopanisad. This is only available in the MS. X, but is followed by Sāyaṇa.

4. Ānandatīrtha's super-commentary on Śańkara's commentary on the Upaniṣad. Ānandatīrtha is said to have died in A.D. 1198, and to have been a pontiff of the Mādhva sect (Bhandarkar, Report on the Search for Sanskrit Manuscripts, 1882, 1883, pp. 18, 103). The date has recently been questioned by Harikṛṣṇa Śāstrin (Epigr. Ind., VI, 261), who prefers to date him from A.D. 1238-1317, on epigraphic evidence of considerable weight. This commentary has frequently been printed, best in the Ānandāśrama series. As has been mentioned above, in several MSS. the commentary is attributed to Abhinavanārāyaṇendra, who in one of the MSS. in the Bodleian Library (Catalogue, No. 977) is thus described: iti śrīmatkaivalyeṇdrasarasvatīpūjyapādaśiṣyaśrīmatjñāneṃdrasarasvatīpūjyapādaśiṣyaśrīmadabhinavanārāyaṇeṇdrasarasvatīviracitāyām Aitareyabhāṣyaṭīkāyām | There can be little doubt but that we must assume Ānandatīrtha's real name to have been Abhinavanārāyanendra Sarasvatī, especially as he is indifferently called Ānandatīrtha, Ānandagiri, or Ānandajñāna, the name he probably took as pontiff.¹ Cf. also No. 1010 (3) in the Catalogue, where he is called Nārāyaṇendra Sarasvatī.

5. Viśveśvaratīrtha's super-commentary on Anandatīrtha's commentary on Books II and III. This is only available in the MSS. H and O, and no MSS. of the commentary itself appear to be extant. Ānandatīrtha, who is called bhagavatpādācārya, must, I think, be identical with the Anandatīrtha above mentioned, and must have written two different works in connexion with the Āranyaka, first the super-commentary on Śankara's commentary, and second an independent commentary on the Aranyaka, in which he interprets it in a Vaisnava sense. Max Müller (S. B. E., I, xcviii) appears to doubt this identity, but it must be remembered that Anandatīrtha was a Mādhva and so not unlikely to be disposed to adopt a Vaisnava interpretation, and that there is nothing rare in Indian literary history in finding an author ready to comment on both sides of a question. Compare the case of Vācaspatimiśra,2 who wrote commentaries on the works of all the philosophical schools save one. Further the interpretation of Śańkara had always to contend against that of Rāmānuja,3 and it was by no means unnatural for a scholar like Anandatirtha to set forth both views, the Vaisnava interpretation representing his own.

Viśveśvaratīrtha appears to have been the pupil of Ānandatīrtha, and to have written this work in the lifetime of his master, as is indicated by verse 3 of the introduction: Aitareyopaniṣado vyākurmo bhāṣyam uttamam i śrīmadānaṃdatīrthāryān natvā tatprītikāmukāḥ 3 1 It is worth noting that Jayatīrtha, the successor of Ānandatīrtha, similarly wrote a super-commentary on Ānandatīrtha's commentary on the Praśna Upaniṣad, and that that commentary is distinct from Ānandatīrtha's super-commentary on the commentary of Śaṅkara on that Upaniṣad. The same remark 5 applies to Ānandatīrtha's commentary on the Iśāvāsya Upaniṣad and to his super-commentary on the commentary of Śaṅkara on that Upaniṣad. Viśveśvara was evidently closely connected with Ānandatīrtha, as a MS. of Ānandatīrtha's super-commentary on Śańkara's commentary on the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad of the seventeenth century is described by a later hand as Viśveśvarānandatīrthamaṭhastham (Bendall, Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts in the British Museum, p. 15). Bendall, l.c., refers to a commentary by Viśveśvaratīrtha on the super-commentary of Ānandatīrtha on the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, but the evidence cited above leaves little doubt but that the commentary of Viśveśvaratīrtha is on an independent commentary by Ānandatīrtha and not on his super-commentary. The exact locality of this Maṭh is unknown, but Jayatīrtha, it may be noted, was a native of Maṅgalaveḍheṃ near Paṇḍharpur.

6. Sāyana's commentary on the whole Āranyaka. Besides the edition of Rājendralāla Mitra and that in the Ānandāśrama series, I have used MSS. C, I, and W. There are many minor variants in the text, but there is no trace of any double recension. In the Anandaśrama edition of the Upanisad the commentary is attributed to śrīmatparamahamsaparivrājakācāryavidyāranyamuni. This, as Klemm has shown in the Gurupūjākaumudī, is the title of Mādhava, the brother of Sāyana, and not of Sāyana. This attribution to Mādhava is an error; Sāyaṇa, in the preface, tells us distinctly that the work is his: tatkatākṣena tadrūpam dadhad Bukkamahīpatih I ādišat Sāyanācāryam vedārthasya prakāśane | 3 | In all probability it was genuinely composed by Sāyana himself; it agrees with his Rgveda commentary in general, and was written after the commentary on the Aitareya Brāhmana. It was written probably under Bukka I, who was certainly reigning in A.D. 1354. That Sāyaṇa died in A.D. 1387 is probably an error, though that may be the year of Mādhava's death. His commentary throughout is dependent on that of Śańkara on Books II and III, as he admits in the introduction to Book II.

Śańkara, Ānandatīrtha in his super-commentary, and Sāyaṇa all interpret the Upaniṣads in II and III in the light of the Vedānta. On the other hand, Viśveśvara in the super-commentary follows Ānandatīrtha in giving a Vaiṣṇava interpretation. I have not followed either view. The Upaniṣads can only be satisfactorily explained by regarding them as what they are, early attempts at philosophy, and by refraining from reading later ideas into them. The interpretations given by the commentators have, however, a value as showing the development of philosophical ideas, and I have therefore whenever desirable referred to them. In several cases too they afford great assistance in the interpretation of the text.

It may here be mentioned that most of Book II, that is, Adhyāyas I-3, 4, and Adhyāyas 4-6, are translated by the author of the Persian translation which was made for Dārā Shukoh between A.D. 1656-1657, and retranslated into Latin in 1801, 1802, by Anquetil Duperron. This translation, besides being much less intelligible than the original, adds, as far as I can see, nothing substantial to our knowledge.

The commentary of Sankara establishes for the ninth century the text of the second and third books of the Āraṇyaka as we now have them. Whether there were variants in his time we cannot determine with certainty, as his text has clearly alone formed the subject of study. The other commentators all depend to some degree on him. Ānandatīrtha, in his own work, uses him, and Sāyaṇa uses both him and Ānandatīrtha. The evidence for the time before Śaṅkara is wanting. The later Upaniṣads borrowed their doctrines and phrases from works which were more developed and displayed more literary pretensions than the Aitareya, while the secular literature makes no direct quotations. All we can say is that the Mokṣadharma of the Mahābhārata and Bādarāyaṇa in his Brahma Sūtra (III, 3, 16, 17) probably used the Aitareya Upaniṣad,² but the next evidence is again Śaṅkara's commentary on those Sūtras.

Though strict proof beyond Śańkara cannot be attempted, there is no reason to doubt the integrity of the text of these books. They are not, in subject-matter, open to easy interpolation, and in all probability in their present form they fairly represent their original shape in the time of Śaunaka.

Nor is there any special reason to assume alteration in the verses which make up Book IV, for which there is considerable independent evidence.

For Books I and V we have no earlier authority than Sāyaṇa. But he appears to have had before him a fixed text, and the various readings which he gives are practically limited to the last chapter of V, 3, the contents of which certainly lay it open to interpolation: yet Sāyaṇa of course was not the first to write a commentary on the Āraṇyaka. He expressly refers, on V, I, I, to differences of interpretation, as to whether tīvrasyābhivayasaḥ (RV., X, 160, I) meant four verses or one only according to rule, and on V, 3, 3, he refers to differences both of reading and of opinion. We are therefore justified in regarding the text he gives as practically a textus receptus by the fourteenth century A.D.

Whether or not it is original cannot be answered with certainty. Amongst others, Hillebrandt (Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, pp. x-xv) considers that the text of the Sūtras is much altered from the original, but in the case of the Āraṇyaka I, or V, it would be difficult to prove this doctrine, inasmuch as the Āraṇyaka seldom presents the truly remarkable variety of rules and exceptions shown by the present text of Śāṅkhāyana. Further the text of the first book assists in checking the fifth book, and appears throughout to agree with it. Again in the former case, where the work is a true Āraṇyaka, the idea of later alteration is less probable than in a formless work like the fifth book, which is practically a Sūtra itself. Moreover, although a certain fluidity of text may be admitted in the Sūtras, the extent of such fluidity appears to be greatly exaggerated by Hillebrandt.

III. The divisions of the Aranyaka and their date.

There is some uncertainty as to the exact meaning of the word Āraṇyaka. Sāyaṇa gives two somewhat different interpretations of it. In the preface to the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (Aufrecht's edition, p. iii) he describes it as Āraṇyavratarūpam brāhmaṇam; in the preface to the Āraṇyaka itself he says: Aitareyabrāhmaṇe 'sti kāṇḍam Āraṇyakā-bhidham | araṇya eva pāṭhyatvād āraṇyakam itūryate || 5 || and: sattra-prakarane 'nuktir araṇyādhyayaṇāya hi | mahāvratasya tasyātra hautraṃ karma vivicyate || 8 || The latter view is energetically supported by Oldenberg,¹ and is adopted by Macdonell.² The former has the support of Weber,³ and Deussen ⁴ argues in favour of it on the ground that the aim of the Āraṇyakas was to supply a substitute for the sacrificial rites to be used by Vānaprasthas. This view, however, is rather far-fetched. The Āraṇyaka seems originally to have existed to give secret explanations of the ritual, and to have presupposed that the ritual was still in use and was known. No doubt the tendency was for the secret explanation to grow independent of the ritual until the stage is reached where the Āraṇyaka passes into the Upaniṣad, and contemporaneously the life of the Hindu is differentiated into the four Aśramas. But originally an Āraṇyaka must have merely meant a book of instruction to be given in the forest.

It is not now possible to decide exactly why the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa does not deal with the Mahāvrata rite. In Sāyaṇa's time it was already held that the author of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa was also the author of the Aitareya Aranyaka, Books I-III,1 and Sankara may conceivably have held the same view, as he calls the Upanisad the Bahvrcabrāhmaņa Upaniṣad.2 It is, however, impossible to accept this version as correct. It is probable enough that Mahidasa Aitareya is the editor or arranger of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, as Aufrecht thought. It is true that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa is not in all probability the work of one hand or period,3 but it must have been at some early date welded into one work, and tradition may fairly be considered to have given us the name of the man who did it. We know from Pāṇini, V, 1, 62, that in his day Brāhmaṇas of thirty and forty Adhyāyas existed, and Weber's 4 conjecture that the reference is to the Śānkhāyana and Aitareya Brāhmanas is almost certainly correct. But though we can fairly ascribe to Mahidasa the arrangement of the Brāhmaṇa, it would be incorrect to ascribe to him even the first three books of the Aranyaka, since in them he is cited as a teacher. He is named expressly in II, 1, 8 and 3, 7, and is clearly referred to in I, 1, 1. This must be taken as decisive 5 against his authorship of these books of the Aitareya Aranyaka, though it is clear that some of his views are expressed in them. We may perhaps suppose that Mahidasa, besides editing the Brāhmana, was a philosopher of some distinction, since otherwise his name would hardly have come down to us. Of his life we know nothing. Sayana tells us a legend of his being the son of Macdonell, Brhaddevatā, I, xxiii, for a similar case. See also, however, Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 322 sq., according to whom Patañjali appears to allude to himself in the third person. This, however, is less likely to be the case at so early a date as that of Mahidāsa, though later, it is not rare.

So Rājendralāla, Introduction, p. 8; Weber, Indian Literature, p. 48; and cf.

Itarā: Ānandatīrtha, in his original commentary, describes him as the son of Viśāla and an incarnation of Nārāyana. Perhaps there is some truth in the reference to him in the Chandogya Upanisad, III, 16, 7, and the Jaiminīya Upanisad Brāhmana, IV, 2, where he is said to have lived for 116 years; at any rate it shows that he was a famous sage and probably a real person.1

The three books attributed to him can on internal evidence be divided into four parts. The first book consists of an explanation of the Mahāvrata from a ritualistic and allegorical point of view. It describes the different Sastras of the morning, midday and evening libations of the Mahāvrata day of the Gavāmayana, a theme touched on in the Aitareva Brāhmana, III, 1-38, IV, 14, but indulges in further allegorical play of ideas. On the whole it bears a close resemblance in contents and style to the Brāhmana, but it is doubtless more recent in date, or it would have been included in the Brāhmana. Sāyaṇa in his introduction to Book V calls it an apauruseyam brāhmanam, and Sankara calls the Upanișad similarly Bahvrcabrāhmana Upanisad.

The second book consists of two distinct parts. The first, comprising Adhyāyas 1-3, deals with the allegorical signification of the Uktha, that is the Niskevalya Sastra, three sets of eighty verses, which was the midday Sastra of the Mahavrata, as being Prana or Purusa. It is not directly connected with Book I, and it is doubtless later than it. The second part comprises Adhyāyas 4-6, and is the Upanisad par excellence. It is probably later than part one.

The third book treats of the mystic meaning of the various forms of the text of the Samhita, the nirbhuja, pratrnna and ubhavamantarena. and of the vowels, semivowels and consonants. It quotes Mandukeya and Sākalya among others, and makes use of the above terms to describe the samhitā, pada, and krama pāthas of the Samhitā. These are so far signs of late origin, but at the same time the treatment of the subjectmatter is at a much earlier stage than that reached by Yaska or the authors of the Prātiśākhyas. It will be seen later that its philosophical view is more advanced than that of the Upanisad proper, and it can probably be dated about the sixth cent. B.C. This result is important,

III, 4, 4, throw no light on him, and are probably late; cf. Hopkins, Great Epic as it gives us a lower date for the rest of the earlier books of the Upanisad.

The fourth book consists solely of the Mahānāmnī verses. The presence of these verses is explained by Sāyaṇa on the ground that they must be studied in the forest. Their use is set forth by Āśvalāyana in his Śrauta Sūtra, VII, 12, 10, where he says that on the fifth day of the six day Prsthya rite after the Marutvatīya Śastra, when the Niskevalya Śastra is being performed, 'if the Udgatrs make the Śakvarasaman the Prstha Stotra, then the nine verses called the Mahānāmnīs and certain purīṣapadas, to fill up the lines, are to be used.' Tradition ascribes this Āraņyaka to Āśvalāyana. Şadguruśisya, in his account of the works of Aśvalāyana, says1: dvādaśādhyāyakam sūtram catuskam grhyam eva ca caturthāranyakam ceti hy Āśvalāyanasūtrakam I This view, however, has been questioned in connexion with the authorship of the fifth book.

The fifth book consists mainly of a description in a Satra style of the Niskevalya Śastra, the great Śastra of the midday libation of the Mahāvrata. It forms a sort of complement to Book I, which is the Brāhmaṇa as contrasted with the Sūtra. The natural conclusion is, therefore, that Āśvalāyana wrote Book V. The arguments 2 in favour of this view are: (1) Book IV contains merely a collection of Mahānāmnī verses; it is not a Sūtra at all, and therefore Āśvalāyana cannot have been its author. The reply is perhaps that the verses may have been collected by Aśvalāyana and put into the Āranyaka in order that they might be available for being commented on in the Sutra, and that it would therefore be natural to ascribe the Āraņyaka to Āśvalāyana. It is a sort of Āśvalāyana Samhitā like the Śākala Samhitā. (2) It is argued3 that Sayana in the introduction to Āranyaka V, where he expressly ascribes that Āranyaka as contrasted with I to a Rsi, uses the words: tasmād athaitasya4 samāmnāyasyetyādidvādašādhyāyavan mahāvratasya pañcavimsatim ityādi pañcamāranyakam sūtram eva I This would no doubt be quite natural if Āśvalāyana were the author of the Āranyaka, but it is at least equally natural if Śaunaka was. (3) Colebrooke (Essays, I, 307) says, with reference to a Sūtra of the Pūrva

i.e. Śrauta Sūtra, I, I, I.

Mīmāmsā: 'It is, however, acknowledged that a mistake may be made, and the work of a human author may be erroneously received as a part of the sacred book by those who are unacquainted with its true origin. An instance occurs among those who use the Bahvrich, a śákhá of the Rigveda, by whom a ritual of Aśwaláyana has been admitted, under the title of a fifth Aranyaka, as a part of the Rigveda.' Rajendralala was unable to discover the source of this statement, and it seems probably to be a confusion of Aśvalāyana with Śaunaka; or it may rather confirm the view of Sadguruśisya, since IV could be confused with the Rgveda, but not V. (4) The MSS. F and G end, iti Aśvalāyanoktam Aranyakam samāptam | This, however, is a matter of no moment, and probably does not even preserve a tradition of Āśvalāyana's authorship of Āranyaka IV. These two MSS., which are recent and inaccurate copies, and are probably ultimately derived from one original, contain collections of works attributed to Aśvalāyana, and there is nothing surprising in the fact that they attribute the authorship of the Āranyaka to him. (5) Much more important is the fact, which forms Oldenberg's second argument, that in his commentary on the Samaveda Sayana refers (I, p. 19) the authorship to Aśvalāyana. But against this solitary reference 1 must be set the facts noted below. (6) There is undoubtedly great similarity between the two works, Āranyaka V, and the Śrauta Sūtra. I think it certain that the author of the Āranyaka knew the Sūtra. For example, in V, 2, 2, eşa brahmeti tisrah stands without explanation, but as Sāyana points out the verses referred to are given in Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 2, 6. Again in V, 3, 2, occurs uktam vasatkārānumantranam, which is not only a phrase used by Āśvalāyana himself, but is a clear reference to Aśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, I, 5, 17.2 Further the vocabulary and syntax of the works is identical; e.g. the use of na vā in Āranyaka, V, 3, 1, as often in the Sūtra, e.g. VI, 5, 22; or the phrase api nidarśanāyodāharisyāmah, or the word ekapātinyah. These facts, however, which were not known to Oldenberg, merely prove that clearly some confusion between the Sūtra and Āraṇyaka, which discredits the evidence.

² Cf. also V, 1, 5, ukthavīryāņi is not explained, but is in the Sūtra.

Saunaka knew and used Āśvalāyana's work, which indeed was only natural, since the Sūtra deals with the Agnistoma, the prakṛti of the Mahāvrata. It will be seen that this agrees perfectly with the native tradition handed down by Sadguruśisya.

There is therefore no sound evidence to ascribe the fifth Āraṇyaka to Āśvalāyana, and Ṣaḍguruśiṣya's attribution to him of the fourth Āraṇyaka remains the most probable.1 For Saunaka's authorship of the fifth Āranyaka we have the distinct and repeated authority of Sāyaṇa. Colebrooke (Essays, I, 46) first pointed out that Āranyaka V, 2, 5, is cited by Sāyaṇa on the Rgveda, I, 8, 1, as Śaunaka's, and Max Müller (S.B.E., I, xcv) says that 'Sayana when quoting in his commentary on the Rig-veda from the last books,2 constantly calls it a Sūtra of Saunaka.' Further, in his commentary on the Aitareya Āraṇyaka he repeatedly refers to Saunaka as the author of the fifth book. E. g. on I, 4, 1, he says: ata eva pañcame Saunakenodāhrtāh | and again: tāś ca pañcame Saunakena śākhāntaram āśritya pathitāh 1 See also Sāyana 3 on I, 4, 2 (ter); 3 (bis); I, 5, 2 (quater); 3 (bis). These references beyond question show that to Sāyaṇa Saunaka was the author of the fifth Āraṇyaka. There is no conceivable reason why this work should have been ascribed to him unless it was his. Similar as the book is in language to the Śrauta Sūtra, yet it is in style less compressed and more intelligible than that work. We have certain evidence that Saunaka did compose similar works, for, in the introduction to his commentary on the Sarvanukramanī of Kātyāyana, Şadguruśisya expressly records that he composed a Śrauta Sūtra which he destroyed when his pupil Āśvalāyana had written his Sūtra. This tradition would explain the close knowledge of Āśvalāyana's Śrauta Sūtra, which, as we have seen above, the writer of this book undoubtedly possessed. No doubt it is possible that he may eventually have been credited with the authorship of one of the works of his pupil, the Sāmaveda commentary is probably not the work of Sāyaṇa. His pupils no doubt did much of his so-called work. Cf. the case of the Atharvaveda, Whitney, p. lxviii. The fact that passages in the Sāmaveda commentary are identical with those in the Rgveda commentary is of course quite consistent with this view.

² Book must be meant. Āraņyaka IV cannot be quoted.

as has been shown to be the case by Professor Macdonell in the matter of the Bṛhaddevatā, but that is a mere possibility against which tradition is certainly strong. It is impossible to argue that in Ṣaḍguru-śiṣya's eyes the term caturthāranyakam covered the fifth book also, for the two are quite distinct and cannot ever have been combined into one book. Moreover it must be remembered that a Gṛhya Sūtra by Śaunaka is referred to by Ṣaḍguruśiṣya, and appears to have been known to Hemādri in the thirteenth century.¹ So there is nothing at all improbable in the ascription of the Āraṇyaka V to Śaunaka.

Now it is possible to throw some light on Saunaka's date. The Brhaddevatā, which is attributed to him, but is certainly not his but the work of a pupil-probably not far removed in date-is posterior to Yāska and anterior to the Sarvānukramanī of Kātyāyana. Kātyāyana, who is in all probability the author of the Śrauta Sūtra and the Vājasaneyi Anukramani, is most probably anterior to Pānini, since the Sarvānukramanī shows forms earlier than Pāṇini's grammar approves (see Macdonell, Sarvānukramanī, p. viii, Brhaddevatā, I, xxii, xxiii). The argument from the use of Vedic forms is no doubt not certain, but the balance of probability is in its favour, and it has been maintained by Bühler (S. B. E., II, xl, Z. D. M. G., XL, 527 sq.) and Winternitz (Hochzeitsrituell, pp. 13 sq.) against the objections of Böhtlingk (Z. D. M. G., XXXIX, 517, XLI, 669, XLIII, 598 sq.).2 Thus it appears that Saunaka 3 must be considerably older than Pāṇini. On the other hand, we must not push him too far back, or else it would be difficult to explain how Saunaka is not cited in Pāṇini. Further, B. Liebich in his Pāṇini, ch. iii, has shown grounds for the belief that the Āśvalāyana and Śānkhāyana Grhya Sūtras are in point of language closely connected in time with Pāṇini. It does not, therefore, seem necessary to allow more than 100-150 years between Pāṇini and Śaunaka, and the time may perhaps be shorter.

Pāṇini's date unfortunately is not yet certainly fixed. There lie between him and Patañjali not only the Vārttikas of Kātyāyana, but also emendations of those Vārttikas by the Bhāradvājīyas, Saunāgas, and others and perhaps a Ślokavārttika, which certainly presupposes a considerable interval of time. Bhandarkar 1 has further adduced evidence of changes in the language and extension of geographical knowledge especially as regards the peoples and places of the south between Pāṇini, Kātyāyana, and Patañjali. Goldstücker 2 and Bhandarkar 3 have adduced evidence to prove that Patañjali was a contemporary of Pusyamitra (B. C. 178-142) and Menander (B. C. 144-120) and wrote his Mahābhāsya in or about B. C. 144-142. This result is by no means certain, because even accepting as fixed Pusyamitra and Menander's dates,4 still, in the first place the MSS. of the Mahābhāsya do not all contain the passages in which the statements relied on occur, and in the second place it is always possible that the examples occurred in the Ślokavārttika or in some other earlier source whence they were taken over bodily by Patañjali. It may even be argued that Patañjali is not earlier than the second century A.D. inasmuch as he seems to know the r vowel-sign, and according to Chinese tradition this vowel-sign was a discovery of Nāgārjuna's, and Nāgārjuna's date is possibly in the second century A.D. under Kaniska.6 The latter, however, is probably to be referred to the first century B.C., and it would be a mistake to lay much stress on this argument. The r vowel-sign may have existed in grammatical circles long ere Sanskrit inscriptions become usual. Further the Rājataranginī, I, 174, is an authority for the existence of the Mahābhāsya in the reign of Abhimanyu of Kashmir, whose date is however now quite uncertain. But whatever be Patañjali's date, there seems little doubt that the examples which point to the time of Pusyamitra and Menander must be genuine and that they prove the existence of some commentary on Pāṇini in the middle of the second century B.C. Kātyāyana is assigned by Hiuen Tsang to 300 years after the death of Buddha, which taking the Chinese reckoning of the Nirvana gives the middle of the third century B. C. as his date. This evidence is not or great weight, but it is not improbably nearly correct.1 Pāṇini cannot therefore be less than fifty years older than Kātyāyana and must at latest belong to about B. C. 300. The question arises whether this date cannot be put further back. The chief argument against doing so is the use of the word Yavanānī in Pāṇini, IV, 1, 49. Doubtless this means Greek (Ionian) writing, but it does not necessarily follow that the word dates from after the invasion of Alexander.2 Indeed the probability seems to me against this being the case. For it is certainly remarkable that Ionian should be the name given to the Greeks if first made known to India through the invasion of Alexander, whose army was certainly in no conceivable sense Ionian.3 On the other hand, the Ionian name 4 was evidently the great name in the ears of Persians, and of those subjects who were led into Greece on the expedition of Xerxes, and 5 it must be remembered that the Gandarians were part of Dareios' empire and a contingent from Gandhara, accompanied Xerxes on the Grecian expedition. If it is borne in mind that Pāṇini was a native of Gandhāra according to Hiuen Tsang, a view confirmed by the references in his grammar,6 it will not seem far fetched to consider that it was most probably from the older tradition that the name Yavanānī was derived. In this connexion reference may be made to the theory of Burnell 7 that the word lipi which occurs in Pāṇini, III, 2, 21, is borrowed from the Achaemenidean dipi, meaning an edict, a view not at all improbable, and one which supports the view here maintained that it was through the Persian conquest of Gandhara that the word Yavanani became familiar to India. Goldstücker 8 argued, indeed, that Yavanānī referred to Persian writing, but this view cannot be maintained. But Weber himself admits 1 that perhaps the name Yavana may have become known before Alexander's time through the Persian war in which the Indians served as auxiliaries. There is also a striking piece of evidence that Greek writing was known in North India before Alexander's time; coins have been found with Greek inscriptions of pre-Alexandrian date.² Greek engraved gems, of a pattern much earlier than Macedonian times, have been found in the Punjab, and the caduceus was known in India by B.C. 325 at latest.³

I do not therefore consider that the evidence of Yavanānī is conclusive as to Pānini's date, though it certainly shows that he cannot be earlier than the fifth century. Weber 4 also argues that his use of letters as numerals is a proof of Greek influence, but it may be equally well a proof of Semitic influence or a mere independent invention, as indeed seems most likely from the fact that the use remains isolated. Weber's other arguments, e.g. that from the date of Apiśali, rest on too slight a basis to bear serious examination. On the other hand, it is not possible to follow Goldstücker 6 in referring Pāṇini to a date before Buddha on the strength of nirvano'vāte, VIII, 2, 50, because Pāṇini probably deliberately ignored Buddhism 7 or perhaps lived when the influence of Buddhism had yet to become great. Bhandarkar 8 refers Pānini to the beginning of the seventh century B. C., dating Katyayana in accordance with the legend of the Kathāsaritsāgara in the fourth century B. C., but he does not meet the difficulty as to Yavanānī, though his proposed date would in some ways suit the history of Sanskrit literature. On the whole I incline to fix Pāṇini's date at about 400-350 B.C. Böhtlingk, in the introduction to his edition, fixed the date at about 350 B.C., and Lassen assigned Pāṇini to 330 B. C.

If this date is accepted for Pāṇini it is necessary to throw the older Kātyāyana, and therefore Śaunaka, a little further back. Śaunaka may perhaps be assigned to about 450 B.C. or possibly even to 500 B.C., which would then represent the probable date of Book V of the Āraṇyaka, while the collection of Book IV would be a product of the same period, since the evidence goes to show that Āśvalāyana and he worked contemporaneously.

Now it will hardly be doubted that Books I-III are decidedly older than Books IV, V. This is clearly reflected in the native tradition preserved in Sāyaṇa's distinction between the apauruṣeyam character of the first three books and their attribution to the author of the Brāhmaṇa. It is not possible to say how much this means. But it is at least probable that the latest part of the first three books, Āraṇyaka III, belongs to not later than 550 B.C. and the earlier parts may be dated between 700 B.C. and 550 B.C. It will be seen that there is probably a considerable difference in time between the first book, and the two sections of the second, so that 700 B.C. is not too early a date for Book I.

I do not think that these results need be regarded as in any way surprising. The Brāhmaṇa period, according to Max Müller, probably extended from about 800-600 B.C., and this view has the weighty support of Prof. Macdonell.¹ The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa cannot be far removed in date from the first book of the Āraṇyaka, but the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa, which contains many borrowings from it, is in the opinion of Aufrecht² known to Yāska. Now Yāska is certainly anterior to Śaunaka and Pāṇini, for he is cited in the Rgvedaprātiśākhya,³ the Bṛhaddevatā, and is apparently known to the Aṣṭādhyāyī. His date cannot, therefore, be reasonably placed later than 500 B.C. and it may go back to 550 B.C. This date is confirmed by the character of the Nirukta which certainly is anterior to either the Prātiśākhyas or Pāṇini. If, therefore, the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa was known to him,⁴ even that late work must be dated about 1904, p. 442) adopts 350 B.C. If a late date is adopted, then the question of finding a place for the Bhāṣā becomes more and more difficult, cf. J. R. A. S., 1904, pp. 435 sq., 457 sq., and (for the date of the Epic) ibid., 1906, p. 2; 1907, p. 682.

⁴ The argument is not certain. It is based on the fact that Yāska, Nirukta, VIII, 22, quotes Aitareya Brāhmaņa, III, 600 B.C., and the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa must be earlier, even apparently including the last ten chapters which are later than the earliest portions of the Brāhmaṇa. Thus the Brāhmaṇa cannot well be placed later than 800-700 B.C. and the Āraṇyaka I is not to be dated much later.

Further the early date of even the Upanisad portions in Books II and III appears to be only what is to be expected from the history of philosophy. The Upanisad doctrines there set forth are essentially earlier than the doctrines of the earliest Buddhism, which belong to the fifth century B. C., and we shall see that the Upanisads probably belong to the earliest of the extant works (Sect. V). Moreover, Bühler (S. B. E., II, xxvii) has pointed out that Āpastamba (? 300 B. C.) knows the Vedānta school, which presupposes the full development of the Upanisad, while Gautama (before 400 B. C.) knows even the Atharvasiras Upanisad, which is cited also in the Moksadharma (MBh., XII, 12864).

IV. The Mahavrata ceremony, and the relation of Aitareya Āraņyaka I and V to the Śaikhāyana Āraṇyaka.

Sāyaṇa in his commentary on V, I, I, tells us that there are three forms of the Mahāvrata ceremony, according as it is a one day rite, or a part of an ahīna, or the second last day of a Sattra. But he says that the Sattra form is the original or prakṛti of the others which are vikṛtis. The Sattra differs from the ahīna in that it requires that all engaged

8. as: yasyai devatāyai havir grhītam syāt tām manasā dhyāyed vasatkarisyan. Now the manasa here does not appear in the original, but only in Gopatha Brahmana, VIII, 4: tām manasā dhyāyan vaşaţkuryād. It is hardly open to doubt that the form found in the Gopatha passage must have been before Yaska's mind. For though it is not unnatural for the author of the Gopatha, or some other Brāhmaṇa, who borrowed the main body of his work from other sources, to alter his original by inserting manasa, yet it is improbable that Yāska would have made the quotation incorrectly, but for the existence of the alternative version. The instance does not amount to proof, and on the other hand, it may be argued, with Bloomfield (J.A.O.S., XI, 375 sq.; XIX, ii, I-11), that the Gopatha borrows from the Vaitāna Sūtra and so is very late. But even assuming that the borrowing from the Vaitāna is real, yet it is more than possible that the text of the Gopatha, a very unimportant work, has suffered interpolation, or perhaps the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa as we now have it is a working over of an earlier Brāhmaṇa which itself borrowed from the Aitareya. But in any case the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa is unquestionably much older than Yāska.

In the Sattra form the Mahavrata is the last day but one of the Gavāmayana Sattra which lasts the whole year, and no doubt represents in some way the year. Hillebrandt,1 who has most carefully examined this question, concludes that considerable alterations in course of time took place in this ceremony. As it stood later and as it is represented in most of our texts, the two important days were the middle day, the Visuvat, and the last day but one, the Mahāvrata, corresponding to the Summer and Winter solstices respectively. But the Tandya Brahmana,2 certainly an old work, refers to a view, which it disputes, that the Mahāvrata belongs to the middle of the year, and it is clear that Indra is the god par excellence of the Mahāvrata. It may be argued with some plausibility that Indra belongs to the beginning of the rainy season, or the middle of June, and certainly the rites of the Mahāvrata show traces of a popular origin, like the celebrations of the Johannistag in Germany.3 It is not impossible that at one time the Mahāvrata was the first day of the year, when, as the Aitareya Aranyaka, I, 1, 1, has it, Indra slew Vrtra and became great, and Hillebrandt adduces as evidence of this the month Tisya as compared with the Avestan Tištrva, Sirius.

Once then, in any case, the Mahāvrata may well have been a day of popular festival and worship. The Viṣuvat day receives scant treatment in the texts; possibly, as Dr. Friedländer 4 suggests, because the ceremonies connected with that day were transferred 5 to the Mahāvrata to help to wipe out the popular character of that rite. It is, however, simple to suppose that in the usual manner the Brāhmaṇas seized upon the popular Mahāvrata and made it their own by an accumulation of purely technical ritual. At any rate they have left clear traces of the original nature of the ceremony. Warriors, fully armed, pierce with arrows the outstretched skin of a barren cow, which is probably a rain spell.¹ An Ārya and a Śūdra strive on a round hide, the Āryan proving victorious, which may be interpreted as a spell to produce sunshine. Servant maids encircle the Mārjālīya fire with jugs of water on their heads either thrice or until the Mahāvrata Stotra is finished, evidently as a magic rite to procure sunlight and rain for the crops. Sympathetic magic is shown in the effort to produce fertility by maithuna. Music is played and obscene language used, both possibly with the same object to terrify away hostile demons, especially as the form of music affected is drumming.

But from the point of view of the Aranyaka these old customs are meaningless survivals. The importance of the sacrifice is purely in the ritual as regards the use of the hymns. The Mahāvrata is one of the forms of the Agnistoma,2 and is therefore divided into three parts, the morning, midday, and evening pressing of the Soma. Each pressing has an equal number of Stotras and Sastras. The morning pressing has the Bahispavamana and four Ajya Stotras, and the Ajya and Prauga Sastras of the Hotr and three Ajya Sastras of the Hotrakas. The midday pressing has the Mādhyandinapavamāna and four Pṛṣṭha Stotras, and the Marutvatīya and Niskevalya Sastras of the Hotr and three Niskevalya Sastras of the Hotrakas. The evening pressing has the Arbhavapavamāna Stotra and the Agnistoma Sāman, together with the Vaiśvadeva and Agnimaruta Sastras of the Hotr.3 But in the Mahavrata the morning and evening ritual is mainly derived 4 from the prakrti, that is ultimately the Agnistoma, and it is the Pretha Stotra called the Mahavrata Sāman and the corresponding Niskevalaya Sastra or Mahaduktha which form the important part of the liturgy.

² See for it Hillebrandt, op. cit., pp. 124 sq. It is a prakṛṭi of all the more elaborate forms, and these again are related as prakṛṭi and vikṛṭi in order. So the Visuvat is a prakṛti of the Mahāvrata as is the Visvajit.

⁴ This is the explanation of such passages as I, 1, 3 ad fin.: tad vaikāhikam rūpasamrddham I

The most characteristic of the features of the Mahāvrata Sāman and the Mahaduktha is their division according to the form of a bird. The origin of the idea appears to be the theory which appears in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa¹ of the bird-like shape of the fire-altar. Similarly, the Mahāvrata Sāman has five parts corresponding to the body, head, right wing, left wing, and tail. The Mahaduktha is not so simple, the parts correspond to the body, neck, head, vertebrae, wings, tail, and stomach, but there is a general correspondence with the Sāman, the first verses of each part appearing in the Sāman. Besides these parts there are also three groups each of eighty treas, one in gāyatrī, one in uṣṇih, and one in brhatī metre, which form the food of the bird.

These collections of verses make up a very considerable body of hymns, and it appears from the Śānkhāyana Grhya Sūtra 2 that to a certain extent the collection came to be regarded as a new Samhitā through the rearrangement of the verses, much as the Samaveda differs mainly in arrangement from the Rgveda, so that the study of the Āranyaka verses (not the Āranyaka itself) was taken up immediately after that of the Samhitā. This is at least the view of Oldenberg,3 and it is far from improbable. This new Samhitā was regarded as extremely sacred; perhaps the reason was that the likeness of the fire-altar to the shape of a bird was the discovery of some theologian who, in the true spirit later seen in the Upanisads, was most anxious not to permit his mystic discovery to become common property. This at least seems to me a legitimate inference from the fact that the Satapatha Brāhmana expressly enjoins secrecy for the three samudrāh, the Agnicavana, the Mahāvrata Sāman, and the Mahaduktha; and the Aitareya Āranyaka 4 and the Śānkhāyana Āranyaka 5 devote chapters to declarations of the secret nature of their subject-matter. Thus a rite originally popular became, through theological speculation, one of the most secret doctrines of the Brāhmanas.

As a result of this secrecy the description of the activity of the Hotr in the Mahāvrata rite is not recorded in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa or in the Śāṅkhāyana Brāhmaṇa, but in the Aitareya Āraṇyaka 6 and the Śānkhāyana Āranyaka.1 When as time went on there was felt the need of a formal exposition of the rite as a whole, since in neither the Aitareya nor the Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka is the account of the rite intelligible as it stands, in the case of the Aitareya, as we have seen, a Sūtra-like book 2 was added by Saunaka, but in that very book 3 the secret nature of the doctrine is reiterated with the greatest force. The case of the Sankhāyana Āranyaka is different. No addition was made to the Āranyaka, so far as we now know it,4 but two books, XVII and XVIII, were added to the Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra. These books were not commented on by Anartiya, but by Govinda, and they cannot be regarded as forming part of the Sūtra at his date. In fact, we have conclusive proof that to Anartiya the eighteenth, and doubtless also the seventeenth book, was an Āranyaka. For in commenting on Śrauta Sūtra, XIII, 14, 7, he quotes XVIII, 24, 30, as an Āranyaka. This fact, the full significance of which does not seem to have been realized by Hillebrandt, supports his view, which was based on other considerations, that the two books are not more recent 5 than the rest of the Sūtra. On the contrary it is at least as probable that they are older,6 but the important consideration is that the Sūtra treatment of the material was still considered too secret for insertion in the Sūtra. We must therefore recognize that at one time the Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, in addition to the Brāhmana treatment in Books I and II, contained a Sūtra treatment like Book V of the Aitareya. As Books III-VI of the Śānkhāyana contain the Kausītaki Upanisad, and correspond to Book II of the Aitareya, and Books VII and VIII of the Śāńkhāyana correspond in some measure to Book III7 of the Aitareya, it is not surprising that the Śrauta Sūtra treatment of the so-called Books XVII and XVIII should have formed part of the Aranyaka.

On the other hand it was not felt that any special sanctity or mystery attached to the Udgātṛ or Adhvaryu's functions. These are described

It is worthy of note that in his explanation of the ritual Sāyaṇa freely quotes and follows Āpastamba, as he does sometimes in his commentary on the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa.

The date of the Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, like that of the Aitareya, presents considerable difficulty. As the Aitareya Āranyaka with the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, the Śānkhāyana is closely connected with the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa. Vināyaka, the commentator on the Brāhmaṇa, actually, in one place,² reckons the Books I and II as XXXI and XXXII of the Brāhmaṇa, and there are clear references to the Brāhmaṇa in the Āraṇyaka, while several passages agree even verbally.³ But though these signs are so far clear evidence that the connexion is close, they tend also to show that the Āraṇyaka is dependent on the Brāhmaṇa, and this conclusion is strengthened by the fact that, at the time of Pāṇini (about 350 B.C.), there seems to have been known to him a Brāhmaṇa of thirty chapters, which Weber must be right in considering to be the Kauṣītaki. Therefore the Āraṇyaka must stand to the Kauṣītaki in precisely the same relation as the Aitareya Āraṇyaka to its Brāhmana.

Now the relation in time of the Aitareya and Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇas is still open to discussion. The evidence seems to me, however, decidedly in favour of the priority of the Aitareya, though that priority is not in all probability a great one. (1) The Śāṅkhāyana is a more elaborate work than the Aitareya; it is completed by treating of the Haviryajña as well as of the Soma sacrifice proper, giving the Agnyādhāna, the Darśapūrṇamāsa, and the Cāturmāsyāni. It is more probable that the less systematic Aitareya is the earlier. (2) The Śāṅkhāyana seems, as Weber 1 points out, to represent a fusion of the views of Paingya and Kausītaki, whereas these names are unknown to the Aitareva,2 which appears to represent a less dependent point of view and to show more originality. (3) In point of view of style the Śānkhāvana is much more condensed than the Aitareva. This fact is open to various interpretations. but on the whole the most probable theory is that the older a work. the less condensed its style, though later again the style becomes freer. This argument, which is applied to the Sarvānukramanī and Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra by Prof. Macdonell,3 appears to me to hold equally well in the case of the Brāhmanas. (4) The use of unaugmented tenses is more frequent in the Aitareva than in the Sankhavana.4 In favour of the priority of the Sānkhāyana the only prima facie piece of evidence 5 appears to be the argument from the use of the perfect as a narrative tense. Now I do not dispute the value of this criterion, as the evidence appears to me adequate that, so far as Vedic is concerned, the history of the perfect is that of an originally present force, such as persisted in words like āha or veda, to a narrative use. The perfect in narrative is indeed known to the oldest language, but the growth of the narrative use is decidedly a mark of lateness, and is accepted as such by Wackernagel.6 But the facts of the case are that in the first thirty Adhyavas of the Aitareya the use of the perfect is usually that of a present, and that it is only in the last ten that the perfect is used for narrative. whereas in the Kausītaki Brāhmana there are nearly three perfects for every five imperfects. The narrative of Sunahsepa in Book XXXIII is carried on in perfects, but it is universally admitted that the last ten Adhyāyas are a later addition, since (1) they have no corresponding matter in the Śāńkhāyana, while the Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra has a version of the Sunahsepa legend, and (2) their subject-matter is quite unconnected 1 with the functions of the Hotr at the Jyotistoma rite, which is the main topic of the Aitareya. Deductions from the style of the Aitareya Brāhmana taken as a whole are therefore very risky, and Aufrecht 2 has, conclusively it seems to me, shown that the Taittirīya Samhitā in Book VI, which deals with the Soma sacrifice, follows the Aitareya Brāhmana, which has thus a just claim to rank as one of the earliest Brāhmanas, as it is of course indisputably older than the Satapatha Brāhmana and the Taittirīya Brāhmana, the latter being admittedly later than the Samhitā, which it was clearly composed in order to complete. It is worth noticing that that Brāhmana contains in Book III the description of the new and full moon sacrifices which is omitted in the Samhita,3 and it may be considered that this helps to show that the Śānkhāyana Brāhmana in which these rites are treated is later than the Aitareya.

On the other hand no argument either way can be drawn from the prominence of Siva in the Śāńkhāyana,⁴ since Aufrecht has proved that even the Aitareya Siva is the great god in his form of Rudra, just as he is in the Śatapatha, the later books of the Vājasaneyi Saṃhitā, and portions of the Atharvaveda. It must be recognized that the deity later known as Śiva came at an early period to be the most prominent member of the Hindu pantheon, and to represent that striving at pantheistic monotheism which in one or other of its forms is so characteristic of all the developments of Indian religious thought. It is probable that several conceptions have merged in the idea of the later Siva. Originally a god of the storm which destroys,⁵ he later amalgamated with a god of the forest or wood,⁶ or rather perhaps with the vegetation spirit which has been rendered so familiar by the studies of Frazer following Mannhardt. Possibly, too, traits of his character are derived from the idea of the evil powers of the spirits of the dead, as suggested by v. Schroeder, who regards him as chief of the spirits of the dead. But at any rate he cannot be regarded as a late deity, just as Viṣṇu also belongs to an early period. Another sign of the fact that no very great distance in time separates the two Brāhmaṇas may be seen in the fact that both employ in essentials the same style and language. It is worthy of note that in both the base enad occurs in the nominative.

It seems, therefore, practically certain that at least the first thirty Adhyāyas of the Aitareya are earlier than the Kauṣītaki, and the temptation is strong to assume that the fact that the Kauṣītaki has precisely thirty Adhyāyas is due to an imitation of the Aitareya. If this is so, then we would be sure that the last ten Adhyāyas were later than the Kauṣītaki, a view itself extremely probable on the ground of contents and of the use of the perfect as a narrative tense. But even so the Brāhmaṇa as a whole of forty Adhyāyas is older than Pāṇini.³ Further the Paiṅgya, who is cited as an authority in the Kauṣītaki, is, according to the Kāśikā on Pāṇini, IV, 3, 105, a cirantana, so that the Kausītaki, like the Aitareya, can claim considerable antiquity.⁴

If the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa is older than the Śāṅkhāyana, it is not unreasonable to expect the same relation to exist in the case of the Āraṇyakas. This certainly is borne out by comparison of the ritual described. It at least appears to have been deliberately modified to differentiate it from the ritual of the Aitareya. It is not of course conclusive that the Āraṇyaka itself is necessarily later, since the description of the earlier ritual may be the later, but there is nothing to suggest that this is the case, and the condensed style of the Śāṅkhāyana appears more modern than that of the Aitareya.

Even in the Brāhmaṇas the ritual differences begin to appear. The Prauga Śastra at the Prātaḥsavana of the Agniṣṭoma and of the Viṣuvat, following the model of the Agniṣṭoma, consists of Rgveda, I, 2 and 3, in gāyatrī metre.⁵ In the Viṣuvat, according to the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa,⁶ the Śastra is in tristubh metre, though the other form is mentioned as more correct, and consists of verses from different hymns on the model of the Aitareya form. But most of the differences occur in connexion with the most important part of the Āraṇyaka, the Mahaduktha. Govinda, the commentator on the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, tells us that the parts of the Mahaduktha are the parts of the human form and not of the bird form. This is borne out by the words used, akṣā, bāhū, prahastakam, and the omission of the vijavaḥ and pucham. The bird form is the older; it is that of the fire-altar and of the Mahāvrata Sāman, and probably it is to the change of form that the confusion in the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka is due.

In the Aitareya the Mahaduktha is divided into parts corresponding to the body, neck, head, vertebrae, wings, stomach, then comes the food of the bird in the form of the three asītis, the vasa hymn, and ten miscellaneous hymns called the ūrū. The Śāńkhāyana divides the Uktha into the body, head with neck, the two sides, divided into shoulder, arm, and hand, the back, consisting of the caturuttarāni, the food in the form of the three asītis, together with the udara. Then, as the beginning of the end, come the dvipadās, which in the Aitareya form the tail, the Aindragna sūkta, the beginning of the ūrū in the Aitareya, and a collection of disconnected groups of verses, āvapana, tristupchata, &c. The explanation of this confusion seems to be 3 that the human form had no pucha and required fewer verses for the paksa, and so the verses necessary to make up the total of 1,000 brhatī verses, required by the rite, were appended at the end. To the alteration in form is probably to be attributed the fact that the sides are composed of equal numbers of verses, whereas in the corresponding Saman one side has the Pañcadaśa, the other the Saptadaśa Stoma, and in the Aitareya one side has 101, the other 102 verses,4 probably, as Dr. Friedländer suggests, because in flight one wing of a bird appears longer than the other.

A similar complication is made in the case of the three asītis.⁵ In the Aitareya the gāyatrī and uṣṇih asītis are composed of eighty gāyatrī and (with a slight exception) uṣṇih tṛcas respectively, while the bṛhatī asīti contains eighty satobṛhatī verses. In the Śāṅkhāyana the bṛhatī asīti consists of eighty bṛhatīs and eighty pṛagāthas (bṛhatī and sato-bṛhatī). The additional syllables are added to the uṣṇih aśīti which is composed of gāyatrīs, bṛhatīs, and pragāthas.¹ The priority of the Aitareya is quite clear. Again in the Aitareya, the hymns corresponding to the Bṛhat and Rathantara Sāmans stand on the right and left wings of the bird, in the Śāṅkhāyana they no longer correspond to the Sāmans in position, but are grouped at the end.²

The apparently deliberate divergence from the Aitareya appears also in the treatment of the verses from the Rgveda used in the litanies. For example, the uṣṇih aśīti in the Aitareya commences with Rgveda VIII, 12 and 13; in the Śāṅkhāyana the order is simply reversed. Again in the vaśa hymn, VIII, 46, in the Aitareya only vv. 1-20 are prescribed, since they alone are addressed to Indra, in the Śāṅkhāyana the whole hymn, though vv. 21-24 are a dānastuti, and vv. 25-28, and 32 are addressed to Vāyu. Similarly at the evening Soma pressing the Aitareya used the Viśvedeva verses, 1-41, of Rgveda, I, 164, only, while the Śāṅkhāyana improperly uses all the verses.

There is yet another sign of the earlier character of the Aitareya, so far as its Sūtra part at least is concerned. The Sūtra part of the Śāṅkhāyana, the so-called Śrauta Sūtra, when mentioning the various improper rites, says tad etat purāṇam utsannam na kāryam! There can be no doubt that this is a clear sign of a more reflective and refined age.

Further, the language of the Śānkhāyana suggests a close relation with the Aitareya, which must either be due to a common source, or perhaps more probably to borrowing. For example, in the Aitareya occurs: brahmaitad ahar brahmanaiva tad brahma pratipadyate; in the Śānkhāyana, brahmaitad ahar brahmanaiva tad brahma samardhayati. On the whole the priority probably lies with the Aitareya.

If, as seems clearly the case, the ritual of the Śańkhāyana is more recent than that of the Aitareya, an interesting question arises as to the relation of the Aitareya I to the Śatapatha Brāhmana VIII and IX, in which the Mahāvrata is treated. The evidence available on this point is not decisive. (1) In IX, 3, 3, 19, occurs the expression yāny aṣṭācatvārimśat tau caturvimśau pakṣau, which certainly points to the equality of the pakṣas, and, possibly, to the human form as the object of necessarily follow throughout the Śāńkhāyana version; I do not think even that version would satisfactorily explain all the details of the Śatapatha.

It does not of course necessarily follow that the Satapatha is later than the Aitareva Aranyaka I, but on the other hand this result is by no means impossible. For by common consent 1 the Satapatha is one of the youngest of the great Brahmanas. It is no doubt anterior to Panini. and as far as the controversy 2 over the Sūtra, IV, 3, 105, yields any results it is that Kātyāyana considered that Yājñavalkya was a purāņa, as opposed to a recent author, though therein it seems he disagreed with Pāṇini. It is abundantly clear 3 that the name Satapatha was well known to Kātyāyana. But there is nothing inconsistent in this with the view that the Satapatha in its present form may be younger than the Aitareya Āranyaka I. It will be seen in Section VI that grammatically the Āraņyaka I-III is older than Satapatha Brāhmaņa, I-V, X, XII-XIV.

It is perhaps well here to mention a theory recently put forward by Dr. Hoernle.4 He points out that in Satapatha Brāhmaņa, XII, 2, 4, 10, the word grīvāh, which occurs in Aitareya Āranyaka, I, 3, 4, is used to denote the seven cervical vertebrae, whereas in the Rgveda and Atharvaveda it seems to denote the throat or windpipe. This view must, he argues, have been derived from the medical school of Yājñavalkya's day, that of Atreya, and he refers to the fact that Indian tradition assigns both Yājñavalkya and Ātreya to the time of Buddha, the sixth century B.C.5 Clearly much stress cannot be laid on this argument as far as it might be applied to fixing the date of either the Aitareya Āranyaka or the Satapatha Brāhmaņa XII. For though the theory here maintained.

² Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 443, 444, Indian Literature, p. 130; Bühler, S.B.E., II, xxxix, n.; XII, xxxv. It seems usually to be considered that Kātyāyana was right. But the evidence seems rather the other way, as Apastamba calls Yājñavalkya's contemporary Śvetaketu an avara, and this agrees well with

³ Värttika on IV, 2, 60.

grīvāh in the former work no doubt refers to cervical vertebrae, as the context shows, yet the passage shows none of the detailed knowledge of the Satapatha (grīvāh pañcadaśa) caturdaśa vā etāsām karūkarāni vīryam pañcadaśam), to which it is certainly prior, as we have seen on other grounds. But the tradition connecting Yājñavalkya with Buddha's date is probably inaccurate, for the Brhadaranyaka Upanisad must, I think, be counted as earlier than Buddha, and yet it is later than the mass of the Brāhmana, and Yājñavalkya is to it a figure of ancient fame, while we are hardly yet in a position to decide the date or opinions of Atreva, since we can scarcely assume that Caraka represents him, through Agnivesa, with much accuracy. But it may be noted that the later date of the Satapatha is distinctly indicated by the fact that Āpastamba 1 calls Śvetaketu, a contemporary of Yājñavalkya, modern, while the Kausītaki Brāhmaṇa, which also 2 cites Śvetaketu, shows again a connexion with the Satapatha which denotes its posteriority to the Aitareva.

V. The three Upanisads of the Aitareya Āranyaka.

There is some doubt as to the exact designations borne in early days by the Upaniṣads contained in the Āraṇyaka. According to Max Müller,³ the distinction is between the Aitareya Upaniṣad properly so-called, which fills the fourth, fifth, and sixth Adhyāyas of the second Āraṇyaka, and the Mahaitareya Upaniṣad, also called by a more general name Bahvṛca Upaniṣad, which comprises the whole of the second and third Āraṇyakas. There is no doubt that the term Aitareya Upaniṣad especially belongs to II, 4-6; but the term Mahaitareya or Bahvṛca-brāhmaṇa Upaniṣad, though it sometimes applies to both Āraṇyaka II and III, sometimes is confined to Āraṇyaka II. Further the form, Bahvṛcabrāhmaṇa Upaniṣad, is in the Ānandāśrama edition given to the Upaniṣad itself, while on the other hand, in one of the MSS. in the Bodleian, the second book is described simply as Aitareya Upaniṣad. Clearly the nomenclature was not definitely fixed. Book III bore the special title of Samhitā Upaniṣad, which is given to it in Śańkara's commentary and which it claims for itself by its opening words. The term Mahaitareya may have been applied at an early date since it appears to have given rise to the fiction of a Rṣi, Mahaitareya, by the date of the composition of Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 4, but the text of these Sūtras is not very certain.

It must be recognized that the interpretation of these Upaniṣads is far from certain or easy. They were no doubt originally accompanied in the Vedic schools by explanations which might, had they been preserved, have shown how much we now misinterpret them. But it is impossible to regard Śańkara's explanations as traditional. There must have been somewhere a gap in the tradition. This is shown clearly by the fact that Śańkara explains all the Upaniṣads as exhibiting one doctrine, an impossible view, and that Bādarāyaṇa,¹ who in his Brahmasūtra does precisely the same thing, adopted a different doctrine as the fundamental key to the system. All that can now be done is to take the Upaniṣads and endeavour to extract what seems the most natural meaning from the actual words.

In the eyes of Śaṅkara and Sāyaṇa there is no difference in time nor in essential doctrines between the three Upaniṣads, which they regard as one. There are three classes of men, says Sāyaṇa ² in the Introduction to Book III, those who desire immediate freedom through the knowledge of Brahman, and accordingly find it by aid of Book II, 4–6; those who desire to become free gradually by attaining to the world of Hiraṇyagarbha, for whom II, 1–3, is intended; and those who care only for prosperity, for whom the third Āraṇyaka serves. In the Introduction to II, 1, 2, he adds that it lays down aids to the concentration of thought in the shape of the performance of certain upāsanas or meditations. Such meditation may be of two kinds, Brahmopāsana, or Pratīkopāsana; the former consists in contemplation of Brahman as endowed with qualities, the latter in considering worldly objects as Brahman, whether, as in the second Book, they are sacrificial objects or non-sacrificial.

It is undoubtedly the case that the Upanisad, II, 1-3, is intended in some degree to supersede sacrifice, or rather while assuming sacrifice to explain it mystically, the mystic meaning being the essential part. The path par excellence is knowledge of the real meaning of the Uktha. Uktha is earth, sky, and heaven; its objects are Agni, Vāyu, and Aditya, its ašītis are food, whereby all is obtained. It is also the body, mouth, nostrils, and forehead of Prajāpati. The breath is Uktha, and sattya, and as bṛhatī supports all things. Puruṣa, II, 1, 7, again, creates the earth, fire, the sky, the air, heaven, and the sun.

In Adhyāya 2, Prāṇa is identified with the authors of the hymns of the Rgveda, the rcs, the ardharcas, and Indra declares himself to be Prāṇa, and, II, 2, 4, the worshipper is identified with the sun.

In Adhyāya 3 the identity of the individual and the Uktha or Prāṇa is insisted upon. The growth of self is traced from the sap of herbs and trees through animals, which show hunger and thirst, to knowledge in man, and after the identification of Uktha and Prāṇa the Adhyāya ends with some obscure verses alleged to treat of the winning of Hiranyagarbha.

The precise meaning of the doctrine is hard to decide. It appears, however, to amount to a vague pantheism, which recognizes the unity of all existence physical or otherwise, and at the same time tends, as pantheistic views naturally do tend, to become a cosmogonism, especially in the account of the powers of Puruṣa (II, 1, 7). It is too early yet to speak of a clear differentiation of mind and body, though distinct signs appear in II, 3, 2, where men, animals, and trees are regarded as showing in inverse order the growth of intelligence. But the Prāṇa or Puruṣa does not consist in mind as opposed to body: all things exist in him, and both mind and body seem equally essential elements.

Deussen, in Die Philosophie der Upanishad's,¹ argues that the oldest Upanisads are dominated by a doctrine derived from Yājñavalkya which may be styled 'Idealism' and which may be summed up in the propositions: (1) the Ātman is the knowing subject within us; (2) the Ātman is itself as subject unknown; (3) the Ātman is the sole reality. These propositions undoubtedly are found in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I-IV, and I agree with Deussen in thinking that they were taken over and partly misunderstood by the Chāndogya Upaniṣad, and that the Taittirīya and Kauṣītaki Upaniṣads are probably later still.² Nor as regards the first two of these propositions can there be much dispute as to their meaning. But the third proposition is more difficult. Deussen interprets it, it appears, to mean only that there is no reality outside the one Atman, and that what seems to be knowledge of reality is really only an illusory knowledge of things as they appear, not as they are in themselves. That is he discerns in the Advaita doctrine the same principle as appears in Kant, a separation between things in themselves and empirical reality. It is probable that those who held the doctrine of Māvā were less subtile thinkers than this, as is shown by the naïve manner in which knowledge is made the characteristic of the Âtman, while at the same time all empirical knowledge is declared illusory. For such knowledge as is not empirical is meaningless to us and should not be described as knowledge. They rather resembled the early Atomists, like Democritus, who denied the reality of anything save atoms and the void. Dissatisfied with the changing nature of life and appearances, they thought that they reached finality and truth by denying the reality of phenomena, and they carried that metaphysical doctrine into ethics by regarding the acts of the ordinary life as fundamentally indifferent and unreal. The result of this metaphysical theory has had a considerable influence in Hindu life and thought, and it has undoubtedly retarded natural development and to some extent moral progress, though the facts of life have been too strong for it. But whatever the exact significance of the doctrine, it is clear that Yājñavalkya, and those who followed him, did in some sense or other, hold that the world was unreal, a view which is not in any true sense Kantian.

To these three doctrines characteristic of the Yājñavalkya belief, may be added (4) the allied doctrines of the transmigration of souls, of Mokṣa, and the reward in a future birth of good and evil. This doctrine is certainly not older than the Upaniṣads, and it is intimately connected with views of moral retribution, which are hardly logically to be reconciled with the other three doctrines, which naturally lead to the recognition that no such thing as transmigration can exist, and that mere knowledge is freedom and there is no consciousness after death.

The question arises how far these doctrines have any counterpart in II, 1-3. The answer seems that the Upanisad stands in regard to them all on an earlier plane of development. (1) The Atman is not yet recognized as the unity. That is designated as Prana or Purusa, and in II. 3, 2, the Purusa has an Atman which is developed in various degrees in the Purusa according to the diverse forms which Purusa adopts as man, beast, plant, &c. There is a pantheistic conception, but it is not one of consciousness as the sole reality. (2) There is naturally no trace of the doctrine of the unknowableness of the Atman. (3) What is more important, there is no trace of the doctrine of the unreality of things. Purusa exists in them all, but either he is identical with, or creates (II, 1, 7) them, and he does not exist outside them. The nearest approach to a hint of the later idea is found in II, 1, 5, where it is said that if one knows what is Sattya, then even if falsehood is spoken by him, vet he says what is true. But it is only a vague hint. (4) The doctrine of transmigration cannot be proved to be known to this Upanisad. Śańkara and Sāyaṇa of course assume its existence, but the passages can be explained otherwise. They are II, 1, 3, tad idam karma krtam ayam purusah, which most probably means that action is the man, a man is what he does, not a man is what he did in a former birth, which is not really suitable in the context, and 3, 2, yathāprajñam hi sambhavāh, which I take to signify: 'for their experiences are according to their intelligence,' a meaning which avoids dragging in a doctrine by no means needed or even intelligible in the context. The doctrine of the Upanisad is immortality in another world with the gods, II, 2, 4, &c.

There appears therefore no legitimate room for doubt that the Upaniṣad, II, 1-3, is anterior to the spread of the Yājñavalkya doctrine and to all subsequent Upaniṣads which contain that doctrine. Parts of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and Chāndogya Upaniṣads may be equally early, for some of their texts contain no reference to transmigration, but it would seem that Aitareya Āraṇyaka II, 1-3, which forms a unity, is the oldest long Upaniṣad extant.

In the Upanisad proper, II, 4-6, there is clear evidence of a further development of doctrine. In Adhyāya 4 the idea is that the Ātman produces everything, cosmogonism in fact. In Adhyāya 6 we reach the identifications of Prajñana with Brahman and these two with Atman. We thus have clearly the doctrine that the Atman is consciousness, for it is intended evidently not to identify reality with the Atman, but, as in Adhyava 4, in a rough way, to show that all things, the gods, the elements, men, animals, &c., are dependent on knowledge, that is the Atman. But there is still no statement that the self is unknowable; that is, the conception of subject as contrasted with object is not yet clear. On the other hand the sole existence of the Atman appears in II, 4, 3, where it is asserted that there is no other self. But this view carries with it no denial of the reality of things which depend on Atman. The Maya conception is not even implicit. Nor is the doctrine of transmigration apparently present. It is true that Sankara and Savana found it in II. 5: athāsyāyam itara ātmā krtakrtyo vayogatah praiti sa itah prayann eva punar jāvate tad asva trtīvam janma | But itah must mean 'hence' and the third birth must be in the heaven, an idea of course familiar to the Brāhmanas 1 which know nothing of transmigration.

There is not, therefore, anything in my opinion in this Upanisad to justify us in assigning it to a later date than the period anterior to the main doctrines of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka.

In the third Upaniṣad, III, 1-2, there is little of philosophical interest. There is a repeated identification of the incorporeal conscious self and the sun, and there is a distinct assertion that the self is that which hears, thinks, sees, &c., but is not heard or thought, and which is within all beings. This gives us (1) the conscious Ātman, which (2) is not knowable and (3) probably is all that is real. But there is no sign of the doctrine of Māyā, nor of transmigration, nor of freedom in knowledge. On the contrary the fate of the good is repeatedly stated to be prosperity in this world and Svarga in the next. So even this Upaniṣad may be earlier than the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad.

External evidence for the dates of the Upanisads is not forthcoming. It is true that the first Upanisad presupposes that the Rgveda was already arranged as we have it at the time when the Upanisad was composed, but Oldenberg 2 has shown that the Rgveda assumed its present form at a date before the composition of the Samaveda, the oldest form of the Yajurveda, and the Atharvaveda. The Samhitā Upanisad shows a knowledge of the samhitā, pada, and krama pāthas of the Rgveda, and of the doctrines of natva and satva. But all that this shows is that it belongs to a period relatively later than that of the Brāhmanas,1 a view which of course is undisputed. It is probably older than Yaska, who evidently was much more advanced in grammatical studies than the author of this Upanisad, and it may be dated in the sixth century B. C., perhaps earlier, since the transmigration doctrine had by the time when Buddha preached apparently obtained a complete grasp of the Indian sage's mind, though of course it is quite possible and almost probable that the doctrine spread first in some definite locality, perhaps in the East, which may not have been that of the home of the Aitareya. It may be noted that the Aitareya Brāhmana had its origin among the Kuru-Pañcālas, and the Śatapatha among the Kosala-Videhas, in so far at least as the books attributed to Yājñavalkya are concerned.2

Deussen³ is of opinion that the Aitareya Upanisad is later than the Brhadāranyaka and Chāndogya and also than the Taittirīya. It is hardly possible, for the reasons already given, to accept this view. He points out that in Chandogya Upanisad, VI, 3, 1, there are three kinds of organic beings, in Aitareya Upanisad, II, 6, there are four, svedaja being added. This argument is of no real weight, in view of the fact that enumerations of classes in these Upanisads are always careless and often incomplete, indeed the assertion in the Chandogya is so couched as to appear to be deliberately directed against an assertion that the number was other than three, and may be a reference to the Aitareya. The substantial arguments on the other side are those from the contents. The same argument applies to the Taittirīya. The Ānandavallī 4 contains an elaborately developed doctrine which certainly regards the Atman as conscious, as unknowable, and as unique, besides treating of the nature of transmigration in a very subtle manner. The argument of Deussen from the fact of the less elaborate description of the entrance of the Atman into creation in II, 6, in comparison with the Aitareya account in II, 4, 3, is quite inconclusive. Further, the Taittirīya Upaniṣad¹ sets a high value on asceticism, and thus differs from the Aitareya and even the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and Chāndogya. Historically the earliest view appears to have been opposed to asceticism, which only later was regarded as an aid to knowledge. Again in the Śikṣāvallī the knowledge of grammar shown is at least as great as that of the Samhitā Upaniṣad. Another sign of the comparative lateness of the Taittirīya² is the addition of mahas to the triad, bhūr, bhuvaḥ, svar.

There can, in any case, be no question of the priority of the Aitareya to the Kausītaki Upaniṣad. The Kausītaki is decidedly late.³ Adhyāya I is a variant of the transmigration legend found in Chāndogya, V, 3-10, and Bṛhadāraṇyaka, VI, 2, which are both late passages in their Upaniṣads.⁴ The twelve explanations of Bālāki Gārgya in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka, II, I, are expanded to sixteen in Kausītaki, IV.⁵ The prāṇasaṇvāda of the Aitareya, II, 4, is certainly older than either that of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka, VI, II-I4, or the Chāndogya, V, I, or the Kausītaki, II, 12-14, III, 3. The name, indriya, for the organs of sense first occurs in Kausītaki, II, 15,⁶ and in Aitareya, III, 2, 1, and the word manas occurs in the sense of an organ, like speech, sight, hearing, instead of the old sense 'consciousness,' in Kausītaki, III.⁷

Further it may be noted that in the Aitareya, even in III, 2, 3, there is no hint of the recognition of the Atharva as a fourth Veda. Such hints occur in the Brhadāranyaka, V, 13, and VI, 4, 13, and Atharvana occurs in Chāndogya, VII, 1, 2, while the Atharvana and Angirases are mentioned in the early text, Brhadāranyaka, II, 4, 10.

Other Upanisads, including the Jaiminīya Upanisad Brāhmaṇa, may fairly be left out of account. None of them can claim to be older than the Aitareya and many must be much more modern. They are marked by a greater formalism of doctrine, accompanied by attempts to graft popular doctrines on to the philosophical conceptions of the Upanisads, which were apparently soon found too abstruse for the comprehension of their successors.

It may therefore be concluded that the first two Upanisads certainly, and probably also the third, precede the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and Chāndogya Upanisads in their main portions, especially the Yājñavalkya section of the former, that they are pre-Buddhistic, as is proved both by the contents and the language, and that they date from about 700-500 B.C.

In connexion with the relation of the Upanisads to Buddhism it may be well to trace the history of the Atman doctrine. The derivation of the word is in dispute2 and throws no clear light on the meaning. But at any rate, it is certain that the Indians obtained gradually, doubtless through the phenomena of dreams and swoons and death, the conception of the body being animated by a soul. This conception naturally reacted on their views of religion. It is impossible to suppose, as is now so often done, that the earliest or even an early form of religion was the belief in spirits which take up their abode from time to time in various forms. It cannot have been until after long experience that the idea of a disembodied spirit can have been intelligible. Primitive man must long have regarded body and mind as one. So his earliest worship must have been addressed to things which seemed to him to be able to help or hurt him. We cannot believe with Rhys Davids 3 that the early worship of trees was really dryad worship. The early believer regarded certain trees as divine, just as he regarded certain animals, like the cow or the snake, as divine because of their beneficent or maleficent powers, and it was only later that the idea of the spirit as separable from the tree or animal appears. Once the idea of a separate spirit is arrived at of course the nature of the deity changes, anthropomorphism arises, or other animals or things than that which the deity originally was become his place of abode.4 Further, other abstract deities can arise, and we pass from worship of natural objects to worship of spirits embodied from time to time in natural forms. It was not unnatural that the thinker should endeavour to find some common explanation of the vast world of souls, and still less unnatural that he should decide that all souls were identical; for the soul being merely a spirit had when separated from its body no characteristic or distinguishing features.

Liebich, Pānini, ch. iii, concludes that the language of the Brhadāranyaka is pre-Pāṇinean. This incidentally supports the theory of the date of the Aitareya.

But the merit of the Upanisads does not rest on this mere identification.1 It rests on the attempt to discover the nature of the soul. At first the conception may no doubt have been that it was material,2 and traces of that view persist late, but at any rate the author of the Aitareva Upanisad was well aware that the essential characteristic of soul was consciousness, and I think we must admit that the Upanisad fully recognizes that all existence whatever is dependent on consciousness. It is true that the Upanisad does not clearly analyse or realize what that means, but the idea is there. The Brhadaranyaka and Chandogya supply a further account, and at the same time they develop the theme that recognition of the true facts as to the Atman means freedom, whereas failure to recognize means transmigration. Buddhism is certainly later than these doctrines, from which it is an illogical and unsatisfactory derivative so far as metaphysics 3 go. It is significant of its later origin that it arose at a time when Tapas was laid great stress upon even in the philosophic schools, whereas Tapas is not recognized as a factor in knowledge until the Taittirīva Upanisad, and becomes prominent only in the Kena and Śvetāśvatara Upanisads. Its derivative nature is plainly seen in the fundamental doctrine of the rejection of the Atman, and the illogical substitution of a Karman which performs the functions of an Atman for purposes of transmigration, and in the consequent doctrine of Nirvana. which is nonentity, as all content has been rendered impossible by the rejection of the theory of Atman as conscious. It is true that the theory was inevitable, inasmuch as the Upanisads came to insist on emptying the Atman of all meaning by rejecting the objective side of consciousness. so that the Atman ceased to be anything but a subject without an object, a view that is not that of the Aitareya Upanisad. But to accept the doctrine that there existed no Atman at all was to adopt a view which. strictly speaking, rendered all knowledge meaningless, for there must be rests on a metaphysical basis which is thoroughly unsound, and, as empirical psychology, is hopelessly confused and self-contradictory. Cf. the significant admissions by Mrs. Rhys Davids, J. R. A. S., 1903, pp. 687-691.

As Rhys Davids appears to think, rests on a metaphysical basis which is op. cit., p. 256. thoroughly unsound, and, as empirical

³ No doubt Buddhism is not in the main a metaphysical system (cf. Lovejoy, J. A. O. S., XIX, ii, 132 sq.), but it a subject, and it is no answer that there need be no permanent individual self.

The doctrine of anattā therefore destroys all the basis of samsāra, and is complete proof that Buddhism is entirely dependent on the Upanisads which first clearly develop that view. There are numerous other signs of dependence. The dialogue form is copied from the dialogues of the Brhadāranyaka and Chāndogya, and even the style of the Aitareya Upanisad, II, 6: yad etad hrdayam manas caitat samjñānam ājñānam vijnanam prajnanam medha drstir dhrtir matir manisa jutih smrtih samkalpah kratur asuh kāmo vaša iti sarvāny evaitāni prajñānasya nāmadheyāni, is a forecast of those intolerable lists of practically meaningless synonyms which disfigure the pages of the Pāli Suttas. In estimating the causes of the fall of Buddhism,1 it must, I think, be recognized how great a part was played by the unphilosophical and uncritical nature of the metaphysical doctrine, and by the elaborate mass of inaccurate and fanciful psychology,2 which the school endeavoured to set up as its contribution to the knowledge of truth. The Upanisads contain much that is foolish and meaningless, but they are the first books of a new faith and were fated to be the sources of a system of philosophy whose influence in India is still paramount.

It follows with certainty that the Aitareya Upaniṣads are considerably older than Buddha, whose date of death is certainly about 487 or 477 B. C.³ We must therefore probably fix 600 B. C. as the lowest limit for their composition, or put 550 B. C. at the very latest, thus modifying slightly the results above reached. It is not possible to estimate how quickly thought then worked, but about 50 to 100 years will be required for the development from the earliest to the latest Upaniṣad, and I incline to fix approximately the dates at from about 700-600 B. C. for Āraṇyaka II, and 550 for Āraṇyaka III. Āraṇyaka I may be somewhat earlier, but not necessarily much earlier, while, as seen above, the Āraṇyakas IV and V belong to about 450 B. C., thus explaining the dictum of Sāyaṇa which distinguishes so sharply between the two parts. The upper date may perhaps be pushed farther back, but this involves the pushing back of the date of the Rgveda, for which, at least at present, no satisfactory evidence has been adduced.¹ Among recent writers Rhys Davids ² and Garbe ³ ascribe to the eighth and seventh centuries the older Upanisads.

The position of the Aitareya gives some light with regard to the question how far the Brahmins were the authors of the change in philosophy shown in the Upanisads. Of late it has been more and more the practice to ascribe to the Ksatriyas this step in philosophic progress. This view has recently been pressed by Garbe 4 and Deussen.5 But it seems to me to rest on no substantial evidence and to be a priori improbable. The Aitareya shows a legitimate development from the Brāhmaṇa to the Upanisad, and no reason appears why the Brahmins should be considered unable to develop further the ideas which Deussen himself has shown were latent in the Brāhmanas. Doubtless, as the history of Jñātaputra and Gautama show, the Ksatriyas in the eighth to the sixth centuries B. C. took an interest in the intellectual life of the day, but that is not to say that the Ksatriyas developed new views as opposed to the Brahmins. The fact is that society had not yet attained that artificial character of separation of classes which is seen in the Manava Dharmaśāstra. The literary activities of the Ksatriyas were mainly spent at this time on the development of the epic 6 which was soon to produce the Rāmāyaṇa, a development shared by the Brahmins but mainly. directed by the Ksatriyas, just as the latter shared the philosophic researches which were the main task of the former.

It is not unimportant to observe that there is as yet no trace in the Āranyaka of the doctrine of the misery of existence which characterizes both the Jaina and Buddhist creeds. It is I think correct to assume that these doctrines are descended from a Sāṃkhya 7 view of existence which fell into pessimism by its unsatisfactory dualistic metaphysics. However open to criticism Jacobi's detailed derivation of the doctrines of Buddhism from the Sāṃkhya may be, yet it is clear that it was from the Sāṃkhya that Buddhism derived its theory of the soulless entity which yet goes through transmigration. For this is precisely the lingaśarīra which alone migrates, puruṣa being a truth utterly dissociated from matter. From this point of view also is reached the result that the Aitareya is considerably anterior to Buddhism.

Āraņyaka I contains, in comparison with the Upaniṣads, little of philosophic interest. It is important, however, to observe that in it brahman appears already as a principle of unity. In I, I, 3, gāyatrī is identified with brahman and the Mahāvrata day is also identified, because it leads to brahman. Similarly Vasukra is brahman and so is identified with the Mahāvrata day. There can be no doubt that the brahman conception is older than that of the Ātman, and that it originally meant the power of prayer, which even in the Rgveda is treated as a spell to bend the gods by its own force to grant what is craved, instead of being considered an appeal to the lovingkindness of the gods. That eventually this doctrine was amalgamated with a younger rival, the Ātman doctrine, as Oldenberg suggests, seems to me undoubted. The assimilation is seen complete in the Upaniṣad II, 6, which indicates the length of time which we must assume between the first book and the Upaniṣad proper.

It remains to consider whether any explanation can be given of the connexion with the doctrines of the Upanisad of the Mahāvrata rite. Some light on this matter is thrown by Prof. Eggeling in the introduction to Part IV¹ of his translation of the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa. He there points out that the Agnicayana and the Mahāvrata appear to have been developed in connexion with a doctrine of the production of the world from the sacrifice of Puruṣa (cf. Rgveda, X, 90), which eventually yields the equation of Prajāpati at once to the sacrifice and the sacrificer (cf. Aitareya Āraṇyaka, II, 1, 2). But the sacrifice lasts a year, and so Prajāpati becomes time, and death, and eventually mind. Thus the Mahāvrata rite is treated in the Āraṇyaka as specially secret, and finds a natural development in the more purely philosophic Upanisads.

In conclusion, a few words may be said as to the relation of Āranyaka III to the other Vedic texts of similar content. It is of course very closely related to the Śānkhāyana Āranyaka VII, VIII, with which it agrees verbally in some parts, showing that both versions go back to a not very distant common ancestor. But on the whole the version of the Śāṅkhāyana seems the more modern in several respects.¹

The Samhitopaniṣad Brāhmaṇa is certainly a much more recent work. Burnell, in the preface to his edition, has urged general considerations for its comparatively late date. It shows a considerable advance of phonetic science, and mentions such points as lopa, atihāra, rephasandhi, and visargopagraha, while it deals with the svaras. Three sorts of Samhitā are distinguished, the deva, asura, and ṛṣi, an artificial conception. The Samhitā is also considered as śuddhā, aduḥspṛṣṭā, and anirbhujā. In the last section philosophy has degenerated into meaningless formulae, and the demand for gifts in Section IV is beneath the dignity of the older Āraṇyakas and Upaniṣads. Nor is it without significance that in so short a text are found sukhībhavati and gulmībhūtā, forms rare indeed in the older texts,² while the only narrative tense found is the perfect 3 (in III), and the language is classical.

The Āraṇyaka III is also in all probability older than Taittirīya Upaniṣad, I, 3, which appears, as will be seen from the note on III, 1, 2, to be an enlarged version of the older Saṃhitā doctrine, although it seems likely that the Upaniṣad is much older than the Saṃhitopaniṣad Brāhmaṇa.

VI. Style and Grammar.

In this connexion it will be sufficient to consider the first three Āraṇyakas as forming one whole, as distinct from the fifth Āraṇyaka, and to disregard the differences in date among their parts. The quotations contained in the fourth Āraṇyaka, and also scattered throughout the rest of the work, may be left out of consideration until later (p. 74).

The prose of the Āraṇyaka is of considerable historic interest. The history of Sanskrit prose is one of continual degradation so far as the grammatical structure of the language is concerned. Classical prose, whatever the subject-matter, whether romance, as in Subandhu and Bāṇa, fable, as in the Pancatantra, or philosophy, is composed in a style which combines all the disadvantages of an inflected with those of an uninflected language. It is characterized by the use of enormous compounds which, in addition to rendering comprehension of the meaning intended difficult and slow, make all precision impossible, and by the consequent paucity of verbal forms. The proportion of finite verbs to other forms of speech steadily decreases, and among finite forms the present indicative and the imperfect are predominant. Sentences are constantly cast in the passive, and the past participle passive becomes extremely frequent. A further economy in the use of finite verbs is effected by the employment of the gerund, which can conveniently convey a large variety of meanings, and take the place of subordinate clauses denoting time, cause, concession, &c. The past tenses, imperfect, aorist, and perfect, when the two latter occur, are used without discrimination of meaning. All clearness, precision, and accuracy are lost, and in addition to the disappearance of much that was merely superfluous in the older style the new prose loses the chance of variation by giving up the use of all but a few particles, and by diminishing the number of its prepositions.

The prose of the first three Āraṇyakas is free from many of these faults. The use of compounds is, as in the Brāhmanas, generally restricted to combinations of two members for the most part, with a few exceptions easily explained, like manovākprānasamhatah (III, 1, 1), and the two members stand in natural relations. The use of finite verbal forms is in no way restricted, and both agrist and perfect are used normally with correctness. Passive forms are comparatively rare, and the gerund is quite infrequent. The subjunctive is still occasionally used in persons other than the first, while the use of particles is comparatively varied. The style is essentially simple and natural in grammatical structure in comparison with the artifice of the later prose, while it possesses a considerable number of variant forms which reveal the poverty of the classical style. But beyond simplicity it has little to commend it. Prof. Macdonell 1 has described the style of the Aitareya Brāhmana in words which also apply well to the Aitareya Aranyaka, as 'crude, clumsy, abrupt, and elliptical'. The art of constructing sentences is entirely wanting; a long series of co-ordinate clauses takes the place of due subordination, and an inordinate love for parallelism of structure is the chief sign of conscious literary effort (cf. II, 1, 4; 4, 3). There is no power of transition from thought to thought, and in other cases it is difficult to tell whether it is the thought which is defective or the language which has failed to express it (cf. e.g. II, 1, 2: na tasyeśe yan nādyād yad vainam nādyuh; II, 1, 5: na tasyeśe yan mahyam na dadyuh). Some defects it shares with all Sanskrit prose. Although it has at command a considerable range of particles, it fails to use them with any clear discrimination of sense, thus contrasting with the analogous phenomena in Greek literature where a delicate discrimination in the use of particles runs on from Homeric into classical Greek. Again, although it commands a wide range of pronominal forms, they are not used with any clear difference of sense. and indeed a characteristic of the Aitareya, as of all Brāhmaṇa prose, is the use of double pronouns, like sa esa, without the slightest real difference of sense from the single pronouns. The same result, lack of precision, arises from the free use of the cases of the noun and the absence of prepositions to define exactly the sense intended.

But utterly lacking as is the style in precision, balance, and elegance, and although the Āraṇyaka is destitute of any attempt at ornament, it has nevertheless a certain fitness to its subject-matter. The naïve speculations, the vague guessings after truth, the confusion of thought, which make up the matter, are not inadequately mirrored in the harsh abruptness and elliptic brevity of the style, and a certain variety is introduced in the frequent quotations of verses intended to bear out the argument.

The historical position of the prose is not open to serious doubt. It cannot be contemporary with the classical prose of the Kāvya type, and it is clearly anterior to the prose of the Sūtras. This is shown not merely by the disuse in the Sūtras of various grammatical forms still found in the Āraṇyaka, but still more by the form of the Sūtras. The Āraṇyaka is written in prose as a literary composition; other Sūtras consist merely of strings of rules, and though, as Dr. Knauer in his edition of the Gobhilīya Gṛhya Sūtra, and Hillebrandt in his edition of the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra have shown, they can be construed as texts written continuously, still such compositions must be later than original prose works. On the other hand, not only does the Āraṇyaka contain fewer grammatical antiquities than the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, but it is written in a more developed style and with a greater approach to a command over the language.

The style shows also interesting affinities with that of the Buddhist Pāli Sūtras. It is impossible not to recognize in both the same long lists (e.g. II, 6) of names of mental phenomena, in which thought is hidden under meaningless verbal distinctions. Similar in both is the affection for parallelism of structure and the remorseless love of completeness which insists on repeating in every detail ideas applicable to more than one subject in every instance in which they apply, while the set formulae with which the Pāli Sūtras open and close have close parallels in the

Āraņyaka,

On the whole the vocabulary of the Āraṇyaka shows little that is remarkable; a few Rgvedic words are used with direct reference to the passages in the Saṃhitā in which they occur. Viśva is found only in the phrase viśve devāḥ and twice in etymologies, I, 2, 2; II, 2, I. Vathā tu kathā ca occurs twice, III, I, 3; 4. Other interesting words are āyattāḥ, III, 1, 2, from \sqrt{yat} , to stretch; āndam, III, 1, 2; addhātamau, I, 2, 3; bidale, III, 1, 2; baṭarakāṇi, III, 2, 4; maṇjiṣṭhā, III, 2, 4; saṃbāḥhatamāḥ from $\sqrt{baṃh}$, I, 4, I; bisāni, III, 2, 4, and bṛsīḥ, I, 2, 4, where the dental s is remarkable; dutāḥ, I, 4, 1, which is taken by Sāyaṇa from \sqrt{du} gatau; ulbaniṣṇu, II, 3, 8; āvayat, II, 4, 3, which is usually derived from \sqrt{av} , meaning 'devour'; santani, I, 2, 2; viṣṭapam, II, 1, 2; vikṣudram, I, 5, I; vijavaḥ, of doubtful number, I, 4, I; sattyam for satyam, II, I, 5; samānodarkam, I, 5, 3; stomātišaṃsanāyai, I, 4, I; antastyam, I, 5, 1; kṣudramiśrāṇi, II, 6; udbhijjāni, II, 6, &c.

Throughout between vowels d and dh are written l and lh. This is carefully observed in the best MSS, and has been followed consistently. In II, 4, 3, saişo is supported by the MSS.; and in III, 2, 4, mayūrāgrīvāmeghe seems to stand for mayūragrīvā(h) ameghe, and cf. acyoṣṭhāvarābhyām, III, I, 3. Namo astu is the form in the MSS. in III, I, 3; 4, and they read in III, I, 2: tasmin ha smin. Irregular lengthening of vowels appears in $it\bar{t}$ nu, III, I, 2, and $viy\bar{u}y\bar{u}$, II, 3, 8, in the latter case in a verse. The sandhi of au is peculiar; it becomes $\bar{u}v$ before all vowels except u or $\bar{u}v$, when it becomes $\bar{u}v$. The same rule is usually followed in the Aitareya and other Brāhmaṇas (Aufrecht's ed., p. 427).

In noun and adjective declension there are few irregularities. Ātman,

I, 5, 2, occurs besides ātmani, II, 5; šīrşan, I, 5, 2, also is found. Akṣībhyām, II, 4, 1 (cf. Rgveda, X, 163), shows irregular lengthening of the vowel. Apah, II, 4, 1, appears to be an accusative as not seldom elsewhere. Aikyā, III, 2, 3, is perhaps a neuter instrumental. The genitive singular of nouns and adjectives and pronouns which show ah in the Rgveda and in the later language have ai as usual in the Brāhmanas. The only exceptions appear to be prthivyāh, II, 1, 7; III, 1, 2; asyāh, and amusyāh, III, 1, 2; 2, 5. In the ablative is found brhatyai, II, 3, 6; asyai pratisthāyai, I, 2, 4; of superlatives, brahmatatamam, II, 4, 3, for brahmatatatamam, and annatamām pratyacyante, I, 4, 1, are remarkable. Catuspādāļi and catuspātsu occur in I, 1, 2, with a v. l. catuspādaļi. Navasrakti in II, 3, 6, anomalously appears to stand for navasraktih. Enat in II, 4, 3, is apparently a nominative as in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 22, and if so parān is used as a neuter. Nābhyai with the longer form occurs in II, 4, 1, in the ablative. Enam is used almost as an adjective, III, 1, 3. Imasmai occurs in II, 3, 7.

The numerals show certain interesting forms. Ekayā na trimšat occurs in I, 1, 2, Besides sapta šatāni vimšatiš ca, III, 2, 1, appears sapta vimšatišatāni, III, 2, 1; so also trīņi sastišatāni (= 360), III, 2, 1; and pañca catvārimšatšatāni (= 540), III, 2, 2, as usual in the Brāhmaṇas. The form sattrimšatam sahasrāni, II, 2, 4; 3, 8, denotes 36,000, and may be considered, perhaps, like sattrimšatam ekapadāh, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 1, as an irregular use of accusative for nominative; cf. pañcaviṃšatim sāmidhenyah, V, 1, 1.

Among verbal forms may be noted the Vedic forms, duhe, I, 3, 2, and īśe, II, 1, 2, 5, as third persons; both these forms occur in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. As in that Brāhmaṇa unaugmented forms occur in īkṣata, II, 4, 1; 3; and pādi, II, 1, 2. Upaniṣasasāda in II, 2, 3, is supported by all the MSS. Abhivyaikhyat in II, 4, 3, appears, if the reading is correct, to be the aorist of abhivikhyā with the vi augmented. Atrapsyat and the irregular agrahaiṣyat, II, 4, 3, are examples of the rare conditional. The perfects dādhāra, I, 5, 2; II, 1, 7; and bībhāya, I, 3, 4, occur also in the Brāhmaṇa. Dadṛśe, II, 1, 3; 8; and mene, III, 1, 1, are, the former certainly, the latter probably, passive. The \sqrt{kr} alone is used as an auxiliary in the periphrastic perfect, viz. upāsām cakrire, II, 1, 8, and vedayām cakre, III, 1, 1. The following desiderative forms occur: īpsati, II, 3, 2; īpsantaḥ, I, 1, 1; vicikitset, III, 2, 6; ajighrkṣat, II, 4, 3; atyajighāṃsat, II, 4, 3; abhititṛtsati, I, 3, 1; bībhatseta, II, 3, 7; mīmāṃsante, III, 2, 3; viruruciṣeta, III, 2, 5; and the rare aorist samadhitsiṣam, III, 2, 5, which is a distinct sign of antiquity. The only intensives are poplūyante, sarīsṛpyante, I, 3, 5, and probably the form vāvadiṣat, II, 4, 3, which I take as an aorist subjunctive, also an old form. The denominative patīyasi occurs in I, 3, 5. For the infinitive and subjunctive forms see below. There are no irregularities in the use of "tvā and "ya, such irregularities being characteristic especially in the case of "ya of epic style, not of the Vedic style. The gerund in am appears in praṇāvam and chandaskāram, I, 5, I. It may be noted that in II, 1, 4, smah is substituted for smasi of the quotation. Āttam, II, 3, 6, and apihitā, III, 2, 5, may also be mentioned.

Very characteristic of the early date of the Aranyaka is the separation of prefixes and their verbs. It is not normal; the great majority of prefixes are placed immediately before the verb, and I have accordingly printed them as forming compounds. But the older tradition survives in the following cases: ati-manyeta, II, 3, 3; anu-yujyate, II, 3, 8 (in a verse); abhi-sanvahanti, ibid.; ā-gachati, gachatah, gachanti, I, 1, 4; ā-jāyate, II, 3, 1; abhi-tṛṇatti, I, 3, 1; parā-bhavati, II, 1, 4, &c.; adhi-caranti, bhavati, jāyate, II, 3, 1.

Pluti and the consequent lengthening of the vowels concerned occurs sporadically. The MSS differ considerably, like the editions, in noting the Pluti, and it has as a rule been considered proper to insert it in the text only where Sāyaṇa mentions its presence.

In regard to syntax it may be noted that the rules of concord are usually carefully followed as in all old works. In II, 1, 7, examples will be found of a masculine and a feminine singular, and a masculine and a neuter singular, being accompanied by a verb in the dual, and a plural masculine accompanies a feminine plural and a masculine singular. Āndam in III, 1, 2, is unusual, as āndaḥ would be expected, but cf. sarvam asāni, I, 5, 2; samānam asītayaḥ, II, 1, 2. In III, 2, 4, etesām kimcid occurs, although svapnānām is to be understood. The usual attraction to the number and gender of the predicate occurs in I, 4, 1: athāto vijavas tā virājo bhavanti; II, 6, 1, &c. The plural in adyuḥ, II, 1, 2, and dadyuḥ, II, 1, 5, offers difficulties.

In the use of the pronouns there is little of note. The forms of the base enad occur frequently, but as in all the Brāhmaṇas the pronouns are used in a very confusing and inaccurate way. Double pronouns are very common: e.g. sa eṣaḥ, II, 1, 5; 8; 3, 3; 6; 4, 3; III, 1, 1; 2, 4, &c.; saiṣā, II, 3, 6; 4, 3; III, 1, 6; tad etad, II, 1, 2; 3, 6; 4, 3; tasyaitasya, (neut.) II, 2, 4; III, 2, 1; (masc.) III, 2, 1; 3; tasyā etasyai, (gen.) III, 2, 6; tā etāḥ, II, 1, 4; 2, 2; 3, 3; 4, 2; etat tad, II, 1, 8; tam imam, I, 1, 2; tad idam, II, 1, 2; tā imāḥ, II, 1, 1; tānīmāni, II, 1, 1; so 'yam, II, 5, 1; seyam, II, 1, 2; tasya me, II, 2, 3; ya eṣaḥ, II, 2, 1; yo 'yam, III, 2, 3, &c. Ya forms numerous indefinite combinations which are given in the Index, s. v. The usual correlations are ya and sa; e.g. ye-te, II, 1, 1, &c.; yad-tad, II, 3, 6, &c. More unusual are tad etad-yad etad, II, 1, 2; yad etad-tad etad, II, 5, 1; etad-yad etad, II, 3, 6; yad etad-tad, II, 3, 7. In one case it is uncertain whether a relative is not omitted, viz. II, 5: ko'yam ātmeti vayam upāsmahe, where yam may be read.

In case construction there is the usual freedom. The accusative denotes duration of time in satam varṣāni, II, 2, 1; samvatsaram gā raksayate, III, 1, 6, where the use of the historic present is to be noted; ahorātre varşati, III, 1, 2, where the meaning is 'day and night continuously'. The cognate accusative appears in atyāyam āyan, II, I, I, and kākakulāyagandhikam vāyati, III, 2, 4. Other uses are: sarvam madhyato dadhe, II, 2, 1; enam atiksaranti, II, 2, 2; jyotih prakāśam karoti, II, 1, 8; ahah samset, III, 2, 4. More unusual is the use of the accusative as if in apposition to the main sentence, as in iryatam cābhyutthānam ca, I, 5, 1. The instrumental is used with \stu: mahāvratena stuvīta, III, 2, 4. The dative is used with \arc: sarvebhyo bhūtebhyo 'rcata, II, 2, 2, and sarvebhyo 'rdhebhyo 'rcata, ibid., which is probably an extension of the usual dativus commodi found in the same passage with ksarati. The date of 'work contemplated' appears in punyebhyah karmabhyah pratidhīyate, II, 5. Other datives used predicatively are practically equivalent to infinitives, see below. In sarvebhyo bhūtebhyo dadrse, II, 1, 3; 8, the case may be dative or ablative. The ablative follows anyat in anyat kuśalād brāhmanam brūyāt, III, 1, 3 (cf. I, 1, 2), when the double accusative is interesting. In III, 2, 4, ātmana evāsya tat krtam bhavati, ātmana may stand for ātmanah, a predicative genitive, or for atmane, a dativus commodi; the former view is supported by V, 3, 3, ātmano haivāsya tac chastam bhavati. In either case asya is to be taken probably directly with krtam and sastam; cf. nah proktam, III, 2, 1; asya-uditam, II, 1, 5. Worthy of note is the construction in

III, 2, 1, tasyaitasya trayasyāsthnām majjñām parvanām iti. Iti cannot here mean 'et cetera', and the most probable explanation is that the preceding genitive attracted the subsequent nouns. Compare the not infrequent use of iti with the accusative for iti with the nominative found several times in as early a work as the Brhaddevatā. For the locative there is the rare sense 'for the sake of' in etasyām smopaniṣadi, III, 1, 6. The use of the accusative and dative with $\sqrt{a}dr$ may be noted, I, 1, 1. In the verses in II, 3, 8, astrīpumān is used instead of the accusative with bruvan.

With regard to prepositions, \bar{a} is separated from the ablative by several words in $\bar{a}ham$ $m\bar{a}m$ develhyo veda omad devān veda, II, I, 8. The phrase ubhayam antareņa in III, I, 3, is used as an undeclinable noun in the accusative and locative. See also Index V, s. vv. adhi, abhi, \bar{a} , parastād, pari.

With reference to the use of the numbers, nah in III, 2, 1, may denote the school of the teacher, Śākalya, and may be contrasted with the singular of the Buddhist style, evam me sutam. Compare iti nah śrutih, Brhaddevatā, VI, 148. The same plural, which is the source of the plural of authorship, appears passim in Āraṇyaka III, in the verb.

The use of the tenses of the indicative is of special importance, as it enables us to confirm the views already arrived at as to the date of the Aranyaka. The case of the agrist is the simplest, and may be taken first. In the whole Aranyaka I-III, the aorist has its true use in the Brāhmaņas, viz. that of a proximate past. The examples are: udagāt, I, 3, 4; samāgāt, II, 1, 5; samagāt, III, 1, 1; upāgāh, II, 2, 3; adaršam, II, 4, 3; acyosthāh, III, 1, 3; ārah, III, 1, 3; samadhām, III, 1, 4; samadhitsişam, III, 2, 5; agamat, III, 1, 6; avocāma, III, 2, 2; 3; avocata, II, 2, 2; aśāri, II, 1, 4; prātāri, II, 1, 5. The exceptions are: abhiprāgāt, which occurs twice in II, 2, 21, and pādi, which also occurs twice in that passage. In these cases the sense perhaps rather is equivalent to a present than to a narrative imperfect. Abhivyaikhyat, II, 4, 3, must be as narrative agrist, but the form is so extraordinary that it is almost certain that abhivyaiksat2 should be read, for the Parasmaipada of \sqrt{iks} is found though sporadically. The regularity of the use of the agrist is conclusive for a relatively early date.

Whitney 1 has shown that the use of the imperfect and perfect as narrative tenses varies greatly in the several Brāhmaṇas, and it is now2 usually considered fair to regard the increasing use of the perfect as an indication of relatively late date. The facts of the case are as follows. In Āranyaka I there are seven occurrences of the imperfect from five roots (abhavat (3),3 udayachat, samajānata, apāhata, vyāharat). Of perfects, omitting āha and veda which are used frequently, as throughout the literature, as presents, there occur bībhāya, I, 3, 4; dādhāra, I, 5, 2; vivyāca, I, 5, 2, used in a present sense. This is probably a sign of early date, since in the Rgveda the present sense of the perfect is decidedly frequent. Of narrative perfects asa occurs twice for a special reason, I, 2, 2, and vivyāca once in I, 2, 2, the latter in connexion with udayachat. It may, however, have a present sense. In Aranyaka II, 1-3, there are sixtyseven occurrences 4 from twenty-three forms of nineteen roots (ayan (3), apadyata (3), abhavat (7), abhavatām, abhavan, abravīt (3), abruvan (6), asarpat (2), aśrayata (2), ahimsanta (2), udakrāmat (5), āsta (5), anayanta, atāyata, arcat (4), arcata (4), āsīt (2), atrāyata (2), apavayata (2), ašīryata, avišat (5), ašayat (4), atisthat). There are also in the Ślokas in II, 3, 8, the forms avindan and atrpyan (2). On the other hand the only perfects used in narrative are (except in II, 2, 3 and 4), babhūvule, II, 1, 8, and parābabhūvuh, ibid., and II, I, three occurrences of one root (cf. the use of asa twice in Āraṇyaka I). In II, 2, 3 and 4, however, no imperfects occur, but seventeen instances from seven forms of six roots of perfects occur in narrative (in II, 2, 3, upanișasasāda, śaśamsa (3), upeyāya (3), uvāca (6); in II, 2, 4, babhūva, lebhe, provāca (2)). It is impossible to assume that this can be accidental, and the only fair conclusion is that these sections are not by the same hand as the rest of II, 2, a conclusion which runs in no way counter to their contents, which stand in no organic relation to II, 2, 1 or 2. The latter fact would, in so incoherent a work as II, 2, be quite insufficient as an argument for difference of authorship, but the argument from syntax seems irresistible. It may also be pointed out that in the parallel passage to II, 2, 3, the dialogue of Viśvāmitra and Indra, in Śāńkhāyana

^{*} The prefixes are omitted.

Āraṇyaka I, 6, there occur—as usually in the rest of the Āraṇyaka—perfects, upajagāma (cf. upeyāya), uvāca, and ūce. There must be a common source for the two narratives despite the difference of their present forms, and it must have used perfects in narrative. Besides these narrative perfects, perfects in the present sense occur in dādhāra, II, 1, 7; dadṛśe, II, 1, 3; 8, both of which are conjoined with present tenses.

In Āranyaka II, 4-6, occur sixty-one examples of the imperfect from twenty-three forms of nineteen roots (āsīt, asrjata, īkṣata (5), amūrchayat, atapat (2), abhidyata (5), abhidyetām (3), apatan, ārjat, abravīt (2), abrūtām, abruvan (4), anayat (3), avišat (5), avišan (3), ajāyata (2), ajīghāmsat, ajīghīķṣat (8), ašaknot (7), āvayat, apadyata, apašyat, abhavat (2). The only narrative perfect is uvāca, II, 5, and there is one present perfect, dadhe, II, 2, 1.

In Āraņyaka III occur aśraṃsata and adadhāt (2), III, 1, 6, and the present perfects, mene, III, 1, 1; viduh, III, 2, 5.

The two periphrastic perfects, upāsām cakrire, II, 1, 8, and vedayām cakre, III, 1, 1, may both be narrative perfects, but the latter may be a present perfect.

The results may be tabulated as follows, omitting periphrastic forms; the Ślokas in II, 3, 8, are not taken into account. The numbers in brackets denote the number of roots.

Imperfects. Present Perfects. Narrative Perfects. Āranyaka. 3 (2, āsa and vivyāca (?)) 3 (3) 7 (5) I. 3 (1, babhūvuh) 2 (2) II, I; 2, I-2; 3 67 (19) II, 2, 3-4 None None 17 (6) None 61 (19) I (1) II, 4-6

The fair conclusion is that the Āraṇyaka is older than the later books, VI-VIII, of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, as is indeed probable in view of the much more developed narrative style of the Śunaḥśepa legend. It is probably older than parts (if not the whole) of the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, viz. I-V, X, XII-XIV, including the Brhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, which uses the narrative perfect throughout. In view of the copious and rich style of that Upaniṣad, with its wealth of metaphor, ease of motion, and dignity, it seems impossible to doubt that it belongs to a much later period than the Aitareya, just as we have seen that its philosophic content goes far beyond that of the Aitareya. Bearing in mind that the Brhadāraṇyaka shows considerable evidence of the activity of the Kṣatriyas, and that the perfect as a narrative tense is common in the Epic, it may be suggested that the origin of the narrative use in the Brāhmaṇas is to be found in a borrowing from the style of the old Itihāsa literature. It is perhaps not without significance that such legends as that of Śunaḥśepa, Purūravas and Urvaśī (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XI, 5, 1), Cyavana (ibid., IV, I, 5), and, in the Aitareya Āraṇyaka itself, that of Viśvāmitra, II, 2, 3, should be told in perfects. It may be noted that in the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XV, 17 sq., the Śunaḥśepa legend is also set out in perfects. The Brāhmaṇa use of the perfect is as a present, while both usages are found in the earlier language of the Rgveda Saṃhitā. The older is undoubtedly the Brāhmaṇa use, as it corresponds most closely with the use of the Greek perfect as a completed action or state (cf. Monro, Homeric Grammar², p. 31).

The future indicative is used in its ordinary way as denoting future time in assertions or questions, but the so-called second future never occurs, as it does, e.g. in the Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmana.

The optative is of comparatively very frequent occurrence. (1) Its use as denoting wish is infrequent, the subjunctive usually being preferred, but (2) its use in directions as a mild imperative occurs passim. (3) It is also used in questions to express doubt, precisely as is used the subjunctive with which it alternates in II, 4, 3: katham no idam mad rte syat katarena prapadyai. (4) Its most characteristic use in the Aranyaka is in the protasis and apodosis of conditional sentences. In the apodosis it may denote either direction or the potential. In all cases the condition is one referring to the future, and is of the type, 'If A happens, then B will happen, or should be done.' Examples of two potentials are yadiaśnuvīta-manyeta, II, 3, 3; so III, 1, 6; (with yad = if) II, 3, 6; III, 2, 2; (with yatha) III, 1, 3; 4. Examples of a potential protasis and imperative apodosis are: (with yadi) I, 1, 1; III, 1, 3; 6; 2, 4; 6; (with relatives) I, 2, 2; III, 2, 4; 5, and without any particle, paśyet-drśycyātāmvidyāt, III, 2, 4; with double protasis, upaśrnuyāt-yadā śrnuyāt-vidyāt, III, 2, 4. (5) Arising from this potential use the optative appears as an indefinite, like the Greek subjunctive and optative or the Latin subjunctive. This is possibly the explanation of the difficult phrases in II, 1, 2: na tasyeśe yan nādyād yad vainam nādyuh; II, 1, 5: na tasyeśe yan mahyam na dadyuh, though the meaning might be merely a future. Definitely indefinite is III, 2, 1, yathā śālāvamśe sarve 'nyā vamsāh samāhitāh syuh, since the apodosis is an assertion of fact. (6) An optative of characteristic, that is of result, is found in III, 2, 3, brahmānam-kurvīta yo-pašyet. It will be seen that none of these usages offer any difficulty of explanation on the now generally accepted theory that the optative is originally a weak future in sense.

As in other languages the indicative can be used modally, and in conditional sentences this use is well developed in the Āraṇyaka. In II, 3, 3, yady antarikṣalokam aśnute'ty enam manyate is clearly modal, and is followed by yadi-aśnuvīta-manyeta. So yatra vihīyete-vidyāt in III, 2, 4. Hence indicatives are sometimes combined with optatives in protases of conditional sentences; the following occur in III, 2, 4: yatra-drśyate-paśyet-na paśyet-paśyeta, vidyāt; yatra-drśyate-abhikhyā-yeta-paśyet, vidyāt; upekṣeta-tad yathā-drśyante-yadā na paśyet, vidyāt; III, I, 4, ya-upavadet-cen manyeta-āha, brūyāt. The indicative also occurs in conditions where the fact is asserted in the apodosis (with yadi), e.g. II, 4, 3, or when the protasis and apodosis refer to the future, e.g. yasmin patsyati-bhaviṣyati, II, I, 4.

The only case of a condition in the past which was not fulfilled occurs in II, 4, 3, yad hainad vācāgrahaiṣyad abhivyāhṛtya haivānnam atrapsyat, &c., where the conditional is correctly employed. This accuracy in the use of the conditional and generally in the use of the optative is characteristic of an early date.

The subjunctive is of comparatively frequent occurrence, usually in the first person. It denotes (a) resolve: praviśāma, utkrāmāma, II, 1, 4; srjai, II, 4, 1; 3; adāma (in a relative clause), II, 4, 2; (b) desire: asāni, I, 5, 2; II, 1, 4; 2, 2; asat, I, 4, 3; 5, 1; āpnavāni, I, 4, 3; 5, 2; avarunadhai, I, 4, 3; aśnavai, I, 4, 3; (c) doubt in questions: bravāni, III, 2, 6; prapadyai, II, 4, 3; vāvadiṣat, II, 4, 3, if this is so taken; (d) with ned: ucchidyai, I, 2, 4; asat, I, 5, 2.

The imperative occurs several times, but there is no instance of the use of mā, except in II, 7, 1, which is not genuine, where mā prahāsīh (or prahāsīt) is found. The Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, XI, 6, has mā with the future.

¹ Cf. Goodwin, Greek Moods and Tenses,
App. A. This would account for the disappearance of one of the tenses in Latin, Teutonic, and Balto-Slavic (Lindsay, Latin Language, pp. 511-516).

śak, samdhātum nāśakah, III, I, 4; aśaknot-grahītum, II, 4, 3. This is consistent with the early date of the Āraṇyaka. On the other hand, as in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, īśvara is construed with the infinitive in 'toh, bhavitoh, II, 3, 5; 6; caritoh, I, I, I; praitoh, II, 3, 5. Mention should also be made of a series of datives formed from verbal roots by the affix 'tyai which serve as predicative datives signifying that to which an active tends, viz. klptyai, I, 3, 8; abhijityai, I, 1, 2; prajātyai, I, 2, 4; 3, I; 4; 4, I; samtatyai, II, 5; āptyai, I, I, 3; 2, I; 3; 3, 8; abhyāptyai, I, 4, 2; upāptyai, I, 3, 7; avaruddhyai, I, I, 2, &c.; apahatyai (probably), I, 2, 2. The use of these forms is not precisely that of infinitives, but it is analogous and forms a distinct feature of the style of the Āraṇyaka. Similar forms occur in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa.

The injunctive, except in the form of the second person plural imperative, occurs only in arjayan, I, 5, 2.

In the use of participles the most characteristic feature is their use in place of finite verbs, a use arising from their employment as predicative adjectives. In the following cases the substantive verb is expressed: uktam bhavati, I, 3, 8; II, 1, 5; 8; III, 2, 4; uditam bhavati, II, 1, 5; vișto 'smi, II, 2, 3; vyāptam bhavati, III, 1, 3; samāhitāh syuh, III, 2, 1; kṛtam bhavati, III, 2, 4; apihitā bhavati, III, 2, 5; anuṣaktā asat, I, 5, 2. In all these cases the expression means more than the corresponding form of the finite verb would have conveyed, and denotes a completed action whose results persist in the present. The accurate use of these forms is a distinct sign of early style. The same remark applies to most of the cases of the use without the copula: sthitam, I, I, I; pratisthitam, I, 1, 2; pratisthitah, I, 2, 2; 4, 2; pratisthita, I, 3, 4; vistah, vistah, I, 3, 8; āvistah, nivistāh, II, 1, 1; śritāh, I, 5, 3; II, 1, 4; channah, II, 1, 6; srstau, srstah, II, 1, 7; attam, II, 3, 6; avrtam, II, 1, 6; vistabdhah, vistabdhani, II, 1, 6; sitam, II, 1, 6; nivistah, II, 3, 3; samāhitah, III, 2, 1; vyastah, III, 2, 4; samparetah, III, 2, 4; in these instances the effect persists into the present, and no examples of a use like dṛṣṭā = 'she was seen ', occur. In II, 4, 3, yadi vācābhivyāhṛtam, &c., the sense approximates very closely to a mere present passive indicative.

There is no instance of the participle in vat formed from the past participle passive, which is so common later. That participle occurs also combined with the participle of \sqrt{as} : dutah satyah, I, 4, 1; siktam sat, I, 4, 2.

In one case the present participle is combined with the \sqrt{as} : tapann asmi, II, 2, 3, expressing a continuing present. It is used with \sqrt{man} in saknuvan manyeta-asaknuvantam manyeta, III, 1, 4, where the change of case is remarkable. Note also anudgṛhnan saṃdadhad varṣati, III, 1, 2.

The gerund appears equivalent to a present participle in himkṛtya pratipadyate, I, 3, 1, where the action of the verb and participle are simultaneous (cf. my note on the gerund, F. R. A. S., 1907, p. 164).

The gerundive karaṇṇyam is used with \sqrt{man} in III, 2, 4. Here may be noted the strange form abhivyāhārṣan, III, 1, 6, which has the sense of a future participle and the form of a participle of the s aorist. No correction seems probable as "hārṣyan (cf. Whitney, Translation of Atharvaveda, p. 846) is impossible.

The use of conjunctive particles is marked by the number of combinations allowed as contrasted with the comparatively barren character of the later language. In most of them ha plays some part. Examples are: ha vai, I, 2, I, &c.; II, I, 2, &c.; III, 1, 2, &c.; na ha vai, I, 2, I; 5, 2; III, 2, 2; u haiva, I, 3, 8; II, 2, 4; evam u haiva, I, 3, 4; 8; atho-ha vai, I, 4, 2; haiva, I, 5, 2; II, 1, 4; 8; 3, 7; 4, 3; u ha sma, I, 1, 1, &c.; evam u ha sma, III, I, 2; ha sma vai, I, I, 3; II, I, 5; 8; 2, 4; III, 2, 5; 6; ha sma, II, 3, 5; 7; III, 1, 3; 2, 1; ha tu, II, 3, 5; atha ha, III, 1, 1; 5; u ha-u, I, 3, 3; athāpi, III, 2, 4; atha khalu, III, 1, 5; 2, 5; athātah, I, 4, 1, &c.; atho, I, 1, 2, &c.; u khalu, III, 1, 6; u eva, II, 1, 1; 2, 1; III, 1, 3; tv eva, I, 1, 1; 5, 2; II, 1, 4; tasmād hāpy etarhi, II, 1, 8; utāpi, III, 1, 2; ahaiva (?), II, 1, 2.

Of single conjunctions the use of ca is most important. The regular use is ca-ca, a formalism distinctly indicative of age; see I, I, 4; 2, 3; 3, I; 2; 4; 5; 7; 5, I; II, I, 2; 6; 7; 8; 2, 2; 6, I; III, I, I; 6; 2, 3; and in I, I, 2, chandah is in apposition to brhatīm ca virājam ca. A single ca is practically restricted to numerals, e.g. vimšatiš ca, II, 3, 6. In I, 2, 2, is found ca-ca-ca; and in II, 6; III, 1, 6, ca-ca-ca-ca. In the Ślokas in II, 3, 8, appears yad-yac ca-yac ca-yad u ca. These facts render the usual division of vayāmsi vangāvagadhās cerapādāh, II, I, 1, into ca īrapādāh excessively improbable. Iva is used frequently (see reff. in Index V) in a sense hardly differing from eva, as is also the case in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, though it can always be translated 'as it were', merely modifying the literal sense of the verb; cf. I, I, 2:

cirataram iva vā-āgachanti. Vā has the sense 'indeed' as well as that of 'or', but a single vā is more common than a double vā, unlike the case of ca. Hanta is used with the subjunctive, II, I, 4, as in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. Iti has as usual a large variety of uses, and is never misplaced. Cana in III, I, 3; 4, following na appears to have the force of 'even'. Kāmam, I, I, I; III, 2, 4; vata, II, 2, 2; 4, 2; and vāva, I, 3, 4, &c., also occur. Aha is contrasted with u in II, 3, 7.

The same relative wealth is seen in the case of correlative particles. The most common form is vad-tad, denoting time or cause, or comparison, I, 1, 1; 3, 1; II, 1, 4; 2, 2; 5, 1; III, 1, 3; variants are yat-tena, III, 2, 6; yat-tasmāt, II, 1, 6; 2, 1; 2; 3, 6; III, 2, 6, more definitely signifying cause. So yad hi-tasmāt, II, 1, 2. A characteristic and frequent type of sentence is I, I, 3, tad yan mādhuchandasam śamsati sarveṣām kāmānām avaruddhyai; cf. I, 2, 2, &c. Yathā is usually balanced by evam, II, 1, 6; 3, 5; III, 1, 2; 2, 1; 5; it stands alone in yathandam, II, 4, 1; yathā svam angam, II, 5, 1. It is balanced by tathā in yathā prthivī tathā, &c., in II, 1, 2. In I, 3, 1, is yathā vai-evam. Yatra either has no correlative, as in III, 2, 4, or is balanced by tad, II, 1, 8; tad utāpi, III, 1, 2; tadā, III, 1, 6. Yadā is balanced by atha, II, 5; yadi ha vā api by haiva, II, I, 5; yad ha by haiva, II, 4, 3. In III, 1, 3; 4, occurs the phrase yathā tu kathā ca-brūyād-abhyāsam eva yat tathā syāt, where the words abhyāśam eva yat tathā practically form a compound adverb.

Finally it may be mentioned that the grammatical terms yoşan and vṛṣan are used for feminine and masculine, I, 2, 4, as in Aitareya Brāhmana, VI, 2.

A comparison of the forms and usages cited above with the valuable list of similar forms in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa given by Aufrecht 1 shows conclusively that the Āraṇyaka stands on nearly the same footing as the first five books of the Brāhmaṇa. It is not so old, e.g. it has fewer forms of the subjunctive, no infinitives in -e or -ah or -tavai, and none in toh after ā or purā, but it is not much younger. The use of the narrative tenses is some argument for its being older than Books VI-VIII, to which otherwise it stands close in point of language, though it is much less developed in style.

The conclusion arrived at above on grounds of doctrine that the Sankhāyana Āranyaka I, II, is later than the Aitareva Āranyaka I-III, is confirmed by the linguistic tests. Generally the two works correspond most closely in vocabulary, and confirm the view that they must be derived ultimately from a common source. For example, Dr. Friedländer well explains atiharan in Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, I. 7, as 'laying across', as it means in Aitareva Āranyaka, V, I, 4, and not, as explained by the commentator on the Śrauta Sūtra, in the sense 'withdrawing'. Probably the common source of the two Aranyakas had the word which has survived only in the Sūtra part of the Aitareva, but in both the Sūtra and Āranvaka of the Śānkhāvanas. With the forms quoted above may be compared the irregular sandhi nis tad, I, 8; the noun and adjective forms, ātman, I, 8; II, 1; etasyai devatāyai (gen.), I, 8; adhitarām, I, 7; udvatatarah, I, 7; the datives of end served, bhogyāya, I, 8; śāntyai, I, 4; bhisajyāyai, I, 4; avāptyai, āptyai, I, 2; II, 6; the constructions īśvarah-nāparājetoh, I, 8; gamisyantī bhavati, I, 8; upāptā āsan, I, 6; śamsisyate, I, 5 (cf. śamsisyantam, Aitareya, II, 2, 3); yathā-parivyayetdhatte, II, 16; I ad fin.; the use of the particles w vai, I, 1; 3; na ha vai, I, 8; ha vai, I, 5; 7; tathā ha, II, 1; u ha, I, 6; II, 10; the construction of the sentence with tad yad, II, 10: the irregular numeral sapta vimsatisatani, II, 10. As has been seen above the narrative perfect occurs in II, 6, the parallel passage to Aitareya, II, 2, 3, and it occurs also in II, 17 (provāca, jijīva), which may be compared with II, 2, 4, as far as the provaca is concerned. Whereas, however, the perfects in the Aitareya are marked exceptions, there is no other narrative tense in Śāńkhāyana. Further, the language of the Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka is much more accurate and modern than that of the Aitareya. Instead of sattrimsatam sahasrāni the correct sattrimsat is found, II, 17; there are no subjunctives other than those of the first person, which occur with ned, I, I, as in the Aitareya; there are no irregular forms either of nouns, pronouns, or verbs, save those mentioned above; the aorist is only represented by avocam in I, 6. Ca is used in sastrena ca vratacaryayā, I, 6, in a way not paralleled in the Aitareya, and in that chapter occurs the form vijijnasam eva cakre, a periphrastic perfect of the desiderative, a form elsewhere practically confined to the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa. After making full allowance for the difference of length, the posteriority of the Śānkhāyana is almost certain. If, as seems probable, brahma¹ and brāhmanī in I, 5; 6, refer to Brahman and his wife, who perhaps owes her origin to these passages, then a strong argument is added for the later date of the Śāṅkhāyana, since the Aitareya does not even certainly know Brahman, since the passages in which brahmā certainly appears refer to the Brahman priest, and in all the others brahma may equally well be read. Brahman, however, appears in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, V, 33, I. Books VII–XIII of the Śāṅkhāyana are still later.

Āranyaka V is written in the regular Sūtra style. It is practically impossible to understand it without a commentary, for as usual the rules are condensed into unintelligibility. Characteristic is the weight thrown on single words and phrases, e.g. ajapayā vṛtā, V, I, 4; asvāhākāraih, V, I, I, and the frequent use of gerunds, besides the piling up of adjectives and adverbial phrases.

In Sandhi it appears that au before u becomes ā, although here, as in Āraṇyaka I-III, the MSS. and the Ānandāśrama edition vary. Unusual forms are ātman, V, I, 6; uttare (loc.), V, I, 2; vadatyah, without n, V, I, I; ardharcyāh, V, 2, 5, meaning 'to be recited by half-verses'; brhatīkāram, V, I, 6; gāyatrīkāram, V, 3, I; trtīyavarjam, V, I, 6; samutah, V, I, 3. Of desideratives occur jijīviset, V, 3, I; jīgamiset, V, I, 4; and, as amended, a desiderative causal cikīrtayiset, V, 3, 3. The imperative prabrūtāt occurs, in a direction, in V, I, 5. The feminine genitive form is āh, not ai.

More characteristic is the pregnant use of case constructions, when for the sake of brevity everything is made to depend on the mere case relation, e.g., (accusative) avabṛthaṃ preṅkhaṃ hareyuḥ, II, 3, 2; apra-kampi, V, I, 3, in quasi-apposition to the sentence; (dative) niṣkevalyāya stuvate, V, I, 5; avaśyakarmaṇe jigamiṣet, V, I, 4; (abl.) hotrāś catur-viṃśāt, V, I, I; (gen.) mahāvratasya pañcaviṃśatiṃ sāmidhenyaḥ, V, I, I, where the irregular pañcaviṃśatim is also noteworthy; (abl. and gen.) caturviṃśān marutvatīyasyātānaḥ, V, I, I; (loc.) dīkṣite yajamānaśabdaḥ, V, I, 5; na vatse ca na tṛtīye ('in the case of'), V, 3, 3; (loc. and instr.) anyāsu cet samāmnātāsu rājanena sāmnā stuvīran, V, I, 6; cf. bhuyāsīṣu cet stuvīran, V, 3, 2; other uses are the dative after dhatte with sam, saṃ pakṣayoḥ patanāya, V, I, 6; an apposition of whole and part śākhayā mūladeśena, V, I, 4; and abuddham-asya, V, 3, 2. Very strange is śriyam gor aśwam ātman dhatte, V, 1, 6, where goh may be a possessive genitive or a genitive of description.

In the verb occur two subjunctives in directions put in the mouth of the sacrificer, parivrajātha, V, I, I; ninayātha, V, I, 2. In V, 3, 2, purpose is expressed by yathā na with hanisyasīti, a curious but not rare (e.g. in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa) use. The optative occurs in directions frequently, and in both protasis and apodosis of conditions, (a) with potential force in both, e.g. yāvatīr-āvaperan tāvanti-jijīviṣet, V, 3, I; (b) with imperative force in the apodosis (with yatra-tatra, and yatra tu-kāmaṃ-tatra), V, 3, 3; (with yadī), V, I, 4; 3, 3; (with ced), V, I, 6; (with a relative), V, I, 5. In V, I, 4, yadā śrāmyet is probably indefinite; in V, 3, 3, yady api-adhīyāt-na snātako bhavati, the indicative in the apodosis probably expresses the certainty of the result; in V, 3, 2, the apodosis to cyaveta ced is curtailed; so also in V, 2, I.

With regard to participles jāgarito bhavati, V, I, I, and upaklpto bhavati, V, I, 3, both denote a past action resulting in a present state. Upālambhanīyaḥ, V, I, I, is a sign of comparatively late date, the earlier form being upālambhyaḥ, cf. Śānkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, I. No infinitives occur, but many gerunds, e.g. V, 3, 3, and in all about 36 instances are found. In place of an infinitive there is in V, 3, 2, ījyāyai sampreṣitaḥ. The past participle passive in yathetam, V, I, 2; 3, is simply the equivalent of a past indicative.

The use of particles is comparatively restricted. There occur the following combinations: atha ha, V, 2, 4; ihaiva, iho eva, V, 1, 6; ha sma, V, 3, 3; haiva, V, 3, 3; no eva, V, 3, 3; iva is equal to eva in V, 3, 2; aha occurs in V, 1, 6; khalu in V, 1, 6; kāmam in V, 3, 3; punar api in V, 1, 4. In the case of ca the single use is the more common, as compared with Āraṇyaka I-III; in na vatse ca na tṛtīye, V, 3, 3, the ca may connect with the previous sentence, or be like sastrena ca brahmacaryayā in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 6. In V, 1, 1, etais caivāsvāhākārair (mantrair) ehy-madhu iti ca occurs. In V, 3, 3, is na-cana.

Among other signs of late date may be reckoned the frequency of the locative absolute, the use of adverbial expressions like antarvedi, V, I, I; anuparikramaṇam, V, I, 4; viharaṇaprabhṛti, V, I, I; ananvṛcam, V, I, I; the plural of authorship as found in nidarśanāyodāhariṣyāmaḥ, V, 3, 3; and the use of gerunds like nāpitena kārayitvā, V, 3, 3.

The same style and diction are found in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta Sūtra, which, like Āraṇyaka V, consists of a disconnected string of sentences, which, when consisting of more than a few words, are constructed by heaping adjectives on adjectives, adding adverbial phrases, using gerunds, and piling up cases in different senses. There is no independent evidence to show that there is any great difference in time between the Āraṇyaka V and the Śrauta Sūtra.

There seems no reason to suppose that the Āranyaka V is not more ancient than the Śānkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra XVII, XVIII. Hillebrandt has, indeed, suggested that the Śānkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra is older than Āśvalāyana, and although the last two Adhyāyas may be of different date from the first sixteen, still they are hardly likely to be later, so that, if Hillebrandt's conclusions are sound, the Sūtra XVII, XVIII, will be older than the Aranyaka V. But Hillebrandt's reasons are not convincing.1 He points out that, as Weber has said, parts of the Sūtra are written in the Brahmana style. This refers mainly to Adhyayas XV. XVI, which contain inter alia the Sunahsepa legend. But even assuming that these books are part of the original Sūtra, it cannot be denied that the version of the legend is in no way original; it is merely the same as that in the Aitareva Brahmana, and differs so little from it that both versions must be descended from a common source. The part of the Aitareya where it occurs is decidedly later than the first five books. The Brāhmana-like style is therefore not to be attributed to Suyajña, the author of the Sūtra. Secondly, he refers to the description of the Aśvamedha and of the Purusamedha as signs of early age. But this argument depends greatly for its force on acceptance of the theory that Rgveda, X, 18, 8, can be explained from Srauta Sūtra, XVI, 13, and this view is not now usually accepted.2 Thirdly, he points out that the Sūtra is not written with the full brevity of the latest Sūtra style. This is true, but the argument is really in favour of the priority of Āranyaka V. For that work is written in a style less condensed than that of Suyajña, and certainly less condensed than that of Books XVII. XVIII. Further, it must be admitted that as a Sūtra these books are much superior to the Aranyaka V. The ritual directions are far more precise and detailed, contrasting with the brevity of the directions in the Aranyaka, which mainly concerns itself with a description of the litanies. In the Sūtra the whole process is gone through methodically while the Aranyaka covers only a part of the field. The style is of the usual Sūtra type; it is not in any marked manner more recent than that of the Aranyaka, but it contains practically no irregular forms. With the forms quoted above from the Āranyaka the following facts may be compared. The Sandhi of a+r is ar, XVII, 5, 9; 7, 8; of $\bar{a}u+u$ is \bar{a} , XVII, 10, 5; 16, 5; while tasyāk occurs in XVII, 3, 2, as always in Aitareya Āranyaka V, tasyai is found XVIII, 2, 4; 19, and prathamāyai, dvitīyāyai, uttamāyai, XVIII, 20. In XVII, 3, 12; 15, occur ghātarīh and ghātakarkarīh, nominatives with the s preserved. The locative is used with \structure stu in XVIII, 2, 2; 22, 7, and extended to \(kr \) in atichandahsu kuryuh, XVIII, 22. 0. Adverbial phrases besides antarvedi are prasalavi, XVII, 14, 16; 15, 4; antahsadah, XVII, 4, 3; nānā badhnanti, XVII, 3, 8; while jaghanena is used with the accusative, XVII, 5, 8.

Of verbal forms may be noted pratyagrnītāt, XVII, 14, 3; prabrūtāt, XVII, 14, 4; vininīṣamānaḥ, I, 7, 3; paryeṣyanto bhavanti, XVII, 4, 8; bhoksyamānā(h) bhavanti, dhaksyanto (bhavanti), XVIII, 24, 14; 15; the gerundives prāyanīyah, udayanīyah, XVIII, 24, 2; kāryam, XVII, 6, 2; deyam, XVIII, 24, 32; the gerunds in am, punarādāyam, XVIII, 4, 3; 4; 5, 3; 4; kakupkāram, XVIII, 4, 3; 4; 5, 3; 4; paiktišamsam, XVIII, 6, 4; 14, 4; 17, 5; gāyatrīśaṃsam, XVIII, 16, 1; and the late simple form samsam, XVIII, 16, 2. Of the uses of the optative that in clauses of purpose with na is very frequent; in XVII, 10, 8, yadi-syāt-mimīte, it is purely indefinite; in yadi-na vidyeta ya etām dhiyam kuryāt sa etat kuryāt, XVII, 5, 4, the second optative is one of characteristic, 'one who can do.' In XVIII, 24, 15, yadi dhaksyanto (bhavanti)-syāt, the protasis is future in fact and the apodosis is equivalent to a mild future. In XVIII, 23, 4, yadi yajñāyajñīyam-kuryus-tasyoktau stotriyānurūpau, the real apodosis is suppressed. Of particles may be noticed the use of api vā, XVIII, 3, 4, and of yady u vai, XVIII, 7, 17; 23, 5. It may be noted as a sign of more recent date that very few particles occur, ha only in XVII, 13, 8; u ha in XVIII, 2, 3; 5. In XVII, 9, 7; XVIII, 22, 10, is found the remarkable phrase iti nv ā u Marutvatīyam, Vaišvavedam; in XVII, 1, 5, athāpi; in XVIII, 20, 6, atho.

of date somewhat later than the Āranyaka V, the Brhaddevatā, which shows a style much more modern, even despite poetic licences, than the Āranyaka I-III, but which is still in vocabulary an archaic work, coeval in date with the early epic. An interesting list of its irregularities is given by Prof. Macdonell,1 but they are rather of the epic type, e.g. use of "ya for "tvā in the gerund, nominative for accusative, unaugmented pasts, &c. It is significant that (1) no genitives or ablatives for a, t, t. stems in ai occur; (2) there are no subjunctive forms other than first person forms; (3) the infinitive in "tum is common and no other form is found, while in VI, 37, even saptukāmah occurs. Significant also is the use of the narrative tenses. The agrist occurs only in the later narrative use and is rare, being formed only from the roots gā, bhū, vac, vadh. The perfect surpasses the imperfect in frequency as a narrative tense, for in some 340 lines of parrative 2 there occur 202 perfects to 150 imperfects, and the proportion elsewhere is not materially different. Further, the periphrastic perfect with āsa is frequent, kāmayām āsa, VI, 76; utsādayām āsa, VII, 53; šiksayām āsa, III, 84; bodhayām āsa, VI, 37; varayām āsa, VI, 38; chandayām āsuh, VII, 157; prasādayām āsa, VIII, 3; kīrtayām āsa, VI, 24; prasvāpayām āsa, VI, 13; daršayām āsa, V, 63; while the use of kr is very rare, upāmantrayām cakre, V, 20. Further, the past participles passive are freely used to denote action either past or present in place of finite verbs, and use is made of the new participial form in vat, krtavat occurring in VI, 41; VII, 58; VIII, 18; drstavān, V, 58; drstavatī, VIII, 33; prstavān, V, 71; labdhavān, V, 66; hatavān, VI, 152, &c. Prefixes are not separated from the verbs with which they are connected. Particles are much restricted in number, and combinations are limited. Mention may also be made of the great development in grammatical doctrine seen not only in the discussion in I as to nouns, &c., and in II, 93, as to particles, but in the use of such forms as avi, locative of au, the case termination, ayoh from e, the sign of the dual, idi, the root id, and so on. Indeed it is hard to resist the conclusion that the bulk of the Āranyaka I-III must lie before the more systematic treatment of grammatical questions in Yāska's Nirukta, and a new support is derived for the giving an early date to these books, since Yaska cannot well be later than 500 B. C.

See the fourth Index to Prof. Macdonell's Brhaddevata.

It has been noted that Book III presupposes the Padapatha of the Rgveda 1 and also the Kramapātha. It is therefore later than Śākalya, the author of the Padapatha. This, however, leaves the date undetermined, since Śākalya's date is still uncertain. Geldner a has recently argued that he dates from the later Vajasaneva period, and not as supposed by Oldenberg from the end of the Brahmana period, and that he was a contemporary of the Āruni and Yājñavalkya known from the Brāhmanas. But it is extremely hard to reconcile this with the facts that the Padapatha presupposes the Samhita, that the Samhita exhibits a text which cannot be reconciled with the statements of the Brāhmana texts 3 as to the number of syllables in word groups, in consequence of the Sandhi carried out in the Samhita. The evidence, therefore, is certainly in favour of Oldenberg's hypothesis, but it leaves the lower date of Śākalya vague. He is, however, cited by Yāska and older than Saunaka, so that in all probability he must date not later than 600 B.C. The Āranyaka III need not be much later than Śākalya; and if it is, as seems most probable, earlier than Yaska, it may be dated from about 600-550 B. C. It may be added that it must be older than the Taittirīva Upanisad and the Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, VII, VIII (see note on III, I, 2).

These chronological results are admittedly uncertain. They are based on the views that (1) the Āraṇyaka I-III is older than Buddhism by reason of the undeveloped character of its philosophic content; (2) that these books are older than the Bṛhaddevatā and Śaunaka, who may be dated about 450-400 B.C., and probably older than Yāska, who can hardly be brought down lower than 550-500 B.C.; (3) that they are older than the developed systems of philosophy whose beginnings are at any rate known to Āpastamba, whom Bühler dates in the fourth or fifth centuries B.C., and who cannot well, on any view, be later than 300 B.C., and that they are older than the Atharvaśiras Upaniṣad, known, it seems, to Gautama, who is older than Āpastamba by some generations; (4) that they are older than Pāṇini, Kātyāyana, and Patañjali, who cannot well-be dated later than 300, 200, and 100 B.C. respectively; (5) that this view; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, lxv, n. 7.

³ Cf. Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, pp. 49, 50, and note on III, 1, 2.

Books I and II date from the later Brāhmaņa 1 period, but are probably older than the Śatapatha Brāhmaņa, parts of the Jaiminīya Brāhmaņa and Upaniṣad, the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa, and the Chāndogya Upaniṣad, and so belong to a comparatively early date.

The verses and sentences quoted contain, despite their brevity, a remarkable set of old forms. The Ślokas in II, 3, 8, and the prose directions in Āranyaka V, are more properly treated as above as part of the main work, with which the latter no doubt coincide in time, while the former are not very much older. Of these forms may be mentioned tanum, tanvām (loc.), but tanvah (gen.) in I, 3, 5; sarvasyai (gen.) in the verse in III, 2, 5, which is a sign of more recent origin; the compounds Várunaväyvitamam, prthivyuparám, brāhmanábhartrkam, varsápavitram, V, 3, 2; the forms ārájah (?), tújah, áti vyáthih, rántyam, vánam (?). ádhrsah, in V, 2, 1. Among verbal forms are the third person singulars iśe, vide, IV, 1; the first person stuse, IV, 1. The curious forms rñjáse, sámnyase, bhúvah, IV, 1; duhām, V, 3, 2; the subjunctives ánusamsisah, parŝat, IV, 1; jújosat, V, 2, 2; vibhajātha, V, 1, 1; the injunctives vidāh (?), IV, 1; sprsat (?), V, 2, 2; kartana, V, 2, 2; and perhaps āvīt, V, I, I; the precatives, apyasam, V, 3, 2; bhūyāsam, V, I, I. Of noun constructions may be noted, yaja somānām, V, 3, 2; svar yajñam vaksyantim, V, 1, 5; vaśan anu, IV, 1; pratí vam rjisi, V, 2, 1. In V, 2, 2, kartana seems used instead of a dual; in IV, 1, bravāvahai needs explanation. In V, 1, 1, occur antariksam ivānāpyam-bhūyāsam, &c., where the predicate adjective follows the gender and number of the nearest noun, the object of comparison. The uses of svam in that passage, of marīcayah, and of ináh and sámajah in V, 2, 1, are all unusual. The question of the date of the verses in IV, I, has been dealt with in the note on that passage, and cf. F. R. A. S., 1907. pp. 224 sq.; Oldenberg, Gött. Gel. Ans., 1907, pp. 215 sq.

⁴ °मा३म् D. ⁵ This occurs in A, D, E, F, G, H, I, K, M, N,O, Q, R, S, T, U.
In T, however, it is placed at the beginning of the Upanisad, and in S at the end of Āraṇyaka V, and see also note on I, I, I. It does not occur in most MSS. of Sankara's commentary, and it is omitted even in L, which is a complete MS. of all the text. It appears clearly not to have been known to Sankara. It is, however, known to Anandatīrtha in his own commentary in the MSS., H and O. In the edition, U. of Anandatīrtha's commentary on Sankara, it is said: पष्टबाइस भाष सप्टलादात्मतलाप्रतिपादनाच श्रीमक्डङ्कराचार्येनं क्रतमिखेतद्रोकात एव चायते । सा तु टीका दीपिकातोऽभिन्नैवेति चात्वाच न संगृहीता। M, N, Q, and apparently Max Müller's MS., S. B. E., I, 246, n. 2, have एवं षष्ठि ध्याचे तत्वविद्यां परिसमाध सप्तमे (so N, Q: सप्तम् श्रीमत्परिवाजकाचार्य add. M) शान्तिकरो मन्तः पठितः वाङ्की मनसीत्वादि । तस्य सष्टार्थलादात्वात्रतिपादकलाच भाषकरिर्न वा-खातः । स मन्दानां वोधाय दीपिकाकारोक्तरीत्वा व्याख्यायते । यथोक्त॰ &c., exactly as in Sayana's commentary. The end is दति श्रीसप्तमाध्यायस्य दीपिका संपूर्णा M; इति सप्तमाध्यायदीपिका समाप्ता N. The question arises whether this wholesale borrowing was due to Anandatirtha or not. On the whole the evidence is against the view that it was. (1) It compels us to date Anandatīrtha after Sāyaṇa, which is (a) contradictory to the accepted dates of either writer, and (b) cannot be reconciled with the fact that Sayana sometimes follows Anandatirtha closely in his commentary, cf. on II, 4, 3. (2) It is of course clear from the consensus of MS. evidence that the explanation of the last section was added at a comparatively early date to Anandatīrtha's commentary, but this could easily have happened, and as a matter of fact the alteration needed to introduce the extract was very slight, as Sayana begins: तलिक्वां परिसमाप्य सप्तमे शान्तिकरं मन्त्रं पठित । वाङ्गे मनसीति । The addition was very natural, since the fact that the Adhyāya is recognized by Anandatīrtha in his own commentary shows that it had already in his time become a recognized part of the Aranyaka. In Jones' MS. (Tawney and Thomas, Catalogue of Two Collections of Sanskrit MSS., p. 2) we have the commentary of Sankara without the fikā, followed by 'Madhava's ' commentary as in the edition. After II, 7, E continues : हरि: आं। अधातसंहिताया उपनिषत् । वाङ्मी मनसि प्रतिष्ठिता । कोऽयमात्मिति वयम्-पासिह । पुरुषि ह वा अयमादितो गर्भी भवति । स ईचतिमे नु लोकास लोकपालास । ता एता देवतास्तृष्टाः । आत्मा वा इदमेक एवाय आसीत् । तवैते स्रोकाः । तद्वा इदं बहतीसहस्रं संपन्नं तबग्रस्स इन्द्रः। तदा इदं बहतीसहस्रं संपन्नं तस्य वा एतस्य। तदा इदं बृहतीसहस्रं संपन्नं तदीतदेवे । यो ह वै यज्ञे यज्ञं वेद । स एव पुरुष-स्समुद्रः। तस्य य त्रात्मानमाविसारां वेद। यो ह वा त्रात्मानं पञ्चविधमुक्यं वेद। तद्वा इदं बृहतीसहस्रं संपन्नं तस्य यानि व्यञ्जनानि। विश्वामिनं ह्योतदहः श्रांसिष्यन्तम। एष उ एव विश्वदाजः। एष इदं लोकमभ्यार्चत्। आपा ३: इति आप इति। अधातो

These verses occur also in the Kashmir MS. of the Revedic Khilas (=K), which (V, 4) contains Āraṇyaka IV; in Sāmaveda, Naigeyaśākhā, ed. Ajmere, 1901, p. 48; in Sāmaveda, Āraṇyasaṃhitā, ed. by Fortunatov, p. 74; and in Peterson, Second Report, p. 97 (=P). K reads in v. 1 मधन, which saves the metre; in vv. 3, 4, विज्ञन before ऋसे, treating ऋ as equivalent to दि; in v. 4 K, P, SV. read रिये, probably a mere correction for the difficult राय:; in v. 5 SV. has खुंदि रिय, SV. Ār. खुंदि रिय; in vv. 6 and 7 SV. has खुंदि for पूर्वद; in v. 7 दिय: for सिध:; in v. 8 अदिवार मुन्नेदाय सुन्न. In v. 8 K, P have भूखत, and SV. वभी for रिय. In v. 9 K, P have मन्देस, an obvious correction, see my note, J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 224, SV. has खुंदि and ऋदुः. The second पुरीषपद is put third in K; the third is omitted in P and SV., and the last six in SV. In the second last K, P read विश्वय. The variants of the SV. appear all to be in the nature of attempted corrections, and the Aitareya seems to have possessed the oldest form of the words known to us, though it cannot obviously be the original form, as Oldenberg points out.

With regard to the accents, in v. 2 ° द्वम is unaccented in K and P as in R; R has न् दर्थ. In v. 3 पित्र is unaccented in K, which is most probably wrong. In v. 5 both K and R have चिकित्वो, P ° कित्वाँ, while K has नयं, and R has खुषे. In v. 9 K has गक्ति, which cannot well be correct, and अद्याः, also unaccented. In the पुरीष-पदानि R has एवा, which cannot be accepted, while K has हि unaccented, which is inconsistent. K has also no pluti in the case of होन्द्र । हि पूषन् । and हि देवाः । It accents agná 3 i । viṣṇá 3 ú । of which one or both must be wrong, and it twice has एववा. It has आयो मन्यायं। The accentuation of the first five पुरीषपदानि is very remarkable, and can only be explained by taking हि as unaccented both when combined and when alone, and by holding that the second एवा in एवें is unaccented. In the Ajmere ed. of the Mahānāmnīs the पुरीषपदानि appear as एवा हो ६३६३६३६३ ३ ९ ३ ९ ३ ९ ३ ९ ३ ९ ३ ९ ३ ९ ६ ३ ९ ६ ६ व्याः । In P they are very corrupt.

E omits accents, and R has the accents in many cases obviously wrong. In the case of the double accent of compounds, some of these may be correct; similar instances—some clearly wrong—occur, however, in the Kashmir MS. of the Khilas of the Rgveda, as Scheftelowitz (p. 39) points out. AITAREYA ĀRANYAKA

ĀRANYAKA I

ADHYĀYA 1.

Now begins the Mahāvrata¹ rite. Indra having slain Vṛtra became great. When he became great, then there came into being the Mahāvrata. Therefore the Mahāvrata ceremony bears the name of Mahāvrata. Some² say the priest should make two recitations with the ghee-offering for that day, but the established rule is one. He who desires prosperity should use the hymn, 'To Agni, to this god of yours, (I sing aloud)' (RV., III, 13). He who desires increase should use the hymn, 'The guest of all your folk' (RV., VIII, 74). For the folk indeed are increase and therefore he gains increase.³ Some say that one should not use that

The two Ājyas recommended are RV., VIII, 74 and VII, 1; the reference is to the view of the Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 2. The former is the prākṛta because it is an Ājya Śastra in the Agniṣṭoma, the latter the vaikṛta because it is an Ājya Śastra in the Viśvajit (see Kauṣītaki Brāhmana, XXV, 11). The Aitareya holds that only the vaikṛta, VII, 1, should be employed, according to Sāyana because the Agniṣṭoma which is the prakṛti has twelve Śastras, and if there were two Ājya Śastras the Mahāvrata would have thirteen. VII, 1, which is the Ājya Śastra, is also at the same time a kāmya ājyaiastra used by those who desire proper food (see I, 1, 2).

This is the rendering adopted by Max Müller from Säyana, who explains that Vaisyas making large earnings offer much taxation (karam api bahulam prayachanti, which Max Müller takes as 'increase their capital', but this is in view of prayachanti (Säyana on Aitareya Brāhmana, VII, 29) hardly possible). Perhaps it would be possible to translate: 'For he (Agni) is the increase of the folk and so he (the sacrificer) becomes prosperous,' but it is probable that the commentator has preserved the correct rendering, though of course in the original the vito vito is in the genitive. For taxation, cf. Fick, Die sociale Gliederung, pp. 79, 80; Rhys Davids, Buddhitt India, p. 48; Āpastamba Dharma Sūtra, II, 10, 26, 9, &c. Already in the RV., I, 65, 7 (see Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 56, and Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, xvi) the king devours the rich. In a series of passages (XI, 5, 7, 1; XIII, 5, 4, 24; XIII, 1, 5, 4; V, 4, 2, 3) in the Satapatha Brähmana, cited by Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 173, 174) the king receives the people, save only the Brahmins, as his food, because they pay him taxes. So often in the epic the-exactions of kings are mentioned, cf. Hopkins, India Old and New, pp. 240, 243, n. 3; Keith, Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, p. 68.

hymn because there is in it the word 'guest', and a guest is liable to go begging '. But (Mahidāsa') said that one should use that hymn. For he, who becomes good and attains excellence, is indeed a guest. For him who is not so men do not deem worthy of hospitality. Therefore one may by all means use that hymn. If he does use it, he should place first the tristich, 'To him, best Vṛṭra-slayer, are we come' (RV., VIII, 74, 4-6). For eager for this day they worship the whole year,

It is a construction peculiarly common in the Brahmanas and disappears later.

It will be seen that in the text throughout padam bhavati and so forth have been printed, m being in every case when final save at the end of a sentence, altered to anusvara, and further, in all cases where m occurs as the end of the first member of a compound (e.g. samo) m is used. It is clear that, in a text of the Brahmana period, before mutes generally the appropriate nasal should be used; before y, l, v either anusvara or those semivowels nasalized; and before r, i, s, s, h anusvāra, with m in pausā (see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 212, 213; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 333, 334; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, pp. 53, 68), but this course merely adds to the unnecessary difficulties of the Devanagari script (the continual use of which is an unfortunate necessity), and I have followed most editors, including Prof. Macdonell in his Brhaddevatā, in using anusvāra before mutes, semivowels and sibilants, as allowed by Pānini, VIII, 4, 59, and approved by Whitney, §§ 71, 73. The practice of writing m before labials while using anusvara before the other mutes is convenient but illogical, and has not been followed. I have also written ch for cch of the MSS, (with many exceptions) except where cch represents an assimilated letter + ch. It is no doubt the case that ch in Sanskrit is rarely, if ever (Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 155, allows puccha as representing kh, but Dr. Scheftelowitz rejects the view), a representation of any save a conjunct consonant in Indo-Germanic (either s+kh or (as Dr. Scheftelowitz, in his forthcoming Zur Stammbildung in den indo-germanischen Sprachen, tries to prove) s+k, normally). But there is no proof that cch represents this more properly than ch (the fact of position is of no importance), and the use of cch for the simple letter prevents any distinction between e.g. t+ch and ch alone. For this reason I follow Aufrecht (in his Rgveda), Bloomfield, v. Schroeder, Knauer (see his Manava Grhya Sutra, pp. xxxiv, xxxv, with all his MSS.), Macdonell, and others, in writing ch for the simple letter. Levi, Whitney's and Lanman's use (in the Translation of the Atharvaveda) of ch even for t+ch (for f) is the opposite extreme (cf. Prof. Macdonell, J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 1105).

5 The text has only: 'He said.' Sayana explains by atithipadatatparyabhijnah siddhanti.

Clearly it must be Mahidasa Aitareya. Cf. II, 3, 5, n. 4; III, 2, 6, n. 13.

6 It is not obvious how atithih is thus interpreted. Sāyaṇa interprets bhavati as sanmār-gavartī bhavati. Max Müller says one would expect yo vā atati (cf. Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 126; but see Hopkins, A. J. P., XIV, 12), and suggests that the obtaining of distinction is probably derived from ati above in atithi. Another explanation seems possible. bhū in the Brāhmaṇas has in composition the sense 'obtain' (cf. Sāyaṇa's rendering—bhūtim prāpnoti—of Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 23, 3). √at according to the lexicographers has the same sense, so that here yo vai bhavati is perhaps explained by yaḥ ireṣṭhatām ainute. Kāmam below is already found in Mantra, cf. Delbrück, Altindishte Syntax, pp. 184 sq. For the duty of hospitality, cf. Taittirīya Upaniṣad, III, 10.

and now they draw nigh to it. The next three tristichs begin with anuştubh verses. Now the gāyatrī verse is brahman, the anuştubh is Vāc, and so he unites Vāc and brahman. He who desires glory should use the hymn, Agni is aroused by the fuel of the folk (RV., V, I). He who desires children and cattle should use the hymn, the wise sacrificer has been born (RV., II, 5).

The Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 2, ignores vv. 13-15 of RV., VIII, 74, which form a dānastuti of Śrutarvan Ārkṣya. The reference here shows clearly that the Aitareya takes the same view of these verses. Verses 8, 9, 11, 12 are in gäyatrī, 14, 15 in anustubh.

* Sāyaṇa gives as reasons for these identifications that the parabrahma is set forth by means of the gāyatrī (RV., III, 62, 10), and that, like this anustubh, Vāc has four forms (RV., I, 164, 45; Nirukta, XIII, 9, &c.; Z.D. M. G., XXXIX, 58), (parā paiyantī madhyamā vaikharī, later, see J. A. O. S., XXII, 69; Mallinātha on Kumārasambhava, II, 17). There is no reason to suppose that the identification of Vāc and anustubh and gāyatrī and brahman has any basis beyond mere fancy; for different identifications, cf. J. A. O. S., XVI, 3 sq. The original sense of brahman (so throughout to contrast with Brahman, the god) must clearly have been prayer or spell (cf. II, 3, 8), the two ideas blending indefinitely since the prayer could be regarded as a spell and vice versa (Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, p. 315). Deussen's view of brahman (Allg. Gesch. der Phil., I, 1, 241 sq.) as 'der zum Heiligen, Göttlichen emporstrebende Wille des Menschen' is quite untenable, see Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 211, 212. That Vāc is brahman was the doctrine of Jitvan Śailini and it is set forth by Yājāavalkya, Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 1, 2, and the identification is developed in the late Logos doctrine. Cf. also Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa, XX, 14, 2; Chāndogya Upaniṣad, VII, 2, 2; Hopkins, India Old and New, p. 147, n. 1, with whose view of the slight importance of the Logos doctrine in this form I agree.

⁹ Sāyaṇa concludes his commentary on this Khaṇḍa by explaining that, though by the godohananyāya (cf. for another nyāya on this, Mimāṃsā Sūtra, IV, 3, 10) the kāmyasūktas are intended primarily for the gaining of desired results, nevertheless they make up the sacrifice and do not leave it imperfect, on the principle kāmyena nityasiddhiḥ. This nyāya arises, he explains, from the rule on the new and full moon sacrifice, camasenāpaḥ pranayed godohanena paiukāmasya, where as the sacrifice can be carried out camasena, the godohanena is merely purusārthatvam (see Jacob, Maxims, 3rd series).

¹⁰ In the references in the translation to the RV., where no line is mentioned, it is to be understood that the whole hymn as accepted by the Āranyaka is meant. When only special verses are meant their numbers are given.

II For the Santi verses and their authenticity, see Crit. Note. The verse in S satadhāram is RV., III, 26, 9; āvadams, II, 43, 3; tvam Agne, VIII, 11, 1; bhadram, X, 20, 1; sam no Mitrah, I, 90, 9. sivā occurs in Tattirīya Āraņyaka, I, 1, cf. I, 21; 31, as sivā nah santamā bhavantu \lambda divyā āpa bsadhayah \sumrdīkā Sarasvati (so accented in the Ānandāšrama ed.), and as here in that Āraṇyaka, IV, 42; Lāṭyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, V, 3, 2 (with v.l. samdašas). The Atharvaveda, VII, 68, 3, has in the last pāda, mā te yuyoma samdršas 'may we not be separated from thy sight', which explains the origin of the quite unintelligible vyoma. The verse tae cakṣur occurs also in Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, IV, 42, where will be found RV., IV, 31, 1-3. For oṣṭhāpio, cf. III, 2, 5, n.

In the Śāńkhāyana Grhya Sūtra, VI, 4 and 5, verses are given to accompany the recitation of the Samhitās (Śāńkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, VIII), and the formulae are placed at the beginning ^{*} Cf. also v. Schroeder, Die Tübinger Katha-Handschriften, p. 115, and the Sänti prefixed to the Kausītaki Upanisad in the Ānandāśrama ed.

2. He who desires proper food 1 should use the hymn, 'Agni men kindle from the twigs with splendour' (RV., VII, 1).2 For Agni is the eater of food. In the other chants accompanying the ghee-offerings men approach as it were more slowly to Agni, but here they come upon Agni at the very beginning; at the very beginning he 3 obtains proper food, at the very beginning they smite away of the text in the Aranyaka thus: rtam vadisyāmi satyam vadisyāmi | adabdham mana isiram caksuh I sūryo jyotisām irestho I dīkse mā mā himsīh I Other verses are prescribed to precede adabdham, &c., in the case of the Sakvarīs and of the Māhāvrata, the Mantha (Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, IX), &c. In Khanda 5 are given the explatory formulae: uditah sukriyam dadhe 1 tad aham ātmani dadhe I and then other differing formulae (see Oldenberg's ed., pp. 163 sq., and S. B. E., XXIX, 145 sq.) Oldenberg renders ud itah, &c., as 'From here I take out the brightness (!)', but I would much rather take uditah (and the version in the Anandasrama ed., p. 295, accents úditah) as 'He, arisen, gives forth brightness. That (brightness) I appropriate to myself', referring to the beneficial and purifying effects of the radiance of the sun (cf. Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 31). Oldenberg also takes sūryo, &c., as predicate to adabdham, &c., which is hardly necessary. The phrase sarvah, &c., probably means, 'I arise whole (possibly with a suggestion of salvus, i. e. complete, perfect, healthy), with breath, with strength; may prosperity attend me; may the gods attend me.' The assertion, uttisthāmi, may be based on the magic principle exhibited in faith-cures. The other clauses offer no difficulty, but bhūmim, &c., is obscure. ida (unaccented in R) may be nom. to upaspried, namah being interjected, but this is very unlikely, as agne ida occurs alone (see Crit. Note). It may be, 'Honour (to thee), O Agni, and oblation,' but this is merely possible.

In the Mānava Srauta Sūtra, II, 1, 2, 36 (cited by Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, pp. 40*, 484*) occurs: adabdham caksur aristam manah sūryo jyotisām iresthah dīkse mā mā hāsīt satapā, which illustrates the position here of caksuh. In Taittirīya Samhitā, III, 1, 1, 2: dīkse mā mā hāsīh occurs. The exact words used here are found in Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, VII, 1;

Sāyana explains annādya as a compound of anna and ādya. Max Müller follows this view, cf. Monier-Williams' Dict. s. v. adya. But it is surely preferable all through to take it as an abstract of annāda, an eater of food, with the sense 'eating of food' which passes into the idea 'food', or 'proper food', as annāda has the force of 'a healthy man'. For the formation see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1212. Oertel, on Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, II, II,

10, renders 'food-eating'.

² Sāyaṇa points out that the hymn is both a nitya and a kāmya hymn. It is hardly correct to say, as Max Müller does, that it is an obligatory part of the sacrifice, since, as we have seen in I, I, I, the kāmyasūktāni are sufficient to complete the ceremony. What Sāyaṇa means is that it is both the normal form and also a form for a special purpose. He compares the use of dadhi in the Agnihotra both as normal and where strength is desired, and the use of khādira in the Agnihotra both as normal and when might is wished. The possible forms then are: (1) this hymn as normal; (2) this hymn as annādyakāma; (3) any of the other kāmyasūktāni enumerated in I, I, I. In RV., VIII, I, vv. I-18 are in virāj metre, the rest in tristubh, which explains the reference to these metres below.

evil. Because of the words (RV., VII, I, Ib), 'with moving of the arms they bring to birth' Agni,' the hymn has the word 'birth' in it. Verily the sacrificer is born from this day, and so the hymn has the word 'birth'. There are four verses (in the tristubh), cattle are four-footed, the verses serve to win cattle. There are three verses (in the virāj), these are the threefold worlds, the verses serve to gain these worlds. These two verses form a support. Man has a double support, cattle have four feet. The hymn places the sacrificer with his double support among the four-footed cattle. The verses if said straight on number twenty-five. Man consists of twenty-five elements. He has ten fingers, ten toes, two legs, two arms, and the trunk is the twenty-fifth. By this hymn he adorns the trunk, the twenty-fifth. Further, this day (of the sacrifice) is twenty-five, the sloma hymn of this day is twenty-five, like is brought about by like. So the two are twenty-five. By repeating the first thrice, and the last thrice, the verses Syntax, p. 477; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 230, and Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, p. 79, who calls this use late, hardly correctly. Cf. III, 2, 6; II, 1, 2; 6, 1; Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmaņa, p. 430. I think that iva must originally-or at any rate quite earlyhave had a sense approaching more or less to eva. Cf. RV., I, 145, 3: tán it prchanti ná simó ví pychati svéneva dhìro mánasā yád ágrabhīt. The sense is hardly 'by his own mind alone', as Oldenberg (S. B. E., XLVI, 164) takes it. The phrase is softened by iva, just as metaphorical phrases are softened by quasi, &c. in Latin (Berger, Stylistique Latine, p. 140). This sense appears clearly in III, 2, 6: vägbrāhmaņam ivopodāharati. This avoids amendment to eva as proposed for the RV. passage by Oldenberg. So in RV., IV, 5, 8: var iva. See also Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 375, n. 3, on Satapatha Brāhmaņa, X, 5, 3, 1, 'Sāyana seems to take "iva" here in the sense of "eva", as indeed it often has to be taken, especially in negative sentences.' The real sense is clearly seen in phrases like pratarām iva kriyante, Aitareya Brāhmaņa, III, 48, 4. See also n. 5 on II, 1, 2. So in Brhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 2, 2, for the Kanva text eva, the Madhyandina has iva explained as eva by the commentator (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 159, n. 3); ibid., III, 9, 28, 5, for the Kanva iva vai, the Mādhyandina has u vai (S. B. E., XV, 150, n. 5). This use is not found in independent passages of the Sankhayana Aranyaka, where in VIII, 10, eva takes the place of iva in Aitareya Aranyaka, III, 2, 6. Cf. also Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., LXI, 824 sq.

* Sāyaṇa is probably correct in taking janayanta in a timeless or present sense. Cf.

Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 930; Avery, J. A. O. S., XI, 326-361.

The hymn has two metres and in one of these metres four feet; man has two and cattle four feet, and the union in the hymn produces union in reality. catuspātsu occurs also in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 2, 7, where the whole phrase occurs with pādāh. For catuspādāh pašavah cf. Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, XII, 2, 2, 20, and often in the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa. The whole phrase is also identical with Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 31, 13, &c.

4 For this see I, 1, 4; II, 3, 4; Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 1. The reference is to the pancavimsa stoma in the Prstha Stotra corresponding to the Mahaduktha.

The plural is explained by Sāyana as due to the rcs being thought of and not the hymn, but here the 'attraction' of the predicate is an adequate explanation, since such examples of carelessness are very rare. Cf., however, RV., III, 6, 3, where Oldenberg (S. B. E., XLVI, 24, 6) refers yajātyāsah to Heaven and Earth; RV., II, 5, 6 (ibid., 204); RV., VII, 93, 7: yát sīm āgas cakṛmā tāt sú mṛļa tād aryamāditih sisrathantu i where Agni and perhaps the other become thirty less one, that is equivalent to a virāj verse minus one syllable. For in the small (womb) seed is deposited, in the small (heart) the vital spirits, in the small (stomach) food is placed. So (the virāj small by one) serves for the obtainment of these desires. He who knows this obtains those desires. The verses include also the brhafi metre and the virāj metre, and the perfection of that day. They also include the anuṣṭubh metre, for the chants accompanying the ghee-offerings depend on anuṣṭubhs.

3. 'The Praūga¹ should be in the gāyatrī metre,' some say,² 'for the gāyatrī is brightness and splendour and thus (the sacrificer) becomes bright and splendid.' Others say, 'The Praūga should be in the uṣṇih metre, for the uṣṇih is life

Ādityas are in the mind of the poet. Ibid., X, 85, 47 (altered in Āśvalāyana Grhya Sūtra, I, 8, 9), hṛdayāni is used of a man and wife. In Maitrāyanīya Samhitā, I, 5, 12, sṛjāvahai is used of the gods, cf. bravāvahai in IV, 1, infra. Cf. too the verse cited V, 2, 2, iṣam no Mitrāvaruṇā kartaneļām and Atharvaveda, XIV, 1, 39, with Whitney's note. Cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 102; Speijer, Sanskrit-Syntax, § 26, n.; Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XXXIX, 62, n. 1.

* See I, 3, 7, where this recurs.

The verses taken together make up eighteen virāj verses (it is not necessary to assume the repetition of the first virāj thrice as does Max Müller), and seven tristubh verses. Repeating thrice the last tristubh, and taking away eight syllables from each verse, we reach nine brhatī verses plus nine sets of eight syllables which taken all together give two brhatī verses. Cf. Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 2.

The first verse, though called virāj in the Anukramanī, is really a verse of thirty-three syllables, and by the doctrine that one or two syllables make no difference, it can easily be regarded as an anustubh of thirty-two syllables. The acc. is due to the force of abhi, cf. janitvám abhi sámbabhūtha, RV., X, 18, 8 as explained by Whitney, A.J.P., XIII, 297, and Geldner, Vedische Studien, II, 306. Later √bhū governs the acc., see Hopkins, Great Epic of India, pp. 265, 473. For the exact sense of abhi, cf. abhi samcinuté, Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 2, 4, 1 with Eggeling's note; Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 22,6: virājam dašinīm abhisampadyetām, and elsewhere in the Brāhmaṇa and Sūtra literature.

RV., III, 13, which is an anustubh hymn and is the Ajya Sastra of the Agnistoma.

After the eating of the rtugrahas and the recitation of the Ājya Śastra comes the Vilve-devagraha and the Praüga. In the prakṛti, the Agniṣṭoma, the Praüga consists of seven tṛcas, comprising RV., I, 2, and 3, ascribed to the poet Madhuchandas; so in Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XV, 5. The Aitareya Āranyaka keeps these tṛcas for the Praüga; in the Śāṅkhāyana there is used a set apparently of seven tṛcas (RV., VII, 91, 1-3, 4-6; VII, 61, 1-3; IV, 43, 1-3; IV, 23, 1-3; IV, 55, 1-3; VII, 95, 4-6), in the triṣṭubh metre, ascribed to Vāmadeva chatrinnyāyena, though only three are his (Govinda on Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 8, 10). The series of deities, Vāyu, Indra-Vāyu, Mitra-Varuṇa, Aśvinau, Indra, Viśvedevāḥ, Sarasvatī, is the same as in the original tṛcas of RV., I, 2; 3. There can be no doubt that the Śāṅkhāyana version is the later. The order of the grahas is different in Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, IX, 13, 33. For the metres and their relation to the savanas see Bergaigne, Journal Asiatique, XIII, 166 sq.; Bloomfield, J. A. O. S., XVI, 4 sq.; Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 301.

² The traistubha Prauga is preferred in the Sānkhāyana, but nothing is there said as to the reason here given, while arguments for the gāyatra are there mentioned, which here are not used. This adds another reason for regarding the Sānkhāyana as the later version.

and so (the sacrificer) wins life.' Others say, 'The Pratiga should be in the anustubh metre, for the anustubh is valour, and so it serves to obtain valour.' Others say, 'The Prauga should be in the brhafi, for the brhafi is prosperity, and so (the sacrificer) becomes prosperous.' Others say, 'The Praüga should be in the paikti metre, for the paikti is food and so (the sacrificer) wins food.' Others say, 'The Pratiga should be in the tristubh metre, for the tristubh is strength and so (the sacrificer) becomes strong.' Others say, 'The Praüga should be in the jagali metre, for cattle a are like the jagali and so (the sacrificer) acquires cattle.' But (the sacrificer) should take a gayatri hymn only. For the gayatri is brahman,4 and that day is brahman, and so through brahman is brahman commenced.5 The hymn should be one by Madhuchandas. For Madhuchandas desires 6 honey for the singers and so he is called Madhuchandas. Now food truly is honey; all is honey; all desires are honey; therefore if one recite the hymn of Madhuchandas, it serves to obtain all desires. He who knows this obtains all desires. Now this Prauga in the one day form 7 is perfect.8 Much indeed on that day is done that is forbidden,9 and (the Praiiga) is the atonement.10 Now atonement ² Cf. I, I, 2, n. 5. The point of resemblance is the number of feet. See Taittirīya Samhitā, III, 2, 9, 4; VI, 1, 6, 2; Aitareya Brāhmana, I, 21, 15; 28, 11. Elsewhere the gāyatrī is connected with aṣṭāṣaphāḥ paṣavaḥ, Jaiminīya Brāhmaṇa, III, 241; Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa, III, 8, 2, or paṣavaḥ are pāṅktāḥ, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 23, 5.

4 Cf. I, 1, 1 ad fin.

5 The day is brahman because it causes men to attain brahman. This passage appears to be quoted or referred to in Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 2: brahma vā ekāho (?) brahmaitad ahar brahmanaiva tad brahma samardhayati. See I, 2, 2, infra.

⁶ Sāyaṇa so takes chandati. The compound may rather have meant 'praising honey', as the Naighantuka, III, 14 gives chandati as an equivalent of arcati and cf. also RV., VI, 11, 3 when chanda occurs; or possibly 'winning honey', cf. Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 146, n. 3), who takes the meaning of √chand as 'gefallen, befriedigen, oder befallen machen'. Cf. also Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 154; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 31, n. 3; Weber, Ind. Stud., VIII, 4 sq., as to the connexion of chandas with skandati, which if real would be natural as giving a basis for the meaning of chandas as right time (cf. pes, 'foot,' 'scansion,'&c.). √chand and √chad 'cover' are not separated by the Indian grammarians, but are of very doubtful connexion (Whitney, Roots, &c., pp. 49, 50; Ryder, J. A. O. S., XXIII, 77; Weber, Ind. Stud., XVII, 236). Madhuchandas appears in Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXVIII, 2; Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 17; Bṛhaddevatā, II, 126; III, 57; Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, &c. For tad yad, &c., cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 575.

The Agnistoma, which is the prakrts of the Visvajit and that of the Mahavrata, is a one day sacrifice. Cf. Sabbathier, Agnistoma; Caland and Henry, L'Agnistoma.

Because, Sāyaṇa says, it can easily be performed by remembering the Agnistoma, which it exactly follows. This passage is repeated in I, 2, 1, &c.

Max Müller renders 'to be hidden'. Sāyaṇa says: sistair nivāraṇīyam varjanīyam. The reference is clearly to the dāsīnṛtyabahubhūtamaithunabrahmacārīpumscalīsampravādādikam (so R; S has what is better: dāsīvr (? vi) vṛttabaṭumaithunao); see V, 1, 5, i. e. the popular part of the old ritual.

10 This is perhaps better than Max Müller's 'and has to be atoned for (by recitation)'.

is rest, and at the end (of the sacrifice) the sacrificers rest on the atonement of the one day (Praüga) 11 as their rest. He rests who knows this, and they also rest for whom the Hotr priest, who knows this, recites this Praüga.

4. (There is the word 'ready' in the verse,) 'Come hither, O Vayu, conspicuous; these Soma draughts have been made ready' (RV., I, 2,1); this day indeed is ready for the sacrificer and for the gods. Truly the day is ready for him who knows this or for whom a Hotr priest who knows this recites. In the verse, 'Indra and Väyu, these draughts are poured forth, come to what is prepared' (RV., I, 2, 4), by 'prepared' (niskrta) he denotes what is 'well prepared' (samskrta).1 Indra and Vāyu approach what has been well prepared by him who knows this or for whom a Hotr priest who knows this recites. In the verse, 'Mitra of holy might I summon (and Varuna) who make perfect 2 the oil-fed rite' (RV., I, 2, 7ac), speech is the oil-fed rite. Speech is his who knows this or for whom a Hotr priest who knows this recites. In the verse 'Aśvins, (accept) the sacrificial offerings' (RV., I, 3, 1a), the sacrificial offerings are food and this serves to gain food. The Aśvins go to the sacrifice of him who knows this or for whom a Hotr priest who knows this recites the verse, 'Come hither, ye whose path is red'3 (RV., I, 3, 3). In the verses, 'Indra of bright splendour, come hither; Indra impelled by prayer, come hither; Indra hastening, come hither' (RV., I, 3, 5a; 6a; 4a), he recites, 'Come hither, come hither.' Indra goes to his sacrifice who knows this or for whom a Hotr priest who knows this recites. The All-gods come to the call of him who knows,

It is a curious inversion of ideas by which the old popular rites retained no doubt reluctantly in the ritual become regarded as improper and needing atonement.

Max Müller takes pratisthāikāhāh as separate from fāntyām, but suggests that ekāhāh may go with fāntyām. This certainly seems better, as it avoids the identification of ekāhāh and fāntih. 'At the end' refers to the fact that the Mahāvrata is the last day but one of the Sattra. For pratisthā as a medical term, see Hoernle, J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 14.

¹ From niskṛta comes the Vedic iskṛti according to Bloomfield, J. A. O. S., XVI, xxvi, For saṃskṛta as 'well-cooked', see Thomas, J. R. A. S., 1904, p. 748; Kirste, J. R. A. S., 1905, p. 353. For is and √id, cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 2-4. For aram above, which as against alam, V, 2, 3, is a sign of early date, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 211 sq.; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, pp. 43 sq. alam already appears in the Atharvaveda. The syntax is normal, see Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 146, 147. Sāyaṇa, probably correctly, explains that the hymn has the word aram because the day is aram, not vice versa. The use of vai favours this.

or for whom a Hotr priest who knows recites the verse, 'Ye All-gods, protectors, supporters of men, come hither' (RV., I, 3, 7). In the verse, 'Ye givers, (come to) the libation of the giver' (RV., I, 3, 7c), he means the libation of every giver. Whatever a man wishes when he recites this verse, that wish the gods fulfil, if this he knows or if for him a Hotr priest who knows recites. In the verse, 'May the holy' Sarasvati accept our sacrifice, she that is rich in prayer' (RV., I, 3, 10), speech is denoted by 'rich in prayer'. Speech is his who knows this or for whom a Hotr priest who knows this recites. When he says, 'May she accept our sacrifice,' he means, 'May she bear it away.' These verses if said straight on number twenty-one.5 Man consists of twenty-one elements. He has ten fingers, ten toes, and the trunk is the twenty-first. By this hymn he adorns the trunk, the twenty-first. By repeating the first thrice and the last thrice the verses become twenty-five. The trunk is the twenty-fifth, and Prajāpati is the twenty-fifth. He has ten fingers, ten toes, two legs, two arms, and the trunk is the twenty-fifth. By this hymn he adorns the trunk, the twenty-fifth. Further the day (of the sacrifice) is twenty-five, the stoma hymn of that day is twenty-five,6 like is brought about by like. So the two are twenty-five.

ADHYĀYA 2.

The two tristichs, 'Thee like a car to aid us' (RV., VIII, 68, 1-3), and, 'This juice is poured, O Vasu' (RV., VIII, 2, 1-3) are the first and second of the Marutvatīya hymn.¹ Both are perfect in form as belonging to the one day ceremony.² Much indeed is done on this day that is forbidden, and (the Marutvatīya) is the atonement. Now atonement is rest, and so at the end (of the sacrifice) the sacrificers rest on the atonement of the one day (Marutvatīya) as their rest. He rests who knows this and they also rest for whom the Hotr priest, who knows this, recites this Marutvatīya. In the verse, 'Indra, come

⁵ Cf. I, 1, 2 ad fin.

This is the first Sastra at the midday pressing. The pragāthas used are made up of two verses expanded (Sāyaṇa: yasminn rgdvayasamūhe pragrathanena tṛcaḥ sampadyate so 'yam pragāthaḥ). The dhāyyās are interpolated verses to fill up the Sastra. For the terminology, pratipad and anucara, see Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 103. For uktha below, see Eggeling, S. B. E., XLI, xii-xv.

nigher, with thy strengths preserve thy singers's (RV., VIII, 53, 5-6), (there is 4 the word 'singers'); this day indeed is a hymn, and being possessed of a hymn, the form of this day is perfect. (There is the word 'hero') in the verse, 'Let Brahmanaspati come forth, hither the hero' (RV., I, 40, 3ac); the form of this day indeed is perfect as endowed with strength. (There is the word 'heroic might') in the verse, 'Rise up, O Brahmanaspati; heroic might' (RV., I, 40, 11, 2b); the form of this day is perfect as endowed with might. (There is the word 'hymn') in the verse, 'Now doth Brahmanaspati proclaim the hymn of praise' (RV., I, 40, 5); this day indeed is a hymn and the form of this day as endowed with a hymn is perfect. (There is the word 'slaying Vrtra') in the verse, 'Agni, the slayer of Vrtra, will bear' (RV., III, 20, 4ac); the slaying 5 of Vrtra is a characteristic of Indra, this day is Indra's, and Indra's is the form of this day. (There is the word 'strong') in the verse, 'Thou art strong by insight, O Soma, thou art mighty in thy might and greatness' (RV., I, 91, 28c); might indeed is a characteristic of Indra, this day is Indra's, and Indra's is the form of this day. (There is the word 'strong') in the verse, 'They fill full the waters; they lead forth the strong one blike a horse for rain' (RV., I, 64, 6d); strength indeed is a characteristic of Indra, this day is Indra's, and Indra's is the form of this day. Further in that verse, 'They milk the thundering never-failing spring' (RV., I, 64. 6). (there is the word 'thundering'); thundering indeed is a characteristic of Indra, this day is Indra's, and Indra's is the form of this day. (There is the word 'great') in the verse, 'To great Indra' (RV., VIII, 89, 3); what indeed is great, is large, the form of this day as endowed with largeness is perfect. (There is the word 'great') in the verse, 'Sing a great song to Indra' (RV., VIII, 89, 1); what indeed is great is large, the form of this day as endowed with largeness is perfect. (There are the words 'was in the way of' and 'stayed not") in the verse, 'No one was in the way of, " none stayed, the chariot of

^{*} This is, I take it, the meaning. The verses contain words because the day has certain qualities. It is also possible to invert the relation, and derive from the epithets in the verses the qualities of the day, but the position of the verse in the sentence points to the former interpretation as slightly the more probable, and that view is supported by Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 3 ad fin.: mahadvad hy etod ahah. The literal version is 'As to the words, &c.'

⁶ vājinam means 'having food' according to Sāyana. It clearly meant originally 'having energy'. Cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 18 and Index, s. v. vāja; Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 10, 45.

Sāyana renders paryāsa as svārtham na cālitavān and na rīramad as tena rathena ramanam api iatrur na kṛṭavān, and paryastavat as lokāntaragamanāya paritaicalanavat. It is difficult not to believe that this absurd interpretation, which is that of the Āranyaka, was Sudās' (RV., VII, 32, 10); the form of this day as endowed with the terms paryasta and rānti is perfect. He recites all the Pragāthas to obtain all the days, all the Ukthas, all the Pragāthas, all the Pragāthas, all the Pragāthas, all the Pragāthas, all the pressings of the Soma.

2. He recites the hymn, 'Fair has been my effort, singer; slayer of truth' (RV., X, 27). True, indeed, is this day and perfect its form as endowed with truth. This hymn is composed by Vasukra. Vasukra indeed is brahman, and this day is brahman. Thus by brahman is brahman commenced. Here they ask: 'Why then is the Marutvatīya Śastra commenced by Vasukra's hymn?' Because no other than Vasukra produced a Marutvatīya Śastra nor separated it. Therefore by the hymn of Vasukra the Marutvatīya Śastra is commenced. This hymn is not addressed to any definite deity and is therefore Prajāpati's. For Prajāpati is undefined, and the hymn serves to win Prajāpati. Once he describes Indra, and so the hymn retains its form as Indra's. He recites the hymn, 'Drink the Soma, for which in anger thou breakest' (RV., VI, 17). (There is the word 'mightily') in the verse, 'The cow stall, Indra, mightily being lauded;' the form of this day as endowed with the word mightily is perfect. This hymn is deliberately chosen wrongly. The exact sense of the original is, however, open to doubt, cf. Ludwig and Griffith's translations.

The Ukthas here meant, Sāyana says, are those for the ukthyakratus, following the Yajñāyajñīya Sāman. The Pṛṣṭhas are the four Pṛṣṭha Stotras of the midday pressing. The Sastras are those of the Ājya and other rites. The Praügas are the Sastras of the Praüga and are specially mentioned on the nyāya, brāhmanā āgatāḥ parivrājakā apy āgatāḥ (so S; R reads abhyo, which is nonsense).

For these, see Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 339. For aptyai and the very numerous similar datives, cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 274; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 970. They differ from ordinary infinitives in not being construed clearly as verbal forms, but governing the genitive as here and in Sankhayana Āranyaka, II, 5; 6, &c., and as always in Celtic (Lindsay, Latin Language, p. 535).

¹ This Khanda contains the general form as well as the specifically Mahāvrata part of the Marutvatīya. See on V, 1, 1, which gives only the special part, and cf. Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 3, where Vasukra is equated to Indra. He occurs also in Bṛhaddevatā, VII, 30, &c.

² i. e. brought out of the Samhitā. The perf. here has a certain propriety; it expresses a relation not exactly that of mere past, and approximates to a present. Cf. n. 6. For atha kasmāt, cf. Aitareya Brāhmana, III, 24, 7, &c.

² Cf. Macdonell, Sarvānukramanī, p. 183, Bṛhaddevatā, II, 256; Sieg, Die Sagenstoffe des Rgveda, pp. 7, 8. See Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 30, 3: te ete dhāyye anirukte Prājāpatye, VI, 20, 18; Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXIII, 2; Maitrāyaṇī Samhitā, III, 6, 5; Nirukta, VII, 4. Sāyaṇa says Prajāpati is anirukta as he has no mūrti. Sānkhāyaṇa Āraṇyaka, II, 1 has: anirukto vai Prajāpatih. Cf. Weber, Ind. Stud., XVII, 333; Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, p. 16.

In RV., X, 27, 22. The Brhaddevatā and Sarvānukramanī ascribe X, 27-29 generally to Indra, with certain exceptions (Macdonell, Brhaddevatā, I, 127).

⁵ Clearly the Āranyaka takes mahi as an accusative = mahad, and presumably, like Sāyana, grnāna as active. Māhi in the original is taken by Griffith in his translation as a vocative from composed by Bharadvāja, and Bharadvāja was of seers the most learned, the longest lived, and the greatest practiser of austerities. By this hymn he drove away evil. When 6 therefore a man recites the hymn of Bharadvāja, it is that mahin against the accent. Cf. also Grassmann and Ludwig's translations. For the passive sense of grnāna cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, p. 362; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 264.

The form apahatyā may be either a dative, 'for the driving away,' or an ablative, more probably the latter, as presumably the sense is that Bharadvāja attained his length of years by the hymn rather than the reverse. āsa above is clearly differentiated in time from the narrative; cf. Śāākhāyana Āraṇyaka, VI, I, where the imperfect avasat describes the dwelling from time to time of Gārgya Bālāki, while āsa is used to denote his permanent character, and uvāca in describing his conversation with Ajātaŝatru. This use of the perfect as a narrative tense is not a sign of lateness when the use is different from that of the imperfect. In the Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa itself uvāca and āsa (XIII, 6, 9) are both found in such cases. Cf. also Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 48, 5: Bharadvājo ha vai kṛšo dīrghaḥ palita āsa 1 so 'bravīt 1, and III, 48, 4. The position of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa and Āraṇyaka as early appear clearly from the following table of the proportion of perfects to imperfects (see Whitney, P. A. O. S., May, 1891, pp. lxxxv sq., slightly modified):—

The earlier part of the Aitareya (I-XXVI) can thus claim to be older than anything save the Pañcavimáa and the Samhitās, and may be as old (for in such small matters as those of the Aitareya the proportions are not fair) as the Samhitās (Brāhmaṇa parts, of course). Against this sporadic cases like sam lokete, lajjate, saciva (Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, xxx) cannot be regarded as of decisive weight. lajjamānā indeed as a Prākritism would be note-

^a Fick, Bezz. Beitr., VII, 270 takes lajj from Ind. Germ. lozgⁿ according to the ordinary and early phonetic rule; if so the Präkritism would disappear. The view of Leumann (Wackernagel, I, 220) is, however, more probable; cf. also Dr. Scheftelowitz's forthcoming book, Zur Stammbildung in den indogermanischen Sprachen, § 10. Dr. Scheftelowitz gives an interesting example of the way in which the texts were corrupted (though he does not apply it for this purpose). In later Vedic times ts and kş became frequently cch, and such forms found their way into the text of old work instead of the proper forms. Later still efforts were made to replace correct forms instead of obvious Präkritisms with in some cases unfortunate results. E.g. in Sāmaveda, I, 3, I, 4, 9 (=I, 231) pṛkṣu as Benfey (Glossar, p. 128) says is for RV., VIII, 31, 15, pṛṭsu via pṛṣchu. So may be explained eṅkṣva, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 9 (cf. Aufrecht's ed., p. 428) for entsva (ā+√indh). Cf. in Naighaṇṭuka, II, 17, pṛṭsudhaḥ (cf. Roth's crit, note, p. 16) for RV. pṛkṣu, and for ṛṣṣdla (K.Z., XI., 264 sq.) the MSS. of Atharvaveda, X, 9, 23, offer either ṛṭsdra or ṛṣchdra (Lanman, Album Kern, he may become, by the driving away of evil, learned, long-lived, and versed in asceticism; for that he recites the hymn of Bharadvāja. He recites the hymn, 'With what splendour do ye who are of equal age and dwell together?' (RV., I, 165). (There is the word 'praises') in the verse, 'They call for me, the praises long for me' (RV., I, 165, 4°); this day is praise and the form of this day as endowed with praise is perfect. This is the kayāśubhīya hymn,' and it is harmony and worthy, but when it is considered that the form is unique (III, 22, 7), that the later language had always \(\lambda lajj \) and that \(\lambda lajj \) was a common word, there can surely be no hesitation in restoring lajyamānā, just as the Atharvan Prākritisms, cited above, must be removed. The exact verbal form of the text cannot always be relied upon, and it may be noted that, as Sāyaṇa's note on VII, 10; 11 shows, in his time some versions of the Altareya Brāhmaṇa had, which some had not, these chapters, of which the second is a mere corruption of Kauşītaki Brāhmaṇa, VII, II (see Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, pp. 236, 382, 444). The case of the Gopatha Brāhmana may be held to contradict the deductions here accepted, since Bloomfield (Atharvaveda, pp. 164 sq.) has shown grounds for holding that the Pürva is not later than the Uttara, but this objection is not of importance, since it is the case that the two parts owe most of their grammatical forms to these sources and the Pürva borrows from the Satapatha Brāhmana, XI and XII, in the first of which books the number of perfects is very high, while the Uttara exploits the Aitareya, &c. The potential in ita (see Aufrecht, p. 429) also urged as a sign of late date is merely, in all probability, an inaccurate analogical form to forms like Ita (dadhīta, &c.), and gives no criterion of date (cf. Liebich, Pānini, p. 32). āmantrayām āsa occurs only in VII, 17 and proves nothing for the earlier part of the Brāhmana. Pāṇini, III, 1, 40, allows only ky (Liebich, p. 33); but as there can be no doubt of the priority of the Aitareya Brāhmaņa to Pāṇini (cf. Liebich's own paper, Besz. Beitr., XI, 309), this clearly shows either the selective character of Panini's work or more probably the incorrect transmission of the text (the Sankhayana has cakre, Liebich, pp. 80, 81). The use of avant (for avam) is apparently a note of the Aitareya Brahmana's style, not a proof of date.b Liebich (p. 30) holds that āsa was obsolete in Pāṇini's day in prose and says Yāska uses only babhāva. I cannot accept this view as to Pāṇini.

The story of Indra, Agastya, and the Maruts has received full treatment from Sieg (Die Sagenstoffe des Rgveda, pp. 108-119). He holds that RV., I, 170, 171, and 165 make up an Itihāsa to the effect that Agastya offered a sacrifice to the Maruts. Indra came and claimed it, and Agastya had to pacify Indra and the Maruts. The result is possible, but not certain. The Kausītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXVI, 9, has (as amended by Sieg, p. 117, n. 7): kayā šubhā

p. 302; Whitney, Translation of Atharvaveda, p. 604). So in Khila, I, 2, 9*, MSS. read prinayanti for prinanti and this Präkritism is found in Varttika 1 to Pāṇini, VII, 3, 37. See also Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 135.

b Aufrecht's view (Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, p. vi) of the dependence of the Brāhmaṇa parts of the Taittirīya Saṃhitā seems borne out by the citations in his 'Anmerkungen'. It may be noted that the Brāhmaṇa parts of the Saṃhitā cannot well be separated much in point of time from the Brāhmaṇa itself and that Brāhmaṇa deals with the late Puruṣamedha (Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 167). Cf. also Taittirīya Saṃhitā, VI, 3, 10, 5 and Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, I, 5, 5, 6 with Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 13, 3 (ibid., p. 184, n. 2). Noteworthy also is Winternitz's remark (p. 175, n. 1) that in Vājasaneyi Saṃhitā, XXX, Buddhists are not mentioned, though that section must be later than the oldest Brāhmaṇas.

abiding, the kayāśubhīya hymn. For by means of it Indra, Agastya, and the Maruts came to harmony. So the recitation of the kayāsubhīya hymn tends to harmony. Further the hymn tends to long life. So if the sacrificer be dear to the priest, let him recite for him b the kayāśubhīya hymn. He recites the hymn, 'Indra, with the Maruts, powerful, for joy' (RV., III, 47). There are the words 'Indra, powerful'; power indeed is a characteristic of Indra, this day is Indra's and Indra's its form. This hymn is composed by Viśvāmitra. Now Viśvāmitra was the friend of all, and all is the friend of him who knows this and of those for whom a Hotr priest, who knows this, recites this hymn. The hymn 'Thou art born, terrible, for strength, for energy' (RV., X, 73) is one containing nivids,9 and, as belonging to the one day ceremonial, is perfect in form. Much indeed is done on this day that is forbidden, and (this hymn) is the atonement. Now atonement is rest, and at the end (of the sacrifice) the sacrificers rest on the atonement of the one day (nividdhana) as their rest. He rests who knows this, and they also rest for whom a Hotr priest, who knows this, recites this nividdhana. If recited straight on, the verses number ninety-seven. 10 The ninety is made up of three virāj sets of thirty, and then savayasah sanīdā iti marutvatīyam \ tad etat samjāānam santani sūktam \ etena hendrat ca Marutas ca samojānatām, which must go back to the same source as the Aitareya version, found also in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, V, 16, which agrees verbally with this passage. For samjñāna see also Bloomfield, Atharvaveda, pp. 72, 73.

⁸ The gen. here is probably possessive and predicative (eins faciat), cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 63 and 71; Liebich, Bezz. Beitr., XI, 307 sq.; Delbtück, Altindische Syntax, p. 162, while the gen. with priya is adnominal and regular from RV. onwards. Not unnatural is the transition from such genitives to the genitive which is really a dative, e.g. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 15, 7: tasya fatam dattvā would if kṛtvā were put for dattvā be quite regular. On the other hand in tasya frad dadhāti (ibid., II, 40, 6) the gen. is practically datival. In Pāli (Müller, Pāli Grammar, p. 67) and in Prākrit (Pischel, Prākrit Grammar, p. 246) the dative of the indirect objective is always represented by the genitive, the dative of purpose alone surviving. Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 297. Note the dative with mitram below, and genitive in ekeṣām paṭāmām, I, 2, 3; and Geldner, Vedische Studien, I, 283. On the low morality of the Brāhmaṇas, cf. Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, p. 9; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 180 sq.; Garbe, Philosophy of Ancient India, p. 62.

Nayana explains thus: the two treas referred to in I, 2, I = 6; six pragāthas each of two verses made into a trea = 18; three dhāyyās = 3; asat su = 24; piba somam = 15; kayā subhā = 15; marutvāñ Indra = 5; janisthā ugrah = 11; total 97. But in I, 2, I there are seven pragāthas which would give 100. Apparently the author overlooked this, although of course the explanations are possible. Oldenberg (Prolegomena, p. 353) thinks that some of the pragāthas may have been counted as two, others as three verses.

there are seven which are over. Whatever is praise of the seven is also praise of the ninety. If the first and last are repeated thrice the verses number 101. There are five four-jointed 11 fingers, two pits, the arm, the collar-bone, the shoulder-blade; these make up twenty-five. The other parts 11 have twenty-five each, making a hundred, and the trunk is the one hundred and first part. The hundred is life, 13 health, strength, glory; the sacrificer is the hundred and first, resting on life, health, strength, glory. These verses become tristubh. 14 For the midday pressing is accompanied by tristubh verses. 15

3. They ask, 'Why is a swing' a swing?' He who blows is the swing. He

11 The four are, according to Sāyaṇa, agra, madhya, mūla, tanmūla, and he notes that though the angustha has really only three, it is given a fourth for the sake of symmetry. So in the systems of Caraka and Suśruta (Hoernle, Osteology, pp. 122, 123) there are sixty phalanges, giving fifteen in each hand. Here the phalanges and the metacarpus are reckoned as phalanges. In Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 5, each pāṇi, on the other hand, is given three parvāni, which is the more correct view, and perhaps later. The expression kaksasī is doubtful. It cannot mean 'armpits', for there is but one on each side; Max Müller says the pits 'in the elbow and the arm'; Monier-Williams, Dict. (where the reference is inaccurate) gives the sense as the two depressions on the wrist; Sayana says kaksasya parkvadvayam, and possibly the armpit may be conceived of as in some way double. He takes, followed by Max Müller, aksak as eye, but (a) firas is a separate element and the eye belongs to it; (b) the form is unparalleled. Friedländer holds that akṣa (Ar. aša, Lat. axilla, O.H.G. ahṣala) means 'shoulder-blade', but that is the meaning of amsaphalaka in the systems of Caraka (Hoernle, J.R.A.S., 1907, p. 13), perhaps of Susruta and Vagbhata (J.R.A.S., 1906, p. 931; Osteology, pp. 76, 91). So aksa must mean 'collar-bone', as I would take it in Sankhayana Āranyaka, II, 4 (aksā and akṣaḥ) and as in the Satapatha Brāhmana (áksa). The later form is usually aksaka, though aksa is found in the 'non-medical version of Atreya', see Hoernle, Osteology, pp. 55, 134, n. 1, and my review, Z. D. M. G., LXII, 135 sq. Sayana's error is found in the commentators on Yājāavalkya and in the modern translations.

12 i.e. the left side, and the two sides of the lower body, which have five four-jointed toes, a thigh, a leg, and three parvāni ('joints', Max Müller, rather 'articulations', Hoernle, J.R.A.S., 1906, p. 931) according to Sayana.

¹³ Because life is one hundred years and the other things depend upon it, Sāyana explains, probably correctly, as there is no doubt that life as one hundred years is a very early idea, see Lanman, Sanskrit Reader, p. 384 and reff., and Weber, Ind. Stud., XVII, 193; Festgruss an Roth, p. 137. Cf. Vājasaneyi Samhitā Upaniṣad, 2.

14 Because the last hymn is tristubh (Sāyaṇa). But all the hymns in that Khanda are in tristubh.

¹⁵ Cf. Aitareya Brāhmaņa, III, 12, 3-5; Satapatha Brāhmaņa, IV, 2, 5, 20, and other passages cited by Bloomfield, J. A. O. S., XVI, 4. For the form praiiga, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 41; Z.D.M.G., XL, 678.

¹ The use of the swing refers, in the opinion of Oldenberg (Religion des Veda, p. 444), to the sun, which is called 'the golden swing in heaven' in RV., VII, 87, 5. This is quite probable, as the Mahāvrata rite is, at least to some extent, a sun-charm (cf. Introd., p. 28). Sāyaṇa's interpretation follows the text and makes the swing Vāyu, as does Sānkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 7. I, 2, 4 below is in favour of the sun; cf. Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, XXXIV, 5, cited in Ind. Stud., III, 477. Compare the dolāyātrā of the young Kṛṣṇa, clearly a vegetation rite.

swings forward in these worlds and then is a swing a swing. 'There should be one plank,' some say, 'for the wind blows in one way and (the swing should be) like the wind.' But this is not to be accepted.\(^2\) Others say, 'There should be three planks, for threefold are these worlds and (the swing should) resemble them.' But this is not to be accepted. There should be two planks, for these two worlds\(^3\) seem most real, and the ether between them is the sky. So let there be two planks. Let them be of udumbara wood.\(^4\) The udumbara is sap and proper food, and planks of it serve to win sap and proper food. Let them be raised in the middle. For in the middle food delights men, and so he places the sacrificer in the middle of proper food. There are two kinds of ropes,\(^5\) the right and the left. The right serves for some animals, the left for others. When there are both kinds, they serve to win both kinds of animals. The ropes should be of darbha\(^6\) grass. For of all plants darbha is free of evil,\(^7\) and so they should be of darbha grass.

² This is the constant phrase of the Aitareya Brāhmana. That of the Kauşītaki Brāhmana and it may be added of the Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, is na tad ādriyeta. Cf. Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmana, p. 432; Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, pp. 38, n. 6; 44, n. 1.

Cf. Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 7, where there is one plank only: tad vā audumbarant bhavaty ūrg vā annādyam udumbara ūrjo 'nnādyasyopāptyai. The seat of the Udgāt; also is of udumbara wood. Tāndya Mahābrāhmana, V, 5, 2: audumbarā bhavaty ūrg udumbara ūrjam evāvarundhe. The Śānkhāyana passages look like an imitation, while the Aitareya may well have followed the Tāndya (cf. avaruddhyai). Taittirīya Brāhmana, I, 2, 6, 5, has ūrg vā ánnam udumbárah. Cf. also Satapatha Brāhmana, III, 2, 1, 23, and often.

⁷ The construction of the genitive with a positive is based on the analogy of the superlative, e.g. infra, I, 2, 4 (Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 65, 91 II). Similarly the ablative is found dependent on a positive, e.g. RV., V, 10, 4 (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 390), Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 58, Sanskrit Syntax, p. 78; Delbrück, Grundriss, III, 1, 216; Pischel, Gött. Gel. Ann., 1884, p. 509, Vedische Studien, I, 309; Geldner, ibid., III, 76, 77; and see II, 3, 1, n. 6. For the word apahatapāpmā, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 25, 4: apahatapāpmānaḥ and anapahatapāpmānaḥ; Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 3, 21 (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 168, n. 3); Chāndogya Upaniṣad, I, 2, 9; VIII, I, 5; 4, I; 7, I.

4. Some say, 'The swing should be one ell above the ground, for by that are the heavenly worlds measured.' But this is not to be accepted. Others say, 'It should be a span, for by that are the breaths measured.' But this is not to be accepted. It should be one fist above the ground, for by that all proper food is made and all proper food is taken. So let it be just one fist above the ground. Some say, 'Let him mount the swing from east to west, like the sun here who shines, for he mounts these worlds from east to west.' But this is not to be accepted. Some say, 'Let him mount sideways,' for men mount a horse 3 sideways, thinking thereby to win all their desires.' But this is not to be accepted. They say, 'Let him mount from behind, men indeed mount a ship from behind and the swing is a heavenfaring 4 ship.' Therefore let him mount from behind. Let him touch the swing with his chin.5 For thus does the parrot mount a tree, and the parrot eats most of all birds. Therefore let him touch the swing with his chin. Let him mount the swing with his arms.6 So the hawk sweeps down on birds, and so he mounts trees, and he is the strongest of birds. Therefore let him mount with his arms. Let him not withdraw from the earth one foot, lest he lose his hold of it. The Hotr mounts the swing, the Udgatr the seat of udumbara wood. The swing is masculine, the seat feminine, and they are united. This union is made at the beginning of the hymn for the sake of offspring. Children and cattle are his who knows this. Now the swing is food, the seat prosperity. Thus

² The swing is east and west; north and south is sideways, says Sāyaṇa. The accusatives below are quasi predicative, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 78, 79; III, 2, 4.

² As Max Müller points out, this is a clear reference to horse-riding, which is not certainly known or referred to in the Rgveda. But it is known to the Vajurveda and the Atharvaveda, Zimmer, Altindisches Leben, p. 230; Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, p. 166. Similarly in the Homeric age riding is only gradually coming into use in Greece. So Satapatha Brāhmaņa, VII, 3, 2, 17; and cf. RV., I, 163, 9; Weber, Berl. Sitz., 1898, p. 564.

4 This and the comparison with the sun are certainly in favour of the theory of Oldenberg, referred to above (n. 1 on I, 2, 3), and see App. to my Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, pp. 73 sq.

p. 37) and probably not Indo-European. Cf. Hoernle, Osteology, pp. 39, 40.

6 That is the forearm from the elbow. For further details of this ceremony see V, 1, 4. For ned below, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 317; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 240, n. The agreement of annādatamaḥ with İyenaḥ is characteristic. See Taittirīya Samhitā, V, 9, 11, 1: İyeno vai vayasām pātiṭthaḥ; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 80. Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 95 c) is unable to cite an example from Sanskrit. It is the general rule in Latin, where, however, post-Augustan exceptions occur, e.g. velocissimum animalium delphinus est (Pliny, Nat. Hist., ix, 8, 20).

they mount to food and fortune. The Hotrakas with the Brahman sit down on seats of grass. Plants and trees having grown up bear fruit. So then if they mount all together on this day they mount on strength, on sap, on proper food. This serves to win sap and proper food. Some say, 'Let him descend to after saying vasat.' But this is not to be accepted. For the honour done to one that sees it not is indeed not done. Others say, 'Let him descend after taking the food.' But this is not to be accepted. For the honour done to one that has approached near is indeed not done. Let him descend after seeing the food. For that is honour indeed which is done to one who sees it. Therefore only after seeing the food, let him descend. Let him descend towards the east, for in the east is born the seed is of the gods. Then let him descend towards the east.

They, i.e. the Hotr and Udgatr. Max Müller follows R in translating 'he', but this makes nonsense and the commentary shows that R is wrong.

They are the Hotr's assistants, viz. Praśāstr, Brāhmanācchamsin, Potr, Nestr, Agnīdhra, and Acchāvaka. The division is not strictly accurate, as the second, third, and fifth are really classed with the Brahman and the Nestr with the Adhvaryu, but it corresponds to facts better than the later classifications, see Weber, Ind. Stud., X, 144 sq.; Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pp. 383 sq.; Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 97. vrsīķ may perhaps be better spelt bṛsīķ. Both the v or b and s present difficulties, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 184, 233; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 36. See Geiger, Litt. und Sprache d. Singhalesen, p. 28. The following sentence is quoted in the Naigeya Anukramanī, Ind. Stud., XVII, 373, 374.

Max Müller suggests that iso before ūrjah is expected. If it had occurred, it would have been quite natural, but it is not necessary to suspect the text as the reading above is isam eva tad ūrjam annādyam and the eva tad renders it less unnatural that iso should not occur. The phrase eva tad is very common in the Aitareya Brāhmana, tad being of course adverbial. For the usual asyndeton, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 59-

²⁰ The descent does not of course come here in its proper order, but is inserted to complete the discussion of the topic of the movements of the priests.

11 The reason for this being rejected is that it is only after the second vasat (the anuvasat) that this bhaksa comes up, so that it could not see the priest on the swing descending in its honour (Säyana). For the word, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 172; Foy, Z.D.M.G., L, 139; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 34; Weber, Ind. Stud., XVIII, 269; for the form, Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1091.

¹² For the form apaiyate, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 77; Delbrück, Vergl. Syntax, II, 529 sq., Altindische Syntax, pp. 540 sq. Adhyṛṭāya appears clearly to come from √ṛṣ in the sense 'move' (cf. Greek παλίτορσοι). The separation into two roots (maintained in Böhtlingk and Monier-Williams' Dict.) seems quite needless (cf. Whitney, Roots, &-ε., p. 140), as ṛṣṭi, spear, can easily be derived from √ṛṣ as trans. Cf. also Khila, IV, 5, 3

(ed. Scheftelowitz).

13 Max Müller suggests, and S apparently independently also suggests, that the reading may be devaretal samprajāyate. But the use of samprajāyate is curious, as the sam has no intelligible force, and on the other hand the form retasa is not impossible, as forms from a, as, asa, exchange more or less freely throughout Sanskrit, see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 415, 1319, and a long list in Wackernagel, op. cit., II, i, II3, II4; in a Bahuvrīhi agniretasa occurs in the Satapatha, ibid., III. In Pāli of course the asa form prevails, Müller, Pāli Grammar, p. 65. Cf. also Pischel, Prākrit Grammar, §§ 407 sq.

ADHYAYA 3.

They say, 'Let him begin this day with saying the word him.' In the word him is brahman, this day is brahman, and so he begins brahman by means of brahman, who knows this. Now with regard to his beginning with the word him, the word is masculine, and the re feminine. They make a pair and so he makes a pair at the beginning of the hymn for the sake of offspring. Children and cattle are his who knows this. Again with regard to his beginning with the word him, the word is to brahman like a wooden shovel. Just as one desires to dig up anything with a wooden shovel, so with the word one digs up brahman. Whatever he desires, he digs up with the word him, who knows this. Again with regard to his beginning with the word him, the word is the discrimination of divine and human speech. So he, who begins with the utterance of the word him, discriminates divine and human speech.

¹ The time of himkriya and pratipadyate are obviously really identical. This is readily explained by the originally timeless force of the form kriya (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 889, 894). So the acrist participle in Greek sometimes coincides with the time of the verb, e.g. Monro, Homeric Grammar³, p. 212. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, pp. 405-409) holds that in all these cases the distinction of time between the main verb and the gerund exists, but, however natural the growth of this use is, it is only to be found in the examples by forcing the sense. Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 223) lays stress on the 'acristic' effect of the weak root and appears to think that this accounts for the past force. But it should be noted that in Vedic we have no evidence that the forms were ever felt as other than participles either present or past. In striyam dṛṣṭvāya kitavām tatāṭa it is most probable that the writer did not feel dṛṣṭvāya as='after having seen', but as 'seeing'. Cf. my remarks in J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 164. For beginning the Mahāvrata with him, cf. Śāākhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 1. For him + √kr, cf. Whitney, § 1079. It is obsolete in the classical language.

2 Cf. I, 1, 3; 2, 2.

² Cf. I, 2, 4. The use is found in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 3, and often in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa. For the idea, cf. the stories of the wedlock of the sāman and rc in the Satapatha (IV, 6, 7, 11, &c.), and Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇas, and Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 23, 1.

* Sāyaṇa explains this as a metaphor from the search of hidden treasure, a probable supposition in the case of India, where burial of treasure (cf. Gautama Dharma Sūtra, X, 43-45; Vasiṣṭha Dharma Sūtra, IV, 13, 14; Manu, VIII, 35-39; Yājñavalkya, II, 34, 35) has always been frequent in consequence of the uncertainty of life and government. A different idea is found in Satapatha Brāhmaņa, VI, 3, 2; 5, 4, &c.

2. They say, 'What is the beginning of this day?' Let him reply, 'Mind and speech.' All desires rest on the one, the other yields all desires. All desires rest on the mind, for with the mind man conceives all desires. All desires rest on him who knows this. Speech yields all desires, for by speech man expresses all desires. Speech yields all desires to him who knows this. Then they say, 'One should not really begin the day with a rc, yajus, or sāman verse, nor start from a rc, yajus, or sāman verse.' So one should say the vyāhrtis first. The vyāhrtis are bhūḥ, bhuvaḥ, and svar, and they are the three Vedas. Bhūḥ is the Rgveda, bhuvaḥ the Yajurveda, and svar the Sāmaveda. Therefore

The real meaning of the discrimination is suggested by Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 18, 13: om iti vai daiyam tatheti mānuṣam \ daiyena caivainam tan mānuṣena ca pāpād enasaḥ pramuñcati, cf. Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 162, n. 1. The later use of daivī vāc must be related to Devanāgarī. For the question of Prākrit, cf. I, 5, 2, n. In the Rāmāyaṇa passage where Hanumant ponders as to addressing Sītā, the possibilities he contemplates are (according to Jacobi) vācaṃ mānuṣīṃ saṃskṛtām, or dvijātir iva, vācaṃ saṃskṛtām, which appears clearly to discriminate between the popular and sacerdotal forms of Sanskrit. That the former expression means (as Dr. Grierson, Ind. Ant., XXIII, 56, holds) the Prākrit of the educated Kṣatriyas and well-to-do persons round the court appears excessively improbable. Nor is it correct to say that these forms of Sanskrit were practically alike. The Epic and the Sanskrit of the Brahminical schools are of distinctively different style, and Sītā might well have been surprised at being addressed not in the Kṣatriya fashion but by priestly expressions, much as a lady of the middle ages would find a great difference between the address of a countess and a monk, even when both spoke the same Latin language.

1 Sāyaņa explains this as referring to the need for care in going through the service, composed as it is of mixed verses.

² Sāyaņa explains that the desires are phases of mind, manovṛttiviteṣāḥ, which is too subtle for the Āranyaka. Cf. Bṛhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, III, 2: manasā hi kāmān kāmāyate; and Jacob, Concordance, p. 292; Aitareya Brāhmaņa, VI, 2, 3.

² Max Müller, following Sāyaṇa, takes the words narco—iyād iti as giving the ground for the rule referred to in tad āhur. But this leaves no iti to mark the end of the rule referred to in tad āhur, and in view of the usual practice of the Āraṇyaka, it is safer to take the quotation as extending to iyād. There is no doubt that the construction of the last part of the sentence is not easy. For the abl., cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 107 sq.; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 51.

For the later history of the triad see Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, p. 196; E. T., p. 217. See also Jaiminīya Upanisad Brāhmaņa, III, 15; IV, 28, and I, I. Taittirīya Upanisad, I, 5, 6, shows clear signs of a later origin than the Aitareya by its elaboration.

On the three Vedas and the Atharvaveda, see especially Bloomfield, Atharvaveda, pp. 21 sq.; Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, pp. 191 sq.; Hopkins, Great Epic of India, pp. 2 sq. The silence of the Āranyaka is certainly in favour of its early date. It is of course true that the Atharvaveda contains much old material and probable that a Samhitā existed before the Āranyaka was written (cf. Taittirīya Samhita, VII, 5, 11, 2, where the Angirases are referred to he does not really begin the day with a rc, yajus, or saman verse, nor start from a rc, yajus, or sāman verse.

3. He begins with tad, this. Now 'this this' is food, and so thus he obtains food. Prajāpati indeed uttered this as the first word consisting of one syllable or of two,3 viz. tata or tāta. So a child when it first speaks utters the word of one or two syllables, tata or tata. So with this very word with tata in it4 he begins. A Rsi says (RV., X, 71, 1), 'O Brhaspati, the first point of speech,' for this is the first point of speech. 'Which they have uttered making a name,' for by speech are names made. 'That of them which was the best and flawless,' for this is the best and flawless, 'That is hidden in secret by their love and yet is made manifest,' for this as regards the body is secret, merely the deities (who enter the body), but as regards the gods it is made manifest. This is the meaning of the verse. 6

(apparently as a fourth Samhita), and Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 110), but the recognition is a sign of later date (Taittirīya Samhitā, VII, is not probably early, but, like VI, is later than the Aitareya Brāhmaņa).

1 Tad is the first word of the first stanza of the first hymn of the Niskevalya Sastra, the so-called Rājana, RV., X, 120, 1.

It may be rendered 'this word tad' (= tat tad-iti), but Säyana takes it as a repetition. The repetition of annam is apparently not connected with that of tad, though it may have been helped by it.

Max Müller seems to regard the two alternatives as tat and tata or tāta. This of course is the usual signification of ekākṣara and dvyakṣara, but Sāyaṇa refers these words to the quantity of the first and second syllables in tata and tāta respectively. The form of the sentences makes this seem certainly correct, however unusual it may be. We may have here early evidence of the omission of the final a in ordinary conversation.

I take tat tatavatya separately and eva tat as = 'so'. This seems also to be Sāyana's interpretation. Max Müller says: 'With this very word, consisting of tat or tatta [cf. the reading of L], he begins,' and in a note: 'If tat is called the very same word, eva is used in the sense of iva.' This appears rather unsatisfactory, and Sayana is probably right in thinking tat and tata similar enough for the purpose here in view. This passage, indeed, seems to be a deliberate and somewhat elaborate variant of the older legend (preserved in Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, XI, 1, 6) by which Prajāpati when he first spoke uttered bhūb, bhuvaḥ, and suvar, which are words of one and two syllables respectively. Sayana has: ekena hrasvenopetaikākṣarā \ dvābhyām hrasvadīrghābhyām upetā dvyakṣarā. Ekadvyakṣara is apparently an adject. Dvandva with disjunctive force; cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, 1, 70; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 73 sq.; Vergl. Syntax, III, 224 sq., for early examples. The whole sense is little more than that tad which is equal to tat(a) or tat(a) is the name which, as brahman, is revealed in the deities and implicit in man in whose organs, &c., the deities are (as in II, 1, 5; Śāńkhāyana Āraņyaka, IX, 1, &c.).

For adhidaivatam, cf. Chandogya Upanişad, I, 3, 1, &c.; Whitney, P. A. O. S., Oct., 1890,

p. li. So often in Jaiminīya Upanişad Brāhmaņa.

6 This stanza is very obscure. Săyana quotes Aśvalāyana Grhya Sūtra, I, 15, 8, where it is laid down that a child's secret name is only to be known by father and mother until the upanayana. That this is what is referred to here is not impossible, as Max Müller points out,

4. He begins with, 'That was the oldest in the worlds' (RV., X, 120, 1), for that 2 is indeed the oldest in the worlds. 'Whence sprung the terrible one with brilliant might,' for from it he was born who is terrible with brilliant might. 'Immediately on birth he destroys his foes,' for immediately on being born he destroyed evil. 'After whom all helpers rejoice,' for all creatures are helpers, and they rejoice after him, saying, 'He' has risen, he has risen.' 'Growing by strength, the powerful one' (RV., X, 120, 2), for he grows by strength, the powerful one. 'As foe he smites fear into the Dasa,' for all fear him. 'Taking that which breathes and that which breathes not,' this refers to the living and the lifeless. 'What was offered in the feasts came to thee,' this means, 'all is in thy power.' 'All turn their thoughts on thee' (RV., X, 120, 3), this means all beings, all minds, all thoughts, turn on thee. 'When these two become three helpers,' these two being united produce offspring. Children and cattle are his who knows this. 'Join what is sweeter than sweet with the sweet,' for the pair is sweet, the offspring sweet, and so with the pair he joins the offspring. 'He' conquered by the sweet that which is sweet,' for the pair is sweet, the offspring is sweet, and thus through the pair he conquers offspring. A Rsi 5 says, but the interpretation adopted in n. 4 above seems to render the reference quite unnecessary. The last verse he explains as meaning that the form of the gods who enter the body is hidden from men, but the gods themselves know the name well. This is practically meaningless, and Max Müller suggests that it may be that the name refers to the gods or to tad, the brahman. The reference, however, to the deities who enter the body is clearly meant in some form, cf. II, 4, 2; 1, 5; and the sense is the brahman = tad which is the beginning of speech and the first of names is revealed (as the gods) and implicit in man. This section is referred to by 'Sāyaṇa' on Atharvaveda, XVIII, 4, 77; see Lanman in Whitney's Atharvaveda, p. 892.

1 The trea, RV., X, 120, 1-3, which begins is a stotriya, because it corresponds to the Rājana Sāman.

² i.e. brahman (Sāyaṇa). The explanations of this hymn in the Āraṇyaka must be deliberately perverse, so absurd are they. Cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, xxix, n. 6.

The double udagād is, according to Sāyana, because he is Āditya or heaven, and Agni or earth. The exact use of the aorist is characteristic of the early character of the text, cf. Whitney's criticism of Delbrück (Synt. Forsch., II, 8-86; Altindische Syntax, pp. 280-289) in

A. J. P., XIII, 290; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 174.

* Sāyaṇa takes adaḥ as referring to mithunam which is sumadhu as consisting of the son and daughter-in-law. Madhunā is equal to grandchildren, and abhiyodhīh is 'provide', i.e. 'provide that dear pair with dear offspring, our grandchildren'. He does not therefore even follow the Āranyaka, which clearly took sumadhu as accusative. Max Müller translates: 'And this (the son when married) being very sweet conquered through the sweet.' But this represents neither the Āranyaka nor Sāyana.

This verse, which is not in the Rgveda, is not by any means clearly connected with the rest. Sāyana gives two alternatives, that it is connected with the verse svādoh svādīyah svādunā srjā sam, or with the whole Sastra (not, as in Max Müller, that it is connected with the hymn tad id āsa, or the Veda in general). In the first case 'this body 'is the body of the sacrificer, the other

'Since he raised this body in that body;' he means this body consisting of the Veda in that corporeal body. 'Then let this body be the medicine of that,' he means this body consisting of the Veda is to be the medicine of that corporeal body. Of this eight syllables are gāyatrī, eleven are triṣtubh, twelve jagatī, and ten virāj. This consisting of ten syllables rests in the other three metres. The three syllable word puruṣa goes into the virāj. These indeed are all metres, the three and the virāj. To him who knows this thus is this day completed with all the metres.

5. He extends the verses by the use of nada. Nada indeed is man. So a man speaking sounds as it were. In the words nadam va odafinām (RV., VIII, 69, 2), odalyah are the waters in heaven, for they water all this; and they are the waters of the mouth, for they water all proper food. In nadam yoyuvafinām, yoyuvalyah are the waters of the sky, for they inundate as it were; and they are the waters of perspiration, for they run constantly as it were. In the words patim vo aghnyānām, aghnyāh are the waters that are born of the smoke of fire, and they are the waters that spring from the organ. In dhenūnām body the body of the parents and the result is seen in svādob, &c. The other case gives the interpretation of the Āraṇyaka, as Sāyaṇa himself admits, tad etad dvilīyaṇ vyākhyānam asyām ity ādinā brāhmaṇena spaṣṭākriyate. This shows how little Sāyaṇa felt bound to follow his authorities. The words svām—airayata occur in various guises in Atharvaveda, VII, 3; Taittirīya Saṃhitā, I, 7, 12, 2; Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā, I, 10, 3; Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 19, 32; Šāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 17, 1.

The body of the sacrificer (Sāyaṇa).

The hymn tad id āsa (Sāyaṇa).

* The hymn, RV., X, 120, is tristubh, and the desired metres are only obtained by torturing it. The first, second, and fourth pādas have ten syllables, the third eleven. The first eight of the first pāda give the gāyatrī, the remaining two added to the ten of the second and fourth pādas the jagatī, and the first, second, and fourth (or rather the fourth), the virāj.

Because by adding pu to the first pada, ru to the second, sah to the third, the verses all become tristubh. See V, 1, 6.

vidusa may be genitive (cf. n. 8 on I, 2, 2) or dative.

¹ The exact meaning is explained in V, 1, 6. After each pāda of RV., X, 120, 1, is inserted (besides the syllables pu, ru, ṣaḥ) one pāda of the hymn, RV., VIII, 69, 2, so as to make a brhatī. Cf. Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 6, 2, 3, and Eggeling, S.B.E., XLIII, 113, n. 1.

² Sāyana explains the verse with reference to juice produced at the third pressing of the Soma, the rjīsa (cf. Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth., I, 235 sq.), and takes nadam as the sacrificer, and supplies raksata. For the real sense see Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 191 sq.

³ svedate is clearly correct, the accusative being cognate. R's svedante is primarily attractive but is improbable, and as a perusal of p. 80 will show, he (like the MSS., cf. Whitney, P. A. O. S., Oct., 1887, p. xxv) is very uncertain about nasals. Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 275; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 24; Delbrück, Vergl. Syntax, I, 366-368.

* Sāyaṇa gives two interpretations, either smoke (in the shape of a cloud) produced by fire, or from smoke and fire, quoting Kālidāsa, Meghadūta, 4, dhūmajyotiḥsalilamarutām isudhyasiti, the dhenavah are the waters, for they stir all this, and by isudhyasi he means 'thou art lord'. He extends a tristubh and an anustubh. For the tristubh is male, the anustubh female, and the two are a pair. So a man having taken to himself a wife regards himself as it were more complete. By repeating the first verse thrice, the verses become twenty-five. The trunk is the twenty-fifth, Prajāpati is the twenty-fifth. He has ten fingers, ten toes, two legs, two arms, and the trunk is the twenty-fifth. He adorns this trunk, the twenty-fifth. Further the day (of the sacrifice) is twenty-five, and the stoma hymn of this day is twenty-five, like is brought about by like. So the two are twenty-five.

6. He begins with tad, this. Now 'this this' is food, and so thus he obtains food. Prajāpati indeed uttered this as the first word consisting of one syllable or of two, viz. tata or tāta. So a child when it first speaks utters the word of one or two syllables, tata or tāta. So with this very word with tata in it he begins. A ṣṣi says (RV., X, 71, 1), 'O Brhaspati, the first point of speech,' for this is the first point of speech. 'Which they have uttered making a name,' for by speech are names made. 'That of them which was the best and flawless,' for this is the best and flawless. 'That is hidden in secret by their love and yet is made manifest,' for this as regards the body is secret, namely the deities (who enter the body), but as regards the gods it is made manifest. This is the meaning of the verse.

7. He begins with the hymn, 'That was the oldest in the worlds' (RV., X, 120, 1). What is oldest is great; the form of this day as possessing greatness is perfect. (There is the word 'greatness') in the verse, 'That fame of thine, O Maghavan, through thy greatness' (RV., X, 54, 1); the form of this day as possessing greatness is perfect. (There is the word 'strength') in the verse, 'He groweth more for strength' (RV., VI, 30, 1); the form of this day as possessing strength is perfect.

samnipātah kva meghah. The waters are aghnyā, he says, because plants and trees are to be tended by all. Cf. also Brhaddevatā, IV, 41, which explains RV., I, 164, 43: śakamayanı dhūmam; Atharvaveda, IX, 10, 25.

6 tad id āsa is in tristubh, nadam va odatīnām in anustubh. The former is male because bigger than the latter. For the following, cf. Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, p. 157.

The twenty-five are made up by nine verses of RV., X, 120, 1; six of X, 54; five of VI, 30, and three of I, 51, 4 which are mentioned in I, 3, 7 below. Cf. I, 1, 2, 4 and n. 6 on V, 1, 5.

(There is the word 'hymns') in the verse. 'Then, manliest of men, with songs, with hymns' (RV., III, 51, 4); this day is indeed a hymn, and the form of this day as possessing a hymn is perfect. He extends the first two² verses, which are deficient, by a syllable. In the small '(womb) seed is deposited, in the small (heart) the vital spirits, in the small (stomach) food is placed. This serves for the obtainment of these desires. He obtains these desires who knows this. The two of ten syllables serve to obtain both kinds of proper food, that which is footed and that which is footless. They become eighteen syllables apiece. Of the ten, nine are the breaths, one is the self. This is the perfection of the self. Eight syllables remain in each. Who knows this obtains whatsoever he desires.

8. He extends the verses by means of nada.¹ Now breath is sound. Therefore every breath, when it sounds, sounds loud as it were. The verse nadam va odafinām (RV., VIII, 69, 2) is by its syllables² an uṣṇih, but by its feet an anuṣṭubh. Uṣṇih is life, anuṣṭubh speech. Thus he places speech and life in him. By repeating the first verse thrice, the verses become twenty-five. The trunk is the twenty-fifth, Prajāpati is the twenty-fifth. He has ten fingers, ten

i. e. animals and vegetables (Sāyaṇa).

i.e. ten syllables in RV., X, 120, 1a, the syllable pu, and seven in VIII, 69, 2a.

Similarly with the other three pādas.

6 (śirasi) chidrāni is the version of Sāyana and it is as probable as any other, though the word originally meant breath and only metaphorically is transferred to its use as describing the organs of sense. The nine 'orifices', seven in the head and two in the body, according to a Śruti (Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, II, 5, 9; 10; 6, 8, is the reference, I think) cited by Sāyana (sapta vai śīrṣanyāḥ prāṇā dvāv avāñcau), are referred to in the Kāṭhaka Upaniṣad, V, I (where in all, however, there are eleven), Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad, III, 18, Yogaśikhā Upaniṣad, 4, Yogatattva Upaniṣad, 16, and elsewhere. They are ears, eyes, mouth, nostrils and organs of evacuation, with the navel when ten are counted, as in the Jaiminīya Upaniṣad, and Jaiminīya Brāhmaṇa, II, 77 (J.A.O.S., XV, 240), and brahmarandhra when eleven are counted. Cf. Deussen, Philosophie der Upaniṣhads, p. 243; E. T., p. 265; Sechvig Upaniṣhads, p. 281, n. 1, and nava vai śirasi prānāḥ, Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 2, which points to a different idea, for which see I, 4, 1, n. 5; 5, 1, n. 6; 2, n. 13.

That is, after deducting the ten from the eighteen.

In his interesting note on relative clauses in the Veda, Edgren, P. A. O.S., May, 1883, pp. xii-xv, points out that unlike Greek, Vedic Sanskrit uses the indef. rel. pronoun with the indic. This rule is not observed in the later Vedic literature, e.g. Āśvalāyana Grhya Sūtra, I, 3, 1: atha khalu yatra kva ca hosyan syāt, &c.

1 i. e. by the stanza, RV., VIII, 69, 2.

It has four pādar, and is therefore like an anustubh, which of course it really is. But it has in the Samhitā form only twenty-seven syllables, or resolving the y in aghnyānām in pāda 3, twenty-eight, which is the number of syllables in an usnih, which, however, has three pādas (8+8+12) only.

² That is RV., X, 120, 1a, with ten syllables, and VIII, 69, 2a, with seven. He adds pu to them.

toes, two legs, two arms, and the trunk is the twenty-fifth. He adorns this trunk, the twenty-fifth. Further this day (of the sacrifice) is twenty-five, the stoma hymn of this day is twenty-five, like is brought about by like. So the two are twentyfive. This is the twenty-fifth with regard to the body. Now with regard to the deities. The eye, ear, mind, speech, and vital spirits, these five deities a have entered into this person, and he has entered into these five deities. He is then 4 pervaded wholly in all his limbs up to his hair and nails. So all beings, down to ants, are born thus pervaded. A Rsi says (RV., X, 114, 8), 'A thousandfold are these fifteen members,'5 for five arises from ten. 'As large as heaven and earth, so large is it,' for the self is as large as heaven and earth. 'A thousandfold are the thousand mights,'6 thus does the poet please and magnify the members. 'As far as brahman extends so far does Vac,' wherever there is brahman, there is Vac. wherever Vac, there is brahman, is what is meant. The first 8 of these hymns has nine verses, for nine are the breaths, and it serves to win them. The second has six verses, the seasons are six, and it serves to win them. The third has five verses, the paikli9 has five feet, and it is food, so it serves to win proper food. Then comes a tristich, there are three threefold worlds, and it serves to conquer them. These verses become brhafts, 10 the ^{4 &#}x27;Then' is taken by Max Müller as referring to the five deities, by Sāyaṇa as referring to the body in which puruṣa is. But the latter view seems quite sound. The senses and puruṣa are absolutely inter-connected. For sāngaḥ, cf. Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, III, 3, 3. For ā, cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 88; J. A. O. S., XXIII, 151 sq.

⁵ ukthā Sāyana translates utkṛṣṭāny angāni and, as hymns will not do, he must be approximately right. His view is that the fifteen are made up of the five above mentioned and the corresponding five elements (earth, water, fire, wind, and ether) forming the mother and father. But this is more than doubtful. For the ten the ātman comes with its five organs and a complete body.

Because the senses are applied to a great variety of objects (Sāyaņa).

Brahman is in all and wherever a name is given, it is there, cf. I, 3, 3. Sāyana quotes a Śruti, Taittirīya Āranyaka, III, 12: sarvāni rāpāni vicitya dhīrah i nāmāni kṛtvābhivadan yad āste II For the very close connexion of brahman and Vāc, see I, 1, 1, n. 8; Atharvaveda, IV, 20; Bloomfield, Atharvaveda, p. 88.

[&]quot;RV., X, 120, has nine verses. The repetition of eṣām is due, says Sāyaṇa, to the comparative nature of these hymns as used in the Sastra, the first eṣām refers to the hymns as they stand in the Sastra, the second to them alone as they stand in the Samhitā. This is of course impossible. For the nine prāṇas, see I, 3, 7, n. 6. For the seasons, cf. Zimmer, Altindisches Leben, pp. 373, 374; Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 184.

The first pāda of RV., X, 120, I, has, with pu, eleven syllables, the first pāda of RV., VIII, 69, 2, seven verses, making eighteen. So two pādas give thirty-six syllables, or a brhatī. The twenty-three verses give forty-six brhatīs, as each is extended similarly (Sāyana).

metre, the immortal, the world of the gods. This is the body. Even so he who knows this comes by this way near to the undying self.11

Then comes the sūdadohas verse.¹ Sūdadohas is breath and by breath he joins together all joints. Then the neck verses.² They denote them as uṣṇih verses according to their metre. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath and by breath he joins together all joints. Then come the head verses. They are in gāyatrī, for it is the beginning of the metres, and the head is the beginning of the members of the body.³ They are in arkavat⁴ verses. Arka is Agni. They are nine verses, the head is of nine pieces.⁵ He recites the tenth verse. It is the skin and hairs of the head. It serves for reciting more than

Il Sayana explains this obscure statement as referring to a birth as a deva. It may be doubted if it means more than he comprehends the immortal body (cf. ātmā, just above), i.e. he who knows these verses thus performs that part of the rite which corresponds with the body of the bird to which the Nişkevalya Sastra is likened (cf. I, 1, 1). That ātmā above means body or trunk seems certain, and the second ātmānam can hardly refer to anything else. If it does, it may simply mean, 'he becomes immortal.' The acc. is governed by abhi; cf. I, I, 2, n. 10.

¹ The Sānkhāyana Āranyaka treats all this very briefly, II, 1, covers all Adhyāya 3 and the sūdadohas. The sūrṣan comes in II, 2, before the graiva, II, 3; then the pakṣau (akṣa, bāhū, prahastaka), II, 4-5; then the caturuttarāni, II, 6; the asītis, gūyatrī, bārhatī, auṣnihī, II, 7-10; the vasa, II, 11; the dvipadāh, II, 12; the aindrāgna sūkta, II, 13; the āvapana, II, 14; the ānuṣṭubha samāmnāya, II, 15; the tristupchata, II, 16; then two miscellaneous chapters, II, 17; 18.

Sūdadohas is interpreted as yielding milk and it represents the verse, RV., VIII, 69, 3, tā asya sūdadohasah somam šrīnanti prīnayah ljānman devānām višas trisv ā rocanē divāh II This is the verse immediately after the nada verse. Its use here is explained by Sāyana because it is prānasvarūpā. Cf. Śānkhāyana, II, 1: imāni parvāņi samhitāni bhavanti. parvan is apparently used vaguely; cf. I, 2, 3, n. 12.

The first expression of this precise idea seems to be in the Atharvaveda, X, 8, 43; pundārīkam nāvadvāram tribhir gunēbhir āvrtam. Whitney in his Translation, p. 601, thinks that the later gunas are already referred to, but as Lanman (Translation, p. 1045) points out, Garbe (Sāmkhyatattvakaumudī, Abh. der Bayerischen Ak. der Wiss., XIX, 529) renders the three coverings as skin and nails and hair (cf. n. 6). A different view of the prānas appears in Kāṭhaka Samhitā (XXXIII, 3, cited by Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 113, n. 2 for a grammatical point): daļa vai purusa prānāh stanau dvādašau (=11th and 12th). Cf. also Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, II, 15.

the stoma. These form the trivṛt stoma and the gāyatrī metre, and it is after the production of this stoma and this metre that there arises all that is. These verses serve for production. Children and cattle are his who knows this. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he joins together all joints. Then come the vertebrae verses. They are in virāj metre. So one man says to another, 'Thou shinest above us,' or, 'Thou bearest a high neck,' to one who is proud. Or, again, because they run close together, they

6 In the trivrt stoma only nine verses of the hymn are used, but here the tenth verse of the hymn is also employed. This is not the case in Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 2. Sāyana cites Taittirīya Brāhmana, I, 2, 6: trivrc chiro bhavati \ tredhā vihitam hi siras \ loma chavīr asthi parācā stuvanti \ Cf. also Śānkhāyana, l.c.: trīni vā asya sīrṣnaḥ kapālāni bhavanti \ Satapatha

"vijavaḥ is taken by Sāyaṇa as a masculine singular; he derives it from vileṣṇa javaḥ, and calls it the part at the root of the wings, or, taking it perhaps as plural, from viju, the lower bones of the neck. It is most probably a plural. Max Müller's dictum that tā-virājo proves nothing as it must be attracted goes too far. The exact sense of vijavaḥ is doubtful. But as grīvāḥ is plural and properly means 'the cervical cartilages' or windpipe, the front part of the neck, then most probably vijavaḥ is also plural and denotes the back part of the neck, the cervical vertebrae, which are usually denoted by skandhāḥ (Hoemle, J. R. A. S., 1906, p. 918; 1907, pp. 1, 2). This gives a perfectly good sense and seems imperatively demanded by the allusion below to a stiffnecked man; in the proverb grīvāḥ is used (in a way which spoils the argument formally), either (a) as neck generally or (b) as cervical vertebrae, a sense found in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, XII, 2, 4, 10 (Hoemle, p. 918). The grīvāḥ of the Āraṇyaka must, however, be different from the vijavaḥ. Eggeling (S. B. E., XLIII, 112, n. 1) takes vijavaḥ as 'the roots (sinews) of the wings' (cf. Böhtlingk and Monier-Williams, Dict., s. v.) and Friedländer (Introd., p. 10) translates 'Flügelansatz'.

For tā virājo bhavanti, if it is, as is not likely, attracted, cf. examples in Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 564-566; Chāndogya Upaniṣad, VI, 16, 2: etad ātmyam idam sarvam tat satyam sa ātmā; infra, II, 6, 1, and for Sanskrit, Speijer, Sanskrit Syntax, § 27. Examples, however, on non-attraction are found when needed to make plain the sense, e. g. the Chāndogya passage cited has tat tvam asi and so passim in the Upaniṣads (see Jacob's Concordance, p. 137). The use is very old, being found in Greek and Latin also. Cf. below, II, 2, 2: eṣa vā rg eṣa, &c.; eṣa vai padam, &c. A case or two seems to occur of the reverse attraction, e. g. Maitrāyanī Upaniṣad, I, 2: eṭad vṛttam purastād duḥšakyam eṭat prašnam, where see, however, Max Müller's note (S. B. E., XV, 288, n. 1).

This is the translation adopted by Max Müller from Sāyana. This may be correct, but the passage would certainly run better if it were taken all as one sentence. 'So one man says to another, "Thou shinest above us, thou bearest indeed a stiff neck," that is to one who is proud.' But the position of stabhamānam vā renders this doubtful. On the other hand Sāyana feels that it is difficult to explain the grīvā vai dhārayasi if taken alone, and this seems to me to turn the balance in favour of the translation here suggested. For this meaning of grīvāh see Satapatha Brāhmana, XII, 2, 4, 10, and Hoernle, J. R. A. S., 1906, pp. 916-922. Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 2: trīni vā āsām grīvānām parvāni bhavanti.

* dutāḥ must be from √du gutau (Dhātupāṭha, XXII, 46) as Sāyaṇa says. Monier-Williams' Dict. omits this form, giving daviṣāṇi, RV., X, 34, 5, as the only quotable form (see v. Schroeder, Vienna Oriental Journal, XIII, 119-122). v. Schroeder (ibid., 297, 298) finds the same root with upa + ā in the sense 'anlegen' in Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, VI, 2: kākṣa upādūtyaḥ, and are taken to be 11 the best food. For virāj is food, and food strength. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he joins together all joints.

2. Now comes the right wing. It is this world, it is this Agni, it is speech, it is the Rathantara, it is Vasistha, it is a hundred. These are the six powers of it. The sampāla hymn serves to win desires and for firmness. The pankti verse serves for proper food. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he joins together all joints. Then follows the left wing. It is that world, it is that sun, it is mind, it is the Brhat, it is Bharadvāja, it is a hundred. These are the six powers of it. The sampāla hymn serves to Kapiṣṭhala Samhitā, IV, 1: kahṣa upādutyaḥ, and compares Greek δύω, ἐκδύω, ἐκδύω, and Latin induo, enuo. Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 98) still treats daviṣāṇi as if it meant 'I will play', as taken by Geldner (Siebenzig Lieder, pp. 158 sq.). It cannot be from √du 'burn', as suggested doubtfully in Whitney, Roots, &c., p. 75.

sambāļhatamāh is clearly the reading, from \(\shape bamh\) (i.e. bāhha for bandha). It occurs in the Taittirīya Āranyaka. Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 954; Macdonell, Vedic n annatamām pratyacyante is thus construed by Max Müller, who says the adverbial form is vouched for by Pāṇini, V, 4, 11. The free use of comparatives and superlatives of this class is a sign of early style, but in the earliest literature (RV. and AV.) the accusative neuter is preferred, see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 1111 e, and 1119. Cf. also Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 1, 2, 5: ātamam khyāyate; ibid., X, 5, 2, 10: anutamām gopāyati, and Delbrück, Allindische Syntax, p. 194; pratarām iva kriyante, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 48, 4. te natarām pāpmānam apāhata, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 25, 3. But none of these or similar cases seem to justify annatamām, and the sense given by Sāyaṇa as prāpyante would equally be obtained by rendering 'they approximate towards (prati + √ac) that which is most truly food' (fem. because virāj is fem.). For such a use of annatamā, cf. RV., II, 41, 16 (ambitama, nadītama, devitama), and many examples in Delbrück, 1. c., p. 193; and for the acc., cf. abhitampadyante with acc., I, 1, 2, n. 10. The acc. is governed by the preposition. yad may be taken with dutah as equivalent to a finite verb, which is not very probable, or with pratyacyante, as giving the explanation of 'the vijavah are virāj'.

1 Agni is the guardian of this world and he is also Vac, II, 4, 2, and Vac is Rathantara, III, 1, 6 (Sāyaṇa), while Vasistha brought the Rathantara.

² See V, 2, 2 for the verses. They are RV., VII, 32, 22 and 23; VIII, 3, 7 and 8 (three each according to the reckoning of the Āranyaka); I, 32 (15 vv.); VII, 18, 1-15; VII, 19 (11 vv.); 20 (10 vv.); 23 (6 vv.); 25-29 (26 vv.); IV, 20 (11 vv.); making 100 in all, and then the paikti, I, 80, 1; IV, 20, is styled the sampāta hymn.

The moon is the deity of mind, but here the identity of sun and moon is meant, says

Sāyaṇa, and manas is Bṛhat, and Bharadvāja made the Bṛhat.

⁴ See V, 2, 2 for the verses. They are RV., VI, 46, 1 and 2; VIII, 61, 7 and 8 (three each according to this reckoning); VI, 18 (15 vv.); 23 (10 vv.); 24 (10 vv.); 25 (9 vv.); 31-38 (40 vv.); IV, 23 (11 vv.); making 101 in all, and then the painkti, I, 81, 1. The sampāta is IV, 23; cf. Aitareya Brāhmaņa, IV, 30, 2. The satam is not precisely accurate, but the inaccuracy is deliberate. There are 100 in the right and 101 in the left, and the painkti verse adds one to each of them. For the varying sizes of the wings see Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, I, 2, 6, 3.

win desires and for firmness. The paikti verse serves for proper food. These two are deficient and excessive. The Brhad is male, the Rathantara is female. The excess is of the male, the deficiency of the female. Therefore are they deficient and excessive. Now by one feather is the left wing of the bird the better and therefore the left wing is the better by one verse. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he joins together all joints. Then follows the tail. This consists of twenty-one dvipadā verses.8 For twenty-one are the backward feathers of the bird. Again of all stomas is the ekavimśa the support, and the tail the support of all birds. He recites a twenty-second verse. This is given the form of two supports.6 So all birds support themselves on their tails, and having supported themselves on their tails, they fly up. For the tail is a support. He (the bird) is supported by two decades of virāj verses. He again, the man, is supported by these two dvipadās, the twenty-first and twentysecond. That which forms the bird serves to obtain the desires of the man, That which forms the man serves for his prosperity, glory, proper food, and honour. Next comes the sūdadohas verse, next an additional verse, next the sūdadohas verse. The sūdadohas is male, the additional verse female. Therefore he recites the sūdadohas verse on either side of the additional verse. Therefore the seed of the two when effused obtains oneness with regard to the woman alone. So birth takes place in and from the woman. Therefore he recites the additional verse in that way.7

3. He recites the eighty gāyatrī tristichs.¹ The eighty gāyatrī tristichs are this world, and whatever glory, might,² wedlock, proper food, and honour there is in this world, may I obtain it, may I win it, may I possess it, may it be mine.

a These verses, RV., X, 157 (5 vv.); 172 (4 vv.), besides twelve from other Śākhās are given in V, 2, 2. Cf. Taittirīya Brāhmaņa, I, 2, 6, 4: ekavimāám púcham i dvipādāsu stuvanti prátisthityai i

⁶ The feet, Sāyana says. The idea seems to be, when there are twenty-two verses, that twenty represent the feet of the bird, and two those of the man. When twenty-one, it is the tail that is in question. See also V, 2, 2.

† atra is rendered asmin vijavavibhāge in Sāyana. It seems rather to refer to the position of the additional verse between the sūdadohas. For abhi in the Aitareya Brāhmana, cf. Liebich, Bezz. Beitr., XI, 281; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 88. Yoṣātas (Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1098) is possible and must be so taken if ājānā is a noun as given in Böhtlingk and Monier-Williams' Dict. But it is simpler to take it and pru° as adjectives. Cf. II, 1, 2: pṛthivītaḥ, where itaḥ is probably meant. Cf. ājānajāḥ in Taittirīya Upaniṣad, II, 8 (S. B. E., XV, 61, n. 2); ājānadevaḥ, Jacob, Concordance, p. 162. For the ekatesa, see Weber, Ind. Stud., X, 142, n. 3; XIII, 113, n. 2; Bolling, J. A. O. S., XXIII, 321 sq.

The three sets of tristichs are the food of the bird. They are set forth in detail in V, 2, 3; 5, respectively.

² Might is interpreted by Sāyana as vedašāstraprayuktā pūjā and is opposed to apacitih as dhanadhānyādisamrddharūpā pūjā, but he gives tejas as an alternative rendering.

Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he links together all this world. He recites the eighty brhafī tristichs. The eighty brhafī tristichs are the sky-world, and whatever glory, might, wedlock, proper food, and honour there is in the sky-world, may I obtain it, may I win it, may I possess it, may it be mine. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he links together all the world. He recites the eighty uṣṇih tristichs. The eighty uṣṇih tristichs are that world, heaven, and whatever glory, might, wedlock, proper food, and honour there is in that world, and the divinity of the gods, may I obtain it, may I win it, may I possess it, may it be mine. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he links together all that world.

ADHYĀYA 5.

He recites the vaśa¹ hymn desiring all to be in his power. There are twentyone² verses, for twenty-one are the parts in the stomach. Then the ekavimśa is the support of all stomas and the stomach the support of proper foods. They are in different metres. For the intestines are larger one than the other,³ some small,

* The insertion of dyaus is curious and Sayana notes it as being vispastartham.

4 This is taken by Sāyaṇa as being equal to brahman, the honoured of the gods, Indra, &c., and he quotes for it a passage intended to be Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad, VI, 7: tam īśvarāṇāṃ paramaṃ maheśvaraṃ taṃ devānāṃ paramaṃ daivaṃ (so R, read with S devatānāṃ (or daivatānām with ed.) paramaṃ ea daivatam). But, though Max Müller accepts this view, it is simpler to equate it merely to the divinity of the gods, i.e. the divine nature.

⁵ Probably apnavani is suggested by the as of asiti equated to √as, as stated by Eggeling (S. B. E., XLIII, 112, n. 1). The view that asiti contains the √as, eat, probably led to the identification of the asitis with anna as throughout the Āranyaka and also in Satapatha Brāhmana, VIII, 5, 2, 17; but when Sāyana in his commentary on this passage calls the asitis amnarūpāh, he merely refers, I think, to that identification and does not base it on etymology, as suggested by Eggeling.

II, 365 sq.

In Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 11, the sūdadohas verse is repeated twenty-four times. It agrees in counting the vala hymn as referring to the udara. The hymn is RV., VIII, 46. See V, 2, 5. It is called a nivid in I, 5, 2 below. The name is given because the author is Vaśa (Aśvya) says Sāyaṇa, and this is probably the case, showing the early date of the traditional authorships. Cf. Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 6, 2, 3, and Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 112, n. 2. See also Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XLII, 215 sq.

2 Only twenty of RV., VIII, 46, but the sūdadohas verse is counted in; see, however, on V, 2, 5 ad fin.

² Viksudram is rendered 'confused' by Max Müller. The rendering in the text is that of Sāyana and is supported by the use of viksudrā iva hi palavaḥ in Aitareya Brāhmana, V, 6, 5, some big. He recites them with the word om according to the metre and according to the manner of the occurrence. For the intestines are as it were according to the manner of their occurrence, some shorter, some longer. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he joins together all joints. Having recited this verse twelve times, he leaves off. Twelvefold are these breaths, seven in the head, two in the breast, three below. There are they contained, there are they perfected. Therefore there he leaves off. The hymn, O Indra and Agni, ye two (RV., VIII, 40), forms the two thighs which belong to Indra and Agni, the two supports with broad bones. The where see Sāyaṇa's explanation. For the compar., see Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 196 sq. The hrdaya is sthūla according to Sāyaṇa. The metres of RV., VIII, 46, are very various in the eyes of the Anukramaṇī. For the form antastya, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1245 c. The twenty transverse processes (kuntāpa) in the abdominal portion of the spine (udara), Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XII, 2, 4, 12; 14 (Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIV, 164, n. 1; Hoernle, J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 8, 10) suggest a different rendering, but the tradition is quite plausible. The epithet used too does not suit bones. It is, however, to be noted that in Śāńkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 6, the anūka, which can mean the lumbar portion of the spine (RV., VI, 163, 2, cited by Hoernle, J. R. A. S., 1906, p. 917) as well as the thoracic portion (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XII, 2, 4, 14, cited ibid., 1907, p. 9), is said to have twenty-one parvāṇi, and certainly this is so strikingly parallel to the udara with its twenty kuntāpas (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XII, 2, 4, 12), since the twenty-first may be the anūka itself, that it is possible that this passage should be so interpreted. But to do so would only be justified by the belief that these early medical statements rest, as Hoernle (Osteology, pp. 101–109) holds, on acquaintance with current medical views, an opinion I do not share for reasons given in Z. D. M. G., LXII, 134 sq.

* yathopapādam is a difficult phrase. Max Müller, following Sāyaṇa, renders 'according to rule'. Sāyaṇa explains this with reference to the technical rule, given by Āśvalāyaṇa Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 5, II; 12, that dvipadā verses are to be recited with a pause in the middle and om at the end, while ekapadā verses are to have om prefixed and affixed. This is artificial and perhaps it only means (cf. Monier-Williams' Dict., s.v.) 'just as it may happen', which version suits the antastyam better, and Sāyaṇa ends up with practically this version. Chandaskāram (for the Sandhi, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 340; Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmana, p. 420; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 71) refers of course to the different metres of the hymn. Cf. V, 2, 5, and note. For the gerund, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 995; Delbrück,

That is once each in the verses representing the body, neck, head, vertebrae, right side, left side, tail, food in three sets of eighty tristichs, and the vasa hymn. In the case of the tail there is a sūdadohas before and one after the additional verse, and so the number twelve is made up.

The number twelve is clearly to suit the twelve repetitions of the sūdadohas verse. It is probably got by taking the seven openings in the head, I, 3, 7; 8, and adding the two in the breasts, and the nābhi, pāyu and gudi. For other fanciful enumerations cf. Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, pp. 255 sq.; E.T., pp. 283 sq., and Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmana cited in note 6 on I, 3, 7.

7 He does not use that verse in the 'thigh' verses.

* Indra and Agni are the strongest of gods and the thighs enable the bird to fly aloft (Sāyaṇa). In Śānkhāyana these verses form part of what represents the tail in the Aitareya, but verses have six feet ³ for firmness. Man ¹⁰ has a double support, cattle have four feet. So he places the sacrificer with his double support among the four-footed cattle. The second verse has seven feet, ¹¹ and he makes it into a gāyatrī and an anuṣṭubh. Now the gāyatrī ¹² is brahman, the anuṣṭubh is Vāc, and so he unites Vāc and brahman. He recites ¹³ a triṣṭubh at the end. The triṣṭubh is strength and so with strength he surrounds animals. Therefore animals ¹⁴ depend on strength for their rising and their going forth.

2. In the Niskevalya hymn addressed to Indra, ¹ 'To thee, the mighty, the intoxicated one' (RV., X, 50), he inserts a nivid. ² For clearly thus does he place strength in himself. They are tristubhs and jagatīs. ³ They say, 'Why then does he insert a nivid among tristubhs and jagatīs?' ⁴ 'One metre only in Satapatha Brāhmana, VIII, 6, 2, 3, they are referred to the wings, see Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 111, 112. See also V, 3, 1, n. 1; above, p. 37.

They, except two and twelve, are in the so-called mahāpankti metre. For the correct expression urvasthīve, cf. the use of ūruphalaka for the thighs, Hoemle, Osteology, pp. 206, 215, perhaps wrongly read for uru. If ūru. is read here, it means 'the thighs and knees are supports', cf. Vājasaneyi Samhitā, XVIII, 23; Āpastamba Śulba Sūtra, XI, 2 and 3 (Z. D.M. G., LVI, 362).
10 Cf. I. I. 2, n. 5.

It consists of seven pādas of eight syllables, and can be made into an anustubh preceded by a gāyatrī. According to Sāyana, following Āśvalāyana, in the latter case there is a pause after the second pāda, and om after the third. In the former the om follows the fourth, and there is a pause after the second pāda.

12 Cf. I, 1, 1, n. 8.

¹² Sāyaņa holds this to refer to a special mode of recitation, by which after the first pāda there is a pause, and om follows the second, and so for the third and fourth, and which he calls triṣtupsamaya. This is from Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 15, 6; RV., VIII, 40, 12, is in triṣtubh.

This must mean, as Sāyaṇa says, and as Max Müller takes it, that animals obey a master. The last two accusatives are loosely connected as accusatives of point in which; such acc. are more frequent in Greek and Latin (e.g. Tacitus, Ann., I, 27: deserunt tribunal...manus intentantes, causam discordiae et initium armorum). In the Maitreya Upanişad (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, xlv): sa tatra paramam tapa ādityam udīkṣamāṇa ūrdhvas tiṣthati. Max Müller observes that āsthāya would be expected, but it is not necessary to suspect the text. For the compound, cf. Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 47 and 48. In pasūn parigachati the acc. is dependent on pari: so Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 28, 1, 2; tam etāḥ pasīca devatāḥ parimriyante (correct Speijer, Vedīsche und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 88).

1 Forming part of the thigh verses.

² Sāyana says the nivid (cf. Bṛhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, III, 9, 1, for a Vaisvadeva nivid) is to come after the fourth verse and is to be Indro devah somam pibatu (pinvamānaḥ S), &c. (Sānkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VIII, 17, 1). 'In himself' he renders as 'in the bird in the shape of the Śastra'. It may mean 'in himself' only. For the nivids see Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Kgveda, pp. 136 sq. The nivitsamjnake granthe in R is, unhappily, a myth, the reading (in R³, S, &c.) is sanghe.

2 The metre is irregular. According to the Anukramani, one and seven are jagati, the rest tristubh. Sayana offers the alternative of the last two being jagati.

* The prakrti has tristubhs at the midday pressing, and so the deviation needs explanation.

Note that the answer is repeated, and is not that of the Aranyaka itself, though it is adopted.

cannot support or fill the nivid of this day,' so he inserts the nivid among tristubhs and jagatīs. Let him know that this day has three nivids. The vasa hymn is a nivid, the Vālakhilyas are a nivid, and the nivid is a nivid. So let him know that there are three nivids in this day. Then come the hymns, 'Who in the forest as it were has been put down' (RV., X, 29), and 'Who first is born, the wise one' (RV., II, 12). In these is the verse, 'When the hopes of all are on food' (RV., X, 29, 4), and it serves to win proper food. Then comes an insertion. As many decades of verses in tristubh and jagatī addressed to Indra as they insert between these two hymns, after transforming them into brhafīs, so many years do they live beyond the normal life. By this insertion life is gained. Next he recites the sajanīya hymn that cattle may come to his offspring. Then he recites the Tārkṣya hymn. Tārkṣya is welfare, and the hymn leads to welfare. Thus he procures welfare. He recites Sāyaṇa says the nivid here referred to above is the mukhyā nivid, and the others are autacārike, and he assigns the use of several metres in the vasa and of triṣtubhs and jagatīs in the Vālakhilyas as the reason for their being styled nivids. The Vālakhilyas occur in the bṛhatī tristichs, see V, 2, 4. The Vālakhilyas and Nivids are printed from the Kasmīr MS. by Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Egweda, 1906. See also Oldenberg, Gött. gel. Anz., 1907. Scheftelowitz (pp. 10 sq.) argues that the Vālakhilyas are among the old Khilas which were accepted by some schools (probably the Bāṣkala and Māṇḍūkeya) and not by others (Śākalya), who only included 'Nationalhymnen' in their tradition. Oldenberg (pp. 221-235) effectually—in my opinion—demolishes this argument and leaves the Khilas what they have hitherto been considered, later additions to the Rgvedic tradition, though doubtless in themselves old. The Vālakhilyas are mentioned by that name in Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXX, 8; Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, I, 23; Maitrāyaṇī Upaniṣad, II, 3, &c. Cf. also Macdonell on Bṛhaddevatā, VI, 48; III, 116; Max Müller, Marut-Hymns, pp. xxxiii sq., who is, however, wrong in saying that they do not occur in any Khila collection; St. Petersburg Dict., VI, 954.

* Sāyaṇa renders dasatīnām as 'taken from the ten thousand numbered Samhitā', and Max Müller takes it as 'taken from the ten Mandalas'. Neither meaning appears certain. dasatī elsewhere means a decade, dasatayī refers to the Samhitā, and I think dasatīnām must mean decades. They are decades of tristubhs and jagatīs turned into brhatīs, and it may be noted that six tristubhs and two jagatīs give ten brhatīs. This may be the reference, or the reference may be to the fact that three tristubhs and seven jagatīs give thirteen brhatīs. Sāyaṇa contents himself with explaining that of three tristubhs and four jagatīs nine brhatīs can be made, which does not seem to be of much help. V, 3, 1, appears to support the view here taken.

Liebich, Bess. Beitr., XI, 295.

* That is, RV., II, 12, called sajaniyam in Aitareya Brahmana, V, 2, 1. For arjayan cf. Speijer, l. c., § 188; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 587; Delbrück, pp. 353 sq. The form is given by Whitney, Roots, &c., p. 14, as only found in the Sütras and Epic.

RV., X, 178, addressed, says Sāyaṇa, to Tārkṣya Garuḍa, but cf. Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 145. R reads Tārkṣo, but the Sarvānukramaṇī and Bṛhaddevatā agree with the RV. Cf. Kausitaki Brāhmaṇa, XXX, 5, and III, 1, 6, n. 5. For the form, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 233; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 43.

the ekapadā¹⁰ verse that he may at once be all and win all the metres.¹¹ In the hymn, 'All songs have caused Indra to grow' (RV., I, 11), there are additions ¹² to the verses. Seven verses does he make additions to. For seven are the breaths ¹³ in the head, and so does he place breaths in the head. He makes no addition to the eighth. The eighth is speech, and (he thinks), 'Let not speech be mingled with my breaths.' Therefore speech, though it has the same abode as the breaths, is not mingled with them. He recites the virāj verses.¹⁴ Virāj verses are food, and serve to win food. He ends with the hymn of Vasistha, ¹⁵ that he may become Vasistha. (He should end) with the perfect verse, ¹⁶ with the word 'great' in it, 'This praise to the great, the terrible, the bearer' (RV., VII, 24, 5). In the verse, 'Like a steed labouring at the yoke, he has taken his place' (RV., VII, 24, 5), the yoke is the end (of the car). This day is the end.¹⁷ Thus is (the verse) fit for the day. (He should end) with the perfect verse, with the word 'praise' in it, 'O Indra, this praise celebrates thee' (RV., VII, 24, 5°). With regard to the verse, 'As heaven over

The openings are referred to above, I, 3, 7; 8; 4, 1; 5, 1. The eighth as Vāc refers no doubt to the tongue. The first reference to seven openings is not (as Deussen seems to hold) that in Atharvaveda X, 8, 9, which is there practically unintelligible, and which is given up by Whitney (Translation, p. 597), but which appears in a more plausible form in Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 2, 3, where the verse has as its last pāda: vāg aṣṭamī brahmaṇā saṃvidānā, but that in AV., X, 2, 6, where the seven khāni are given as eyes, nostrils, ears and mouth (see Whitney, Translation, p. 568; Hoernle, J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 12). In ver. 7 the tongue is specially mentioned. The seven, however, seem already to have included Vāc, to judge from the explanation in that Upaniṣad, II, 2, 4, where, according to Deussen's translation, it is intended to stand for the tongue, as indeed seems clear from its being connected with Atri and atti, though Böhtlingk, in his translation, p. 26, takes it otherwise. Sāyaṇa here refers to the other prāṇas as jihvātvagādibhiḥ. Vāc apparently then is little more than a duplicate. Cf. I, 3, 7, n. 6. For the seven prāṇas, cf. also Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, IX, 5, 2, 8.

¹⁶ The sixth verse is placed after the fourth and the fifth comes at the end, V, 3, 1.

heaven, 18 give us glory' (RV., VII, 24, 5d), wherever the speech of the Brahmin 19 is uttered, this is his glory, when he who knows ends with this verse. So let him who knows this end with this verse.

18 Sāyana renders, 'as in heaven, so in the worlds (the maharloka, &c.) above the heaven!'

The same maharloka is dragged in to explain II, 4, 1. 19 Sayana vaguely says vedasambandhi vākyam. But I think there is a clear reference to the speech of the Brahmins. The opposition is probably as yet mainly to non-Aryan tongues, cf. Tändya Mahābrāhmana, XVII, 1, 2, 9. Whatever be the history of Vedic and Sanskrit, it is difficult to believe at this date (800-700 B.C.) in very much development of Prakritic forms so as to render contrast with them natural, though no doubt such forms existed. (Cf. the discussions in J. R. A. S., 1903, pp. 435 sq.) See also I, 3, 1, n. 5; III, 2, 5; Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, III, 2, 1, 23, with Eggeling's note on the Kāṇva reading; Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, pp. 20-24; Lanman's notes on Whitney, Atharvaveda, III, 12, 4; X, 9, 23; XII, 4, 4; XIX, 8, 4; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, xviii. The Atharvan passages point to the possibility that some of the Präkritic forms are due to the later tradition and are no evidence for the time of the Atharva. Similar considerations are familiar in the Homeric question, see especially Monro, Odyssey, XIII-XXIV, Appendix, pp. 455-484. The early date of the Epic if adopted (cf. my notes, J. R. A. S., 1906, pp. 1 sq., 1907, pp. 681-683) would bear out the view that Prakrit was not so early as has been claimed (cf. Franke, Pali und Sanskrit (1902), pp. 49 sq.) the ruling speech of the people. No doubt the Mantra literature represents a poetic diction (cf. Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 38 sq.), but it has not vet been made even plausible that contemporaneous with it were really Präkritic dialects, though no doubt in certain cases the tendencies which produced Prakrit were already in full force. The subsequent history is doubtless that of the more and more marked separation of the literary and the vulgar speech (cf. Delbrück's neat summary of the history, Altindisches Verbum, pp. 3 sq.), and the place of the Epic must (it seems to me) be found either before the decay of speech had rendered the Sanskrit unintelligible to the warrior classes of the populace-and the Epic appears in origin to have been precisely like the Homeric Epic (see Lang, Homer and His Age, 1906) poetry composed by poets at the courts of princes who sang to the retainers and friends of their patron-not of course an epic of the lower classes or the mere cultivator, though he would understand it in part-or after the general revival of Sanskrit in the second and third centuries A.D. The latter view seems to raise more serious difficulties in our conception of the history of language and literature than it can pretend to solve. I still think the earliest epic (as distinguished from mere åkhyānas or itihāsas) must date from the eighth to sixth centuries B.C. and be contemporaneous with the Brahmanas and Aranyakas, though of course in the case of both Mahābhārata and Rāmāyaņa extensive additions have been made by priestly hands in the two or three centuries before the Christian era. Only thus can a real place be found for Pāṇini's bhāṣā, or for the custom of the Drama which must represent a real state of affairs when Sanskrit could be used by kings and nobles as intelligible to their inferiors. For what Ksatriyas spoke in the eighth to sixth centuries B.C. we have no evidence save the Brāhmaņas, where they speak Sanskrit, and the Epic, so far as we can regard it as contemporaneous. In view of the fact that Patañjali knew the Drama (Ind. Stud., XIII, 486 sq.), it seems only reasonable to assign to his period the separate use of Sanskrit and Präkrit for the different characters, and either then or earlier the state of affairs must have been real. Nor is it possible to accept the theory of Lévi, Barth, and Grierson (Ind. Ant., XXIII, 110) that an originally Präkrit drama was turned into Sanskrit. This theory leaves no plausible explanation open of the use of Prakrit for some characters, since ex hypothesi both men and women equally used Präkrit in conversation, and, while it is quite intelligible that after the drama was an

3. 'We choose that of Savitr' (RV., V, 82, 1-3) and 'O god, Savitr, this day' (RV., V, 82, 4-6), are the strophe and antistrophe (of the Vaisvadeva hymn ') and are perfect in form as belonging to the one day ceremonial. 2 Much indeed is done on this day that is forbidden and (the Vaiśvadeva) a is the atonement. Now atonement is rest, and so at the end (of the sacrifice) the sacrificers rest on the atonement of the one day (the Vaiśvadeva) as their rest. He rests who knows this, and they also rest for whom the Hotr priest who knows this recites this Vaisvadeva. Then comes the Savitr hymn, 'Of Savitr, the god, this great and desirable thing' (RV., IV, 53). Great' is the end. This day is the end. So the verse fits this day. Then comes the Dyava-Prthivi hymn, 'Which is the elder, which the younger' (RV., I, 185), in which (the verses) end alike. 5 This day is one on which (the sacrificers) end alike. So the hymn fits the day. Then comes the Rbhu hymn, 'Born not for steeds nor reins, worthy of praise' (RV., IV, 36). With regard to the words, 'The chariot of three wheels,' the hymn is possessed of three (trivat), and what is possessed of three is the end. This day is the end. So the hymn fits the day. The hymn, 'Of this benignant, greyhaired, priest' (RV., I, 164), addressed to established fact it could remain popular long after it had ceased to be intelligible, the popularity of a literary form ex initio unread is very strange. People in England would not go to Italian opera (which by the by is certainly understood by fifty per cent. of the spectators), but for the fact that there was once and still is a popular drama in England.

Of course it cannot be contended—nor is it so claimed—that Sanskrit was ever the vernacular of the lower classes. What we have to conceive is rather a parallel series of languages diverging from vernaculars older than the Vedic of the earliest hymns, each current among certain portions of the people, but in their earlier stages intelligible to all. The Greek and English dialects give a fair parallel, in both cases ending in a common form of educated and literary speech. Cf. Jacobi, Z.D.M.G., XLVIII, 407 sq.

The prakṛti is here the Viśvajit, and the mūlaprakṛti the Agniṣtoma, as usual.
Cf. I, 2, 1. Sāyana selects the two tristichs as the immediate point of reference.

Because greatness is the ne plus ultra of all things (Sāyaņa).

b udarka is equal to anta in the one case and to uttarakāla eva bhāvi phalam in the other, according to Sāyana. The sacrificers obtain brahman, he adds, but this is hardly meant. Most of the verses end alike in this and the following cases. Cf. for the word, Aitareya Brāhmana, V, I, 3; 12.

6 This is not obvious. Sāyaṇa refers it to the case where two wheels are inadequate and a third is found necessary. This wheel, as before the dhuh, is the end, I, 5, 2. Zimmer (Altindisches Leben, pp. viii, ix) points out that tricakra in the Samhitäs is merely an epithet of the cars of the Asvins where its sense is mythological and he therefore denies the existence of three-wheeled cars in the Vedic period, but cf. Weber, Berl. Sitz., 1898, p. 564, n. 1.

the All-gods, is multiform. 7 This day is multiform. So the hymn fits the day. (Of what he recites) the end is, 'Forming the waters, the buffalo hath lowed' (RV., I, 164, 41). The hymn, 'May powers auspicious come to us on every side' (RV., I, 89), addressed to the All-gods, is one containing an insertion. and is perfect in form as belonging to the one day ceremonial. Much indeed is done on this day that is forbidden and (the hymn with the insertion ") is the atonement. Now atonement is rest, and so at the end (of the sacrifice) the sacrificers rest on the atonement of the one day (insertion) as their rest. He rests who knows this, and they also rest for whom the Hotr priest who knows this recites the hymn with the insertion. The verses, 'To Vaiśvānara, who strengthens law, our praise' (RV., III, 2, 1 sq.), are the strophe of the Agnimaruta Sastra. Praise is the end. This day is the end. So the hymn fits the day. The hymn, 'The Maruts, rushing onward, with gleaming lances' (RV., V. 55). addressed to the Maruts, is one in which (the verses) end alike. This day is one in which (the sacrificers) end alike. So the hymn fits this day. He recites, before the next hymn, the verse, 'To Jatavedas let us pour the Soma' (RV., I, 99, 1), addressed to Jātavedas. The Jātavedas verse is welfare and wins welfare. So he makes this into welfare. The hymn, 'To Jātavedas, who deserves our praise' (RV., I, 94), 10 addressed to Jātavedas, is one in which (the verses) end alike. This day is one in which (the sacrificers) end alike. So the hymn fits this day. 11

* That is, only forty-one verses are to be taken. Cf. V, 3, 2.

¹⁰ On RV., I, 94, see Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 108 sq.

In some MSS. (see Crit. Note) a summary of the chapters of each Āraṇyaka is given at the end. For similar summaries, cf. those of the Taittirīya Upaniṣad, Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, xxviii, xxix; that in VIII, 3 of the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, and Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, IV, 2.

⁹ The insertion is after the ninth verse, viive devāḥ somasya matsan (Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, p. 137), &c.

At the end Sāyana observes that this ends the karmakānda of the Āranyaka. The next two books are the jñānakānda or the Upaniṣad. This regular opposition really of course means very little. Both parts deal with jñāna and not with the performance of the rite, but the first Āranyaka does of course treat the rite in some detail, explaining its mystic significance, while the second Āranyaka diverges to speculations less closely associated with the actual Mantras of the ceremonial. A more real opposition of karma and jñāna would be to oppose books V and I-III. For the relation of karma and jñāna in Śańkara's view, see his commentary on Taittirīya Upaniṣad, I, 12.

ARANYAKA II

This is the path; this is the sacrifice; this is brahman; this is truth. Therefore let no man diverge 2 from it; let no man transgress it. For they did not transgress it; of old, those that did transgress it were overcome. A Rsi 3

1 Sāyaṇa, following, as throughout this part of his commentary, Śańkara (cf. Śańkara on Taittirīya Upanisad, I, 12, translated by S. Sītārāma, Upanishads, V, 112-122), discusses the relation of the karmakanda and the Upanisad. His conclusion is that it is that of sadhana and sādhya, the sacrifices serving to purify the mind through the destruction of evil and the production of a desire for knowledge. He quotes and rejects the views: (1) that knowledge is unnecessary, it being sufficient to give up all works, good or evil, and to perform the various regular and occasional sacrifices, and to exhaust what one has begun by enjoying it, so that at death freedom is attained. He points out that it is not possible to abandon good and evil, such acts being endless, and that the sacrifices performed must bear fruits and the actions of previous births must produce many other births, (2) Others held that a union of knowledge and sacrifice is the cause of freedom. But knowledge is directly contradictory to sacrifice, since the latter involves the conception of the self as active, whereas the former recognizes that the self is nirvikāra. (3) Others hold that sacrifice is the ladder which beginning with the simplest and ending with the most complicated sacrificial rites leads to knowledge as the cause of freedom. Sayana points out life is too short for this. (4) Others think the karmakānda is used in a subsidiary manner, just as in catching cranes one throws curd on their heads and it melting blinds them, so one should sacrifice. The reply is that this is surplusage: one should catch one's crane straight off. The story is reminiscent of putting salt on the tail of a bird. (5) The use of sacrifice is to exhaust desire through the enjoyment of the desires produced by such acts, but clearly, it is replied, desire is not so quenched. Sāyaṇa also explains at length the viṣaya, prayojana, adhikārin, prāmāṇya, and prameya of the system which he attributes to the Upanisad. Cf. Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, pp. 57 sq.; E. T., pp. 61 sq. 'This' means both what is just past and what is to come, and so Sayana refers the etat karma to Aranyaka I, and etad brahma to Aranyaka II and III. The latter alone is true.

² Sāyaṇa thus discriminates: the divergence is due to mere laziness, the transgression to interest in other matters, ploughing or industry, or such forms of devotion as relic worship, &c. For pra+√mad, cf. Taittiriya Upaniṣad, II, 5; I, 11, 2; Kāṭhaka Upaniṣad, II, 6, which support my emendation pramattam in Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, XII, 29.

The verse is, of course, absurdly construed. It is impossible on any theory to make much sense of it. As taken in the translation, the idea is that three peoples were ruined, the others settled round Agni, in the sense that with Agni as their helper one people has been prosperous, the others not. Compare the view of the Satapatha Brähmana, I, 4, 1, 10-18, that no country is civilized until Agni burns over it; Eggeling, S. B. E., XII, xli sq.; Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, pp. 214, 215. The last two verses of the stanza of course are hopeless, save as indicating vaguely the connexion between Agni, the Sun, and Väyu. The Atharvaveda, X, 8, 3, has a different version; see Whitney, Translation, p. 596.

says (RV., VIII, 101, 14), 'Three peoples transgressed. Others settled round the sun. The great one stands in the middle of the worlds. The blowing one enters the dawns.' In the verse, 'Three peoples transgressed,' the three peoples which transgressed are the Vayases, the Vangāvagadhas, and the Cerapādas. In the 4 Sāyana and Ānandatīrtha agree in taking this as referring to the fates which in another life befell the three peoples who transgressed. The peoples are Brahmanas, Ksatriyas, Vaisyas, and Sudras, and only one set was saved. The others suffer a narakajanma (cf. for this idea Hopkins, J. R. A. S., 1906, pp. 581 sq.), as birds, &c. Only they differ as to the meaning of the words vayāmsi vangāvagadhāš cerapādāh. Sāyaņa renders them as birds, trees (vanagatā vrkṣāḥ), plants (avanti manusyādīn and grdhyante 'bhikānksyante), and snakes (urapādāh sarpāh). Ānandatīrtha prefers Pišācas, Rāksases (vanga is from van jihānam and gamayanti, and avagadha from grdhu abhikanksāyām), and Asuras. We are justified therefore in holding that there was no trustworthy tradition, and it is therefore possible to consider whether Max Müller's suggestion that the words are perhaps old ethnic names is correct. In its favour it may be noted that Sayana and Anandatīrtha compel us to assume that the Aranyaka accepts the fullest form of the doctrine of transmigration as a punishment (e.g. Kauşītaki Upanişad, I), which is a comparatively late view, and which I do not think is found in this Upanişad. If they are ethnic names, then Vayāmsi gives us a people like the Matsyas, Ajas, &c., in whose names we may, if we like, see totemism . The Vangavagadhah are a composite tribe or group of tribes like the Kuru-Pañcālas, whose name reminds us of the later Vanga (known to Mahābhāṣya (Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 386) and to Mahābhārata, Dharmasūtras, &c. in conjunction with Anga), as part of what is now Bengal. The Cerapadah are a third tribe, whose name points to the later Ceras of Southern India. It is of course possible (cf. Rhys Davids, Buddhist India, p. 32) to argue that these verses show a later date and a wider geographical knowledge than is compatible with the early pre-Buddhistic date here attributed to the Aranyaka. But in this respect it may be observed that Rhys Davids (cf. Bühler, S. B. E., II, xxxv sq.; Ind. Ant., XXIII, 246-248; Weber, ibid., XXX, 273; Z.D. M.G., XLIX, 479) presses unduly the argument from the Buddhist texts. There is in addition to the grave doubts as to the age of the Buddhist texts the possibility that these texts show only the regions where Buddhism had penetrated and that there were Brahminical countries beyond these limits (cf. Bühler, Ind. Ant., XXIII, 245 sq.; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 254 sq.; Mantrapatha, I, p. xv). It may be questioned whether Buddhism early gained a direct hold on much of Southern India; at least there is no evidence that it ever did. Besides the question arises whether the Cerapadas must have been settled in the South at this date. It should be noted that the text says they were destroyed, and this may refer to a disaster to the old tribe, a remnant of which wandered south and later appear as the Ceras, who are known in the south to Asoka and to Kätyāyana, Weber, l. c., p. 371; Bhandarkar, History of Deccan, p. 143.

The version of Sayana takes cerapādāh as ca īrapādāh. This seems very unlikely, because a single ca with the second of three connected words is not elsewhere found in this Āranyaka, and is nowhere common. (For examples, cf. RV., I, 77, 2 (Oldenberg, S.B. E., XLVI, 101) and Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 475.) It is, I think, much more likely that three names of defeated tribes should not appear in the precise forms here found elsewhere than that names of plants and beasts should so disappear. At any rate they must all three be plants and verse, 'Others settled round the sun,' these people are settled round Agni here, as the sun. In the verse, 'The great one stands in the middle of the worlds,' that great one in the middle of the worlds means this sun. In the verse, 'The blowing one enters the dawns,' the meaning is the purifying air enters the quarters.

^a Mere animal names prove little as to totemism, which is not demonstrated for any Aryan stock, cf. Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, IV, 116, 256; Macdonell, Ved. Myth., p. 153; Hopkins, P. A. O. S., 1894, p. cliv; Keith, J. R. A. S., 1997, pp. 929 sq.; Bühler, Ind. Stud., III, 48.

2. People 's say, 'Hymn, hymn.' The hymn is indeed the earth. For from it all that exists springs. It praises Agni. Food are its eighty verses, for by food one obtains all. The hymn is the sky. For (birds) fly along the sky, and along the sky men drive. It praises Vāyu. Food are its eighty verses, for by food one obtains all. The hymn is also yonder heaven. For by animals or names of tribes. Monier-Williams' Dict. takes vanga as plants, avagadha and cerapāda as names of peoples, which is quite impossible. Dr. Scheftelowitz in his forthcoming Zur Stammbildung in den indogermanischen Sprachen (which he has been so good as to show me in MS.) considers that vanga is formed from van by the suffix ga (when g=gu). He compares madgu (not for *mazg, but from $\sqrt{mad+gu}$), khadga, phalgu, svarga, varga, phaliga, tunga, śfnga, árbhaga, uiig, vanig, sphigā, ddga (not=IG. ozguo), &c. But even if this is the case the origin of the word throws no light on its being used as a tribal name, nor do I feel sure of the equation vanga=tree. Possibly Vangā-Magadhāḥ may be read, cf. my Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, p. 46, n. 4; Baudhāyana Dharma Sūtra, I, 2, 13 and 14.

The citation of the Revedic verse in full is of course natural when an explanation is being given. So verses are cited and explained in full at II, 1, 6 (RV., I, 164, 31); II, 1, 8 (RV., I, 164, 38); II, 5, 1 (RV., IV, 27, 1); III, 1, 6 (RV., X, 114, 4); III, 2, 3 (RV., I, 115, I). In the last case the verse is cited entire to indicate the sense desired to be understood. So also verses are cited in full in the Śāńkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, 15, 18, 20; VIII,

4, 6; IX, 1; XII, 8, 35.

Säyana justifies this by prācyādidišah tattatkarmasu vihitāh satyo 'nusthānavaikalyam haranti.

The last rule shows the manner in which the Brahmins avoided the open rejection of sacrifice and yet justified their own speculations as a practical substitute for sacrifice.

² That is, not knowing its secret reference. Sāyana follows the Aranyaka in deriving uktham from ut-tisthati. Ānandatīrtha, of course, explains the whole by the doctrine that Visuu is omnipresent and so all things can be identified with him and through him with one another. Cf. Brhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, V, 13, 1 (where utthāpayati is the derivation of uktha); Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, III, 3.

The three sets of eighty tristichs, in gayatri, byhati, and usnih, V, 2, 3; 4; 5.

its gift all that exists springs. It praises the sun. Food are its eighty verses. for by food one obtains all. So much as regards the gods. Now as regards the self. The hymn is man. He is great and is Prajāpati. Let him know that he is the hymn.4 The hymn is his mouth, as in the case of the earth. It praises speech. Food are its eighty verses, for by food one obtains all. The hymn is the nostrils, as in the case of the sky. It praises breath. Food are its eighty verses, for by food one obtains all. The bend of the nose as it were is the place of the brilliant one. The hymn is the forehead. as in the case of the heaven. It praises the eye. Food are its eighty verses, for by food one obtains all. The eighty verses are food both with reference to the gods and with reference to the self, for by food all these beings breathe 7; by food 8 he conquers this world and by food that world. Therefore the eighty verses are food both with reference to the gods and to the self. The food and the feeder are the earth, for all that exists springs from it. Whatever goes forth, (heaven) consumes it all.9 Whatever goes thence, the (earth) consumes it all. So earth is both food and feeder. He 10*becomes feeder and food. He is lord of nothing that he eats not, or that eats him not.

Sāyaṇa points out that this contradicts the Mīmāmsā, see Brahma Sūtra, IV, 1, 3, 4, but solves the contradiction by saying the first view rests on nyāyabalāt, that here on vacanabalāt, kim iva hi vacanam na kuryān nāsti vacanasyātibhāra iti hi lāstrakārāṇām dindimab. Vidyāt here means dhyāyet since both knowledge and meditation are concerned with mind (jñānadhyānayor mānasatvasāmyena).

5 The reference is to the bend just below the brows where the nose springs out. Sāyana cites the Jābāla Upaniṣad, II, kaiaman vāsya sthānam bhavatīti \ bhruvoh prānasya ca yah sandhih (sambandhah R³) sa eṣa dyaurlokasya parasya sandhir bhavatīti \ This refers to brahman; so Āditya, who is bradhna, is here an upādhi of brahman. Ānandatīrtha takes iva as meaning kimcid, while Sāyana says it is equal to eva or has no meaning; cf. I, 1, 2; III, 2, 6.

Viśveśvaratīrtha says: lalāṭafabdena cakṣur gṛḥyate. The word, found in the Atharvaveda, X, 2, 8, properly denotes 'brow' or 'superciliary ridge', see Hoernle, Osteology, pp. 122 sq., 177 sq.

The pluti with the nasal is nktarthaprasiddhyartha, says Sayana. The neut. pred. samānam is noteworthy; see Delbrück, Vergl. Syntax, III, 247, 248.

* By giving food to retainers and by sacrifice respectively.

⁹ Sāyana and Ānandatīrtha take this as referring to the doctrine of transmigration. But this is hardly necessary. The earth consumes what the heaven sends, e.g. rain, not persons who are born again, or as Sāyana says, sacrificers who having enjoyed heaven after death return again to earth. It is not proved that such an idea is known to this Āranyaka. Cf, II, 1, 1, 1, 2, 3, 1, 5; 3, 2, 1, 3; 7, 1, 5; 8, 1, 15; 4, 1, 1, 1; 5, 11, 6, 7, 9. For the use of prerte (for the form, cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 2; Bartholomae, Iran. Grundr., I, 54, 70) as praiti Sāyana has reference to the analogy of pra + √i. The form of the pluti is that laid down in Pāṇini, VIII, 2, 107; cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 208 sq.

³⁶ This is very obscure. There seems little doubt, however, that it is intended as the expression of a vague pantheism. Cf. Emerson's 'I am the doubter and the doubt, And I the hymn the Brahmin sings.' The priest identifies himself with the hymn and also with Prajāpati (see above), and so becomes, as Max Müller says, subject and object in one.

3. Then comes¹ the origin of seed. The seed of Prajāpati are the gods.² The seed of the gods is rain. The seed of rain is herbs. The seed of herbs is food. The seed of food is seed. The seed of seed is creatures. The seed of creatures is the heart.³ The seed of the heart is the mind.⁴ The seed of the mind is speech. The seed of speech is action.⁵ The act done is this Anandatīrtha interprets it that Visnu consumes all worlds, and all beings enjoy him, which is the same idea attached to the name of Visnu. Sayana contrasts the upasaka and the anupāsaka and explains the matter slightly differently in the last sentence as meaning that other men do not enjoy him (yad vā = yasmāc ca kāranāt). He reconciles this with the fact that he is ādyah because that refers to svātmabhūtasarvabhogyajātarūpatvam. This explanation is not probable, but undoubtedly the construction of the last words contains a serious difficulty as yad cannot correspond to adyuh. The fact perhaps is that yad is used for formal correspondence with the previous yad though it is not quite parallel in construction. It must be taken literally as an accusative of point in which-'or in so much as they do not consume him.' For the metaphor cf. Jaiminīya Upanisad Brāhmana, III, 2: anadyamāno yad adantam atti; Taittiriya Upanişad, II, 2: adyate 'tti ca bhūtāni; III, 7, 9, &c.; Satapatha Brāhmana, X, 6, 2; XII, 9, 1; Maitrāyaņī Samhitā, I, 10, 13; Kausītaki Brāhmaņa, XI, 3; A. J. P., XX, 446, and the Purusa Sükta. Another possible explanation, however, is suggested by Jaiminīya Upanisad Brāhmana, I. 5, 3: sā (satyam as devatā) ha tasya neśe yad enam apasedhet, 'She is not able to drive him away,' where yad is a conjunction. So here the exact sense may be, 'He cannot help eating them and their eating him;' tarya being used to introduce the dependent clause. Cf. II, 1, 5, n. 5. No doubt originally yad was a relative, but the pronominal quality is clearly minimal in such cases. The opt. in such a case is one of consequence or characteristic, cf. brahmanam kurvīta yo palyet, III, 2, 3, n. 3. So I would explain Rāmāyana, III, 19, 7: na hi palyāmy aham loke yah kuryān mama vipriyam, which Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 271) explains (see § 191, 4) as merely indefinite. But the sense is slightly different from a mere indefinite. So Brhadāranyaka Upanişad, IV, 3, 23: ná tú tád dvitíyam asti táto 'nyád víbhaktam vát pályet; ibid., 24-30, &c.

samgatih | uttaratrapy etad anusamdheyam | Cf. Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 88 sq.

² Sāyaṇa says that the element of sattva is represented in the gods, of rajas in men, and of tamas in animals, &c., and this explains the high position here given to the gods. This doctrine is of course later, appearing first most clearly in the Svetāśvatara Upaniṣad, see Deussen, Philosophie der Upaniṣhads, pp. 226 sq.; E.T., pp. 250 sq.; Garbe (Sāmkhyatattva-kaumudī, p. 592) has conclusively, I think, dispersed the assumption countenanced by Weber (Ind. Stud., IX, 11), Muir (Texts, V, 309), and Whitney (Translation of Atharvaveda, p. 601) that Atharvaveda, X, 8, 43 refers to the guṇas, see Lanman, ibid., p. 1045.

* Because the fivātman is here, says Sāyaņa. Cf. Deussen, op. cit., p. 259; E. T., p. 287.

* Anandatirtha distinguishes hrdaya and manas as being samkalfatmakam antahkaranam and vikalfatmakam respectively. Sayana's explanation is much more probable that manas denotes the knowing part of the heart, a frequent early use of the word, cf. Deussen, op. cit., pp. 243 sq.; E. T., pp. 270 sq.

man, the abode of brahman. He consists of food, 6 and because he consists of food, he consists of gold. He becomes golden 7 in yonder world, he is seen as golden for all mortals, who knows this.

4. Brahman¹ entered into that man by the tips of his feet. Because brahman entered that man by the tips of his feet, so men call them the tips of the feet (prāpadyata-prapade), but in the case of other animals hoofs and claws. Then he crept higher up, and they became the thighs. Then he said, 'Swallow² widely,' and that became the stomach. Then he said, 'Make it wide for me,' and that became the chest. The Śārkarākṣyas³ meditate on the stomach as brahman, the Āruṇis on the heart. These two are indeed brahman. But he crept upwards still, and arrived at the head. Because he arrived at the head (aśrayata) then it became the head (śiras). So the head is the head. These delights settled in the head, sight, hearing, mind, speech, breath. Delights settle on him who duction of the transmigration theory, see II, 1, 1, 1, 1, 2, 1, 1, 1, 2, 1, 1, 2, 1, 2, 3, 4; II, 2, 8; III, 32, 9; Mahānārāyaṇa Upaniṣad, IV, 7; Oertel, J. A. O. S., XVI, 231.

[†] Ānandatīrtha explains: Nārāyaṇam jānan karmajam rūpam utsṛjya nijānandaikarūpako bhavati. Sāyaṇa says he appears as golden as the sun for the benefit of all creatures. Really it means, he appears (dadrie passive, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 264 sq.) to all creatures, no doubt originally as the sun. The passage is like all this part of the Āraṇyaka, II, 1-3, pantheistic. In Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 1, 4, 9, the Agnicit is promised birth in the other world as hiranmayaḥ, rendered by Sāyaṇa hiranyasamānavarṇaḥ, see Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 295, n. 2.

Sayana explains that this chapter shows prana, the upadhi of Brahman, entering the subtle body. His entry into the gross body is seen on II, 1, 2. He compares Taittiriya Upanisad, II, 6, 1; Maitrayaniya Upanisad, II. For prapada Lanman in Whitney, Translation of Atharvaveda, II, 33, 5, suggests toe as the meaning, but the dual renders that impossible here, and I believe in all the passages cited at p. xcviii the sense front part of the foot as opposed to heel is correct.

² Make a large hole, says Sāyaṇa. Max Müller's 'grasp' is a slip. The form is overlooked in the Dict. and in Whitney's Roots, &c.

³ Śārkarāksyāḥ is rendered sūkṣmadṛṣṭayaḥ by Ānandatīrtha, who, however, calls the Āruṇayaḥ Rṣis. He explains udaram as locative in sense, as does Sāyaṇa, tacitly. The Śārkarākṣyas are a subdivision of the Hāridravīyas according to the Caraṇavyūha and are mentioned in the Mahābhāṣya, IV, 1, 74; 75. Max Müller points out that neither in Chāndogya Upaniṣad, V, 11, 15, 17 nor in Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 6, 1, do these views appear—at least in terms. Āruṇayaḥ appears also in Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, II, 5, 1, wrongly amended by Oertel to Āruṇayaḥ, against the MSS. brahmā may be meant, but the neut. is more likely. Cf. Weber, Ind. Stud., XVIII, 140; v. Schroeder, Ind. Lit., p. 91, n. 1. That the heart (hṛdaya) is brahman was the view of Vidagdha Śākalya, see Yājōavalkya's exposition in Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 1, 7. See also Chāndogya Upaniṣad, III, 12, 4; VIII, 3, 3; Ind. Stud., II, 177.

knows thus why the head is the head. They strove together, saying, I am the hymn, I am the hymn.' They said, 'Come, let us leave this body, then that one of us at whose departure the body falls, will be the hymn.' Speech went forth, yet (the body) remained, speechless, eating and drinking. Sight went forth, yet (the body) remained, sightless, eating and drinking. Hearing went forth, yet (the body) remained, without hearing, eating and drinking. Mind went forth, yet (the body) remained, blinking as it were,5 eating and drinking. Breath went forth, when breath went out, (the body) fell. It was decayed. (Because men) said it had decayed, it became the body. Therefore is the body the body. Who knows this, his enemy, the evil one, who hates him decays, the enemy, the evil one, who hates him is defeated. They strove together, saving, 'I am the hymn, I am the hymn.' They said, 'Come, let us again enter this body; then that one of us, on whose entrance the body rises, will be the hymn.' Speech entered, (the body) lay still. Sight entered, (the body) lay still. Hearing entered, (the body) lay still. Mind entered, (the body) lay still. Breath entered, (the body) arose, and (breath) became the hymn. Therefore breath only is the hymn. Let men know that breath is the hymn. The gods said to breath, 'Thou art the hymn, thou art all this, we are thine, thou art ours.' A Rsi says (RV., VIII, 92, 32), 'Thou art ours, we are thine.'

* There are similar passages in Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, VI, 2; Chāndogya Upaniṣad, V, 1; Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, II, 12-14; III, 2; Praśna Upaniṣad, II, 1. The comparative antiquity of the versions must be open to doubt. But this version certainly seems simpler and more original than those of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka, Chāndogya, or Kauṣītaki Upaniṣads, which seem to embellish the theme with further details. The account in the Praśna Upaniṣad is simple, but as that Upaniṣad is on other grounds late, that may be explained as merely a reference to a well-known theme, and indicates the danger of arguments from comparative simplicity. For hanta with subj., cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 23, 43; Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmana, p. 430.

The masculine, mīlita, is explained by Sāyaṇa as referring to dehaḥ understood. It is probable that the idea in the mind of the writer throughout was purusa as the subject; hence the masculines as long as prāṇa remains in the sarīra. √mīl is Brāhmaṇa style first. Cf. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 4, 11 and 12 (2, 22 and 3 in the Mādhyandina text) where brahma is followed by sa. On the other hand in Bṛhadāraṇyaka, IV, 3, 22, the Kāṇva text, after a series of masculines, produces ananvāgatam punyena, and Śaṅkara explains; rūṇaaratvān napuṃsakaliṅgam. The Mādhyandina version (as in Weber and Böhtlingk) has the masc., but as Max Müller (S. B. E., XV, 169) points out, Dvivedagaṇga had ananvāgatam, as he says: ananvāgatam iti rūṇaviṣayo napuṃsakanirdeiaḥ. There are also difficulties in the genders in Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad, III, 7, see Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 245, n. 4. In Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, 22, kāmarūṇī and kāmacārī, according to one MS., agree with brahma. Such uses are not rare in Latin and Greek, e.g. φίλε τέκνον; Vergl. Syntax, III, 244. For itī 3 m, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 22, 2, against Böhtlingk, Sāchs. Ber., 1890, p. 170.

The gods are those presiding over the parts of the body, see II, 1, 5, n. 3. For Prāṇa as brahma, cf. Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, II, 1; 2; Chāndogya Upaniṣad, IV, 10, 5; Taittiriya Upaniṣad, III, 3, 1; Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 33, 2. It was held by Udanka Śaulbāyana (Brhadārnnyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 1, 2) and is refuted, ibid., V, 13, 1; Oertel, J. A. O. S., XVI, 230.

5. The gods carried him forward.¹ Being carried forward he was stretched out. (Because men say) he has been carried forward, the morning came into being. (Because men say) he has gone to rest, the evening came into being. Day is breathing forth,² night is breathing down. Speech is fire,³ sight yonder sun, mind the moon, hearing the quarters, this is the union⁴ of those sent forth. These deities are such in the body, but they openly appear among the deities; this is the meaning. This indeed said Hiranyadant Vaida who knew this; 'Whatever they give me not,⁵ I own not myself. I know the union of those sent forth in the body which they enter. This it is.' To him who Sāyaṇa explains that this section treats of prāṇa under various forms. Ānandatīrtha as usual equates prāṇa and Viṣṇu. The section is composed of bad etymologies. The first alludes to pra + \ni (pra-anayanta).

² For the meanings of prāṇa and apāna see Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, pp. 249-251; E. T., pp. 276-279. The oldest view is that they mean expiration and inspiration respectively, whence apāna comes to refer to the wind of digestion. Cf. I, 3, 7; 4, 1; II, 3, 3.

This idea originates with the Purusa Sükta, RV., X. 90, 13; 14, see Deussen, Allgemeine Einleitung, p. 157, and later it develops into a regular system of gods who correspond to and guard the several psychic faculties. Cf. Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, p. 241; E. T., p. 267. It is developed most in II, 4, 1; 2, where Agni, &c., become speech, &c., and enter man, while here they are merely considered as the several parts of the body. Cf. also I, 3, 3; Sankhayana Āranyaka, X and XI; Lanman, Hindu Pantheism, p. 18.

The idea seems clearly to be that these four are gathered together in the body, and exist openly as deities, as Sāyaṇa says. But prahitām is very difficult, and the whole seems an explanation of what was even then obscure. Cf. the varying versions of pūrṇam apravarti, amṛtam satyena channam, &c., cited in Deussen, op. cit., p. 20; E. T., p. 20, n. 3.

³ This authority occurs also in Aitareya Brāhmana, III, 6. Is his name a reference to gold stoppings in his teeth? They were known to the XII Tables (B. C. 450?) and to very early Egypt. Yam is read by Rājendralāla and in the Ānandāśrama edition and also by Sāyana. But it seems obvious that it stands for yan written before m carelessly as anusvara, cf. Max Müller, Marut Hymns, p. lx; II, 3, 3, n. 2; III, 1, 4, n. 3; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 62; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 333. To Sayana yam presents no difficulty as he merely supplies padartham abhistam. The word dadyuh is difficult, because the plural is unexpected after ite if that is a third person, when the sense would be 'nobody owns what the deities give not to me'. This is rather awkward but not impossible. The rendering of II, 1, 2 suggested in n. 10 there would give in this passage (though yan would still remain properly a pronoun), 'He owns nothing that they will not give me also,' which by an easy process of development would slide over into the sense, 'He cannot help them giving me (it),' showing the origin of such a developed construction as that in II, 1, 2. This comes to an assertion of the fact that all that the cosmic purusa has (he must be the subject of rie), that has man. It is simpler to neglect the commentators and take ite as first person, thus asserting the intimate union of man and the deities. In this use yad is used with consecutive force; cf. the Mantra use of yad as final with subj. or opt. (Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 321, 341), and the classical use (Speijer, Sanskrit Syntax, § 466). The absence of such a use in the Brahmanas (cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 279 e) is improbable, ile as a third person belongs to a type which occurs in all Brāhmaṇas, and is not a mere imitation of Mantra forms (as held by Aufrecht, Aitarcya Brahmana, p. 429, where see other examples), see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 613. The form prahitam presents great knows this all creatures unconstrained pay homage. That is sallya (truth). For sat is breath, ti⁶ is food, yam is yonder sun. That is threefold. Threefold as it were is the eye, white, dark, and the pupil.⁷ Even though he speaks falsely,⁸ yet speaks he truth who thus knows why truth is sallya.

6. Speech is his rope, names the knots. So by his speech as rope, and by names as knots, all this is bound. For all this is names, and by his speech he names everything. Men bound with ropes carry him who knows this. His hairs are the uṣṇih, his skin the gāyatrī, his flesh the triṣṭubh, his sinews the anuṣṭubh, his bones the jagatī, his marrow the panktī, his breath the bṛhatī. He is covered with the metres. Since he is covered with the metres, therefore they call them metres (coverings). Thus the metres cover him from illhap in difficulty. To take it as Vedic for prahitānām, as Sāyaṇa does, is to introduce a very rare a form (cf. Whitney, l.c., p. 114) into the text: on the other hand the word prahit has no parallel (save conceivably in form (Ind. Stud., III, 225) in prahitoh samyojane in the Ārṣeya Brāhmaṇa, if we may take that as dual form gen. and not as in Monier-Williams' Dict. as a gen. of prahitu) at any rate in sense. Whitney (Roots, &c., p. 205) gives -hit as a form from \sqrt{hi} . I think that prahit should probably be taken as the 'impeller', i. e. the deities cause the organs to work, cf. II, 4, 1, and 2.

⁷ Cf. Jaiminīya Brāhmaņa, I, 254 (kanīnikā); Šatapatha Brāhmaņa, XII, 8, 2, 26; A.J. P., XVII, 400; elsewhere puruṣa is the third member, Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 26, 1; 34,

* This doctrine undoubtedly shows the moral disadvantages of the doctrine of salvation by knowledge, and it is the precursor of the later immunity from moral censure of the jīvanmukta. Cf. Kausītaki Upaniṣad, III, I; Sadānanda, Vedāntasāra, 235: śubhāśubhayor audāsīnyam, and Jacob's note in his Translation; Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, pp. 164-167. In asya the genitive is presumably possessive, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 153; Franke, Bezz. Beitr., XVI, II2; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 69, 92, n.; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 296 b. Compare evam me sutam with iti naḥ frutiḥ (Introd., p. 57); J. A. O. S., XXV, 116, 117. For the position, cf. Z. D. M. G., LXII, 129.

1 Sāyaṇa explains the metaphor from a rope for tying up cattle. Ānandatīrtha explains as usual by identifying all with Viṣṇu. 'His' refers to prāṇa of course.

2 Like oxen who carry men.

* This must be the sense. Sāyaṇa, however, appears to render it 'whatever evil he desires to do, the metres keep him from contact with it'. The connexion of $\sqrt{chad}$ and chandas is very doubtful; see I, I, 3, n. 6; Leumann, Et. Wört., p. 103.

^{*} See also RV., IV, 2, 3 and II: martām; VI, 47, 16: manuṣyām; Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 319; Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 44; Bartholomae, Studien, I, 48.

whatever quarter he desires who knows thus why metres are called metres, A Rsi says (RV., I, 164, 13), 'I saw the guardian,' for he is a guardian, for he guards all this. 'Never tiring,' for he never rests. 'Coming and going on his ways,'5 for he comes and goes on his ways. 'Illuminating the principal and intermediate,' for he illuminates these quarters only, the principal and intermediate, 'He moves up and down in the worlds,' for he moves up and down in the worlds. Then there is the verse 7 (RV., I, 55, 8), 'Covered 8 like caves by the makers.' For all this is covered by breath. This ether is supported by breath as brhafi, and one should know that, even as this ether is covered by breath as brhafi, so all things including ants 9 are covered by breath as brhafi.

7. Now come the powers of this person. By his speech are created earth and fire. On the earth plants grow; fire ripens them. 'Take this, take this,' thus saying do these two, earth and fire, serve their parent, speech. As far as the earth extends, as far as fire extends, so far extends his world, and as long as the world of earth and fire decays not, so long does his world decay not who knows thus the power of speech. By breath1 the sky and the air are created. People follow the sky, and hear along the sky, and the air bears

The veins, says Sāyaṇa. He explains that prāṇa is the guardian by referring to Kauṣītaki Upanisad, III, 2: yāvad(hy)asmin charīre prāno vasati tāvad āyur. This passage of the Rgveda later served as the authority for the activity of prana even in susupli, Prasna Upanisad, IV, 3; Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, p. 268; E.T., p. 297. Jaiminiya Upanisad Brāhmana, III, 37, takes the prānāh and the sun's rays as meant.

6 The four quarters and the four intermediate quarters, SE., SW., NE., and NW. For the number of the quarters, at first four, later, ten, cf. Hopkins, J. A. O. S., XVI, 283. Prāna, Sāyana explains, is internally what Ādītya is externally, see Prasna Upanisad, I, 5; III, 8: ādityo ha vai bāhyaḥ prāṇa udayati. In the original and in Jaiminīya Upaniṣad, l. c., vaste means 'wears'.

⁷ Not RV., I, 55, 81 (Max Müller following Rājendralāla), nor I, 56, 8 (Ānandātrama series). * Anandatīrtha and Sāyana both cite and explain, quite differently, the whole verse, but they agree in taking the caves as holes for concealing wealth. Cf. I, 3, 1, n. 4.

Anandatirtha renders, 'beginning with ants.'

1 In the nose, i.e. the power of smell (Sāyaṇa). The use of the masc. systau with a masc. and a neut, and of systah below do not entirely agree with the rules of concord later accepted. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, p. 88) gives only one doubtful example (RV., I, 8, 10) and Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 101) thinks that in classical Sanskrit with names of things the neuter is a more common predicate if the genders differ and one is neuter. This is laid down in a Vārttika (not in the Kāśikā Vṛtti, it appears) on Pāṇini, I, 2, 72, which runs: tyadādītah sese pumnapumsakato lingavacanāni | sā ca Devadattas ca tau | tac ca Devadattas ca Yajhadattā ca tāni | tac ca Devadattas ca te | So the neuter appears in Mahābhārata, III. 58, 10; VI, 6, 26; Rāmāyaṇa, VI, 62, 37. If only persons are concerned the masc. is regular, e. g. Mahābhārata, XVII, 1, 29: Pāndavāš ca mahātmāno Draupadī ca yaļasvinī 1 krtopavāsāh Kauravya prayayuh pranmukhas tatah II Raghuvamsa, III, 23: tatha nrpah sa ca sutena Māgadhī nanandatus tadsadriena tatsamau, &c. That this is old is indicated by the rule in Homeric Greek, thus formulated by Monro (Homeric Grammara, p. 157), 'Where an adjective pure scent.² Thus do sky and air serve their parent, breath. As far as the sky extends, as far as air extends, so far extends his world, and as long as the world of sky and air decays not, so long does his world decay not who knows thus the power of breath. By his eye are created the heaven and the sun. Heaven gives him rain and proper food, the sun causes his light to shine. Thus do heaven and sun serve their parent, the eye. As far as the heaven extends, as far as the sun extends, so far extends his world, and as long as the world of heaven and sun decays not, so long does his world decay not who knows thus the power of the eye. By his ear were created the quarters and the moon. From the quarters they come unto him, from the quarters he hears, the moon produces for him the bright and the dark halves for good deeds.³ Thus the quarters and the moon 4 serve their parent, the ear. As refers to more than one noun, it follows the most prominent: or (if this is at all doubtful) the masc. is used of persons, the neut. of things: e.g., II. ii, 136:—

αί δέ που ημέτεραι τ' άλοχοι και νήπια τέκνα η τ' ενι μεγάροις ποτιδέγμεναι, because the wives are chiefly thought of, but Od. xiii, 434:-

άμφὶ δέ μιν βάκος ἄλλο κακὸν βάλεν ήδὲ χιτῶνα, βωγαλέα βυπόωντα.

The neut. plur. is especially used of sheep and cattle. II. xi, 244:—

πρῶθ' ἐκατὸν βοῦς δῶκεν, ἔπειτα δὲ χίλι' ὑπέστη,

αΙγας ὁμοῦ καὶ ὅῖς.'

The first example shows that a fem. can prevail over a neut. in the case of persons, the second that in regard to things the neut. prevails over the masc., the third that in regard to things the neut may be used of masc and fem animals. Here antarikṣam is a deity and so naturally the masc prevails, cf. Manu, VIII, 86, where hrdayam is personified. In Latin the rule is (Allen and Greenough, Latin Grammar, p. 173), 'generally, a predicative adjective will be masculine, if nouns of different genders mean living beings; neuter, if things without life:' as Livy ii, 40 uxor deinde ac liberi amplexi, but Livy v, 4 labor voluptasque societate quadam inter se naturali sunt iuncta. Even if masc nouns and fem. occur, the neut can be used if one of the subjects is a thing, e.g., Livy xliv, 24 natura inimica sunt libera civitas et rex, or even if two fem. nouns represent things, e.g. Cicero, de Fin. iii, 11 stultitia et temeritas et iniustitia sunt fugienda. The basis of discrimination, therefore, is rather between living creatures, especially persons, and things (which include sometimes the animals).

The use of the dual and plural of the verb is regular, cf. Delbrück, pp. 83 sq.; Speijer, l.c., though as in Greek and Latin and Anglo-Saxon the nearest subject may determine the verb, as is usual in the Bṛhaddevatā. Cf. ibid., VII, 74, for a set of mixed genders with a neut. plur.; VIII, 47, for a masc. plur. with a masc. sing., a fem. sing., and a masc. dual, which ollow. Cf. Delbrück, Vergl. Syntax, III, 244-247, which this supplements.

far as the quarters extend, as far as the moon extends, so far extends his world, and as long as the world of the quarters and the moon decays not, so long does his world decay not who knows thus the power of the ear. By his mind were created the waters and Varuṇa. The waters yield to him faith for good deeds and Varuṇa preserves his offspring by his law. Thus the waters and Varuṇa serve their parent, mind. As far as the waters extend, as far as Varuṇa extends, so far extends his world, and as long as the world of the waters and Varuṇa decays not, so long does his world decay not who knows thus the power of mind.

8. Was it water 1? Was it water? This world was water. This was the root, that the shoot. This the father, those the sons. Whatever there is of the son's, that is the father's; whatever of the father's, that is the son's. So it is said. Mahidāsa Aitareya 2 who knew this said, 'I know myself as reaching to the gods, and the gods as reaching to me.' 3 For hence are they gifted, hence are they supported. This is the hiding-place, 4 eye, ear, mind, speech, and breath. They call it the hiding-place of brahman. He who knows this throws down the enemy, the evil one, who hates him. The enemy, the evil one, who hates him is defeated. He is the life, the breath, being, and not-being. The gods adored him as being, and so became great. So in sleep a man breathes bhūr bhūḥ. The demons adored him as not-being, and so were overthrown. He becomes great by himself who knows this. The enemy, the evil one, who purposes of worship, a yathāvacanam as opposed to a yathāvastu creation. Such inconsistencies are not very important, but this small point adds to the evidence against II, 1-3, and II, 4-6, being by one hand. For Varuna, cf. Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, pp. 152 sq.

² This mention is enough to prove that Mahidāsa did not write the Āraṇyaka. But it is quite probable that he was the redactor of the Brāhmaṇa, in its form of forty chapters. The saying here may no doubt be regarded as one of his Upaniṣads in the sense of secret teachings. Cf. Introd., p. 16. For the form, cf. Leumann, Gurupājākaumudī, p. 42.

Rajendralala's commentary is wrongly printed. Veda is an error for veda, and omad is resolved wrongly. The end of the sentence explains the dependence of deities on men for devotion.

⁶ It is called giri, because prāṇa is swallowed up and hidden by the other senses. Cf. the doctrine that the senses enter in sleep into the prāṇa. The prāṇa forms thus the basis of the senses. Probably the idea of the Āraṇyaka is something like this, and the translation 'mountain' misleading. For itaḥ, cf. Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, p. 38, n. 1.

Because the presence of prana secures the jivatman (Sayana).

hates him, is overcome. He is death and immortality. A Rsi says (RV., I, 164, 38), 'Down and up he goes, grasped by food,' for this up-breathing restrained by down-breathing does not go forth. 'The immortal dwells with the mortal,' for through him all this dwells together. For these bodies are mortal, the deity immortal. 'These two even go in different directions, they increase the one, but not the other,' for they increase the bodies, but the deity is immortal. He who knows this becomes immortal in yonder world and is seen as immortal by all beings."

ADHYĀYA 2.

He who shines approached this world in the shape of man. For he is the breath. So he approached it. For he who shines is the breath. For a hundred years he approached it. Therefore a hundred are the years of the life of man.

7 Ānandatīrtha renders svadhayā by Viṣnu. Sāyana takes it more properly as referring to digestion. The end of the verse means, according to Sayana, that men nourish the body by food and drink, but not the prana. Anandatīrtha renders, 'at death they see the bodies deserted by Vayu.' The epithet sasvanta can only be justified by the fact that one of the two is immortal, and on the principle chatrino gachanti. For more or less analogous cases, cf. usása, áhani (Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 102), and ksapáh, RV., I, 70, 7, as interpreted by Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 70. On the same chatrinnyāya Govinda on Sāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 8, 10, explains why the Prauga Sastra in the Mahavrata according to that school is called Vämadeva's though less than a half of it is by him (Friedländer, p. 33, n. 1); Weber (Ind. Stud., XIII, 113) quotes dvādašdu māsau from Taittirīya Samhitā, VII, 5, 2, 1; Kāthaka Samhitā, XXXIII, 1; Pancavimsa Brāhmana, IV, 1, 2; stómau dvādašau, Kāthaka, XXXIII, 3, and similar cases from Śatapatha Brāhmaņa, IV, 5, 7, 2; XI, 6, 3, 5; XIV, 6, 9, 3; XII, 3, 2, 2; Pañcavimsa Brāhmana, VI, 2, 5 (cf. Ind. Stud., IX, 18). Visūcīnā is explained as having diverse functions, the breath moving the bodily senses, the body supporting the pranendriyas. Viyanta is referred to the fact that on death the body remains on the ground, while prāna seeks another world. Cf. Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pp. 574 sq.; Pischel, Vedische Studien, II, 221; Böhtlingk, Sächs. Ber., 1893, p. 92; Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth., I, 336, n. 1; II, 8.

"Sāyaṇa explains 'immortal' as united with Hiranyagarbha; Ānandatīrtha says 'emancipated'. But that this Āraṇyaka knows emancipation, instead of immortality, as the highest end is not even probable. Dadṛše (II, I, 5) and mene (III, I, 1) are both clearly present passives in sense. The original sense of the perfect was not distinguished from the present in point of time but denotes a state, cf. Giles, Comp. Phil., § 549; Monro, Homeric Grammar², pp. 31, 32; Delbrück, Synt. Forsch., II, 192 sq.; Vergl. Syntax, II, 211 sq.; Altindische Syntax, p. 297; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 823. The oldest sense is quite frequent in the Rgveda. In cases like bībhāya (I, 3, 4) and dādhāra (I, 5, 2) the naturally intensive form of the perfect is further strengthened.

This Khaṇḍa shows that the names of the seers of the Rgveda can be deduced from prāṇa's actions. Ānandatīrtha explains the section as proving that Viṣṇu is superior to all the gods. He takes abhyārcat as 'he entered into', brahman and the other gods. He justifies his theory by quoting the Vāc Sūkta, RV., X, 125, as proving that Vāc, i.e. Ramā, is superior to the gods, and she of course is inferior to Viṣṇu.

The sun and prana are as usual identified, the one being the adhidaivatam, the other the adhyatman representation. The former attracts the vision, the latter impels the body.

Because he approached him for one hundred years, therefore they are the Satarcins. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) the Satarcins. He placed himself in the middle of all that is. Because he placed himself in the middle of all that is, therefore they are the Mādhyamas. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) the Mādhyamas. As up-breathing he is the swallower, as down-breathing delight. Because as up-breathing he is the swallower, as down-breathing delight. Because as up-breathing he is the swallower, as down-breathing delight, therefore he is Gṛtsamada. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) Gṛtsamada. All whatsoever was his friend. Because all whatsoever was his friend, therefore he is Viśvāmitra. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) Viśvāmitra. The gods spake to him, 'Let him be dear to all of us.' Because the gods spake to him, 'Let him be dear to all of us,' therefore he is Vāmadeva. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) Vāmadeva. He protected all this from evil. Because he protected all this from evil, therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) the Atris.

2. He also is a bearer of offspring. Offspring is $v\bar{a}ja$, and he supports offspring. Because he supports offspring, therefore he is Bharadvāja. Therefore they call him who is $(pr\bar{a}na)$ Bharadvāja. The gods spake to him, 'Let him be the richest of us all.' Because the gods spake to him, 'Let him be the richest of us all,' therefore he is Vasistha. Therefore they call him who is $(pr\bar{a}na)$ Vasistha. He went forth o all this whatsoever. Because he went forth to all this whatsoever, therefore they are the Pragāthas. Therefore they call him who is $(pr\bar{a}na)$ the Pragāthas. He purified all this whatsoever. Because he purified all this whatsoever, then they are the Pāvamānīs. Therefore they call him who is $(pr\bar{a}na)$ the Pāvamānīs. He said, 'Let me be everything, small and great.' They became the Kṣudrasūktas and Mahāsūktas. Therefore Really, Max Müller points out, the name refers to their composing about 100 verses each. They are the seers of RV., I. The Mādhyamas are the seers of Books II-IX, Gṛtsamada of II, Viśvāmitra of III, Vāmadeva of IV, the Atris of V. For the rest see Khaṇḍa 2. The Mādhyamas appear in Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XII, 3; Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 4, 2; Šāṅkhāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, IV, 10, 3; Bṛhaddevatā, III, 116 (Madhyamāḥ); Sarvānukramaṇī, Introd., II, 10, &c. For the plur., Atrayaḥ, cf. Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XLII, 226, n. 1.

Vājaḥ is taken as either the body from the √vaj in the sense of going, or as food by Sāyaṇa.
 Sāyaṇa translates 'causing to dwell by his entry into us', and Ānandatīrtha has 'best of dwellers'. The ordinary sense seems preferable. Cf. II, 2, 4, n. 5.

² This seems to be the sense, and it is so taken by Sāyaṇa. Ānandatīrtha takes it either as 'he obtained' or 'he sang'. Sāyaṇa says the verses are called Pragāthās and also the poets. Probably the poets, of Book VIII, are meant. Bharadvāja and Vasiṣṭha correspond to Books VI and VII respectively. The same lists appear in Āsvalāyana Gṛḥya Sūtra, III, 4, 2, and Sāṅkhāyana Gṛḥya Sūtra, IV, 10, 3.

⁴ Presumably the poets of Book IX are so described. Cf. Ārṣeya Brāhmaṇa (ed. Burnell), p. 42; Vedische Studien, III, 99. In Āśvalāyana pavamānās and in Śāṅkhāyana pāvamānās occur.
⁵ The poets of Book X are referred to. Perhaps also the hymns were called kṣudrasūktāk as Max Müller suggests, but this is not certain. The last ksudrasūktāḥ no doubt implies they are the Kṣudrasūktas. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) the Kṣudrasūktas. (He said), 'Ye have said what is well said.' These became a hymn. Therefore there is a hymn. Therefore men call him who is (prāṇa) hymn. He is a verse, for he went to all beings. Because he went to all these beings, therefore he is a verse. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) a verse. He is also a half-verse, for he went to all these places. Because he went to all these places, therefore he is a half-verse, Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) a half-verse. He is a quarter-verse, for he has entered all these beings. Because he has entered all these beings, he is a quarter-verse. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) a quarter-verse. He is a syllable, for he pours forth gifts to all these beings and because none can pour forth paints beyond him. Because he pours forth gifts for all these beings, and because none can pour forth gifts beyond him, therefore he is a syllable. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) a syllable. Therefore one should know that all these verses, all these Vedas, all sounds are one word, prāṇa, and that prāṇa is all the verses.'

mahāsūktāb. See besides Āśvalāyana and Śāńkhāyana, Brhaddevatā, III, 116; Sarvānukramaņī, Introd., II, 10, with Macdonell's note.

6 The poet is also called Sükta, says Sāyaṇa, but there is no authority for this.

7 The construction is obscure, but the rendering 'he went' seems best. The dat is natural, cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 44; Whitney, P. A. O. S., April, 1892, p. clxiv, Sanskrit Grammar, § 286 b. Anandatīrtha renders 'he went'. Sāyana's version is svapravešena pūjitam akarot, taking bhūtebhyah as sarvabhūtartham deham, and Max Müller renders, 'he did honour to.' He also adds that the poet is called Reas well as the Mantra. Cf. Geldner, Vedische Studien, III, 95.

* Ardha is taken as 'place' (cf. ordo) by both Anandatīrtha and Sāyaṇa, and is probably so intended, as Max Müller takes it.

10 'Without him' is Max Müller's rendering. That of the text is supported by Anandatīrtha, the other version by Sayana. Cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 441.

13 Oldenberg (Z. D. M. G., XLII, 199-247) has shown conclusively that few if any of the

- 3. Indra¹ sat down beside Viśvāmitra who was about to recite the hymns of this day. He saying, 'This is food,' recited the thousand bṛhatīs. Thus he went to Indra's dear home. Indra said to him, 'Seer, thou hast come to my dear home. Do thou, seer, repeat a second² hymn.' He saying, 'This is food,' recited the thousand bṛhatī verses. Thus he went to Indra's dear home. Indra said to him, 'Seer, thou hast come to my dear home. Do thou, seer, repeat a third hymn.' He saying, 'This is food,' recited the thousand bṛhatī verses. Thus he went to Indra's dear home. Indra said to him, 'Seer, thou hast come to my dear home. I give thee a boon.' He said, 'Let me know thee.' Indra said, 'I am breath, thou, seer, art breath, all creatures are breath, he that shines is breath. In this form I pervade all the quarters. This my food is my friend, my support.' This is the food of Viśvāmitra.' I am he that shines.' Thus said he.'
 - 4. This is produced as a thousand brhafis.1 The consonants 2 are the body, hymns of the Rgveda go back to their nominal composers when these composers are the heads of the great families, but that they were written by members of the family. The only possible exceptions are Vasistha and Viśvāmitra under Sudās (p. 236). It is possible that here (p. 226, n. 1) a recollection of the facts is seen in that book V is ascribed to the Atris, while the others to individuals, Gṛtsamada, Viśvāmitra, &c., but more probably the plural is used because it gives the proper play of words with atrāyata. This is not, however, a sign of late date, for it seems likely that in RV., X, 181, the author held the same view as he attributes to Vasiṣṭha the rathantara (VII, 32, 22; 23) and to Bharadvāja the bṛhat (VI, 46, 1; 2), later attributed to Śamyu Bārhaspatya (Oldenberg, pp. 225, 227, n. 1).

Anandatīrtha explains Vaišvāmitram as Ramayābhimanyamānabrhatīsahasrākhyam annam Višvāmitreņa sampāditatvād Vaišvāmitram ity ucyate. Sāyaņa has: Višvāmitreņa šamsanakāle sampāditatvād idam Vaišvāmitram.

^a In Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 6, there occurs a dialogue between Indra and Viśvāmitra. It seems to show clear signs of a later origin, though it verbally reproduces some of this dialogue. It is much more philosophical. The Jaiminīya version, l. c., is very much altered, but all have clearly a common source, and use the narrative perfect (cf. Introd., p. 67). The threefold boon may be compared with the story of Naciketas (Kāṭhaka Upaniṣad).

This Khanda gives the correspondence of the various aksaras of the 1000 brhatī hymn, which is got by the addition of the verses of the whole Niskevalya Sastra, to parts of the body of prāna (Sāyana). Anandatīrtha explains it as an identification of the various deities who preside over the sounds, &c. The number 36,000 is merely theoretical; Eggeling (S. B. E., XLIII, 111) counted about 37,200, and though the number could be reduced in various ways, it is not worth while.

³ What are called by Pāṇini hal (Sāyaṇa). The Kaumāra school adopt the term vyañjana

the vowels³ the soul, the sibilants the breath. Knowing this he became Vasistha.⁵ Thence took he the name. Indra proclaimed this to Viśvāmitra, Indra proclaimed this to Bharadvāja, so Indra is in sacrifices invoked by him as a friend.⁶ This is produced as a thousand bṛhafīs. Of this produced as a thousand bṛhafīs there are thirty-six thousand syllables. So many thousands are the days of a hundred years. They make up the nights by the consonants, the days by the vowels.⁷ This is produced as a thousand bṛhafīs. After this being produced as a thousand bṛhafīs he who knows this becomes full of knowledge,⁸ of the gods, of brahman, of the immortal, and goes to the gods. What I am,⁹ he is; what he is, I am. A Rṣi says (RV., I, 115, I), 'The sun is the self of all that goes or stands.' Let one consider this.

He who knows himself as the fivefold hymn 1 from whence all this springs, he is wise. Earth, air, ether, water, light, these form the self, the fivefold hymn. From him all arises, into him all resolves. He who knows this is a refuge for kādīni, as do the Sārasvata. The term corresponds with the use of the Rgveda Prātišākhya, see Max Müller's edit., pp. xii sq., and with the Śrauta Sūtras, St. Petersburg Dict., s. v.

* Ānandatīrtha and Sāyana both render faṣasāḥ. The Kaumāra school also take this term. In the Rgveda Prātišākhya it includes anusvāra, visarga, jihvāmūlīya, and upadhmānīya; in the other Prātišākhyas it refers to śaṣasahāḥ.

Anandatīrtha prefers ' best of dwellers'.

tatra caturdasādau svarāķ (Sāyaņa). See Max Müller, op. cit., p. x.

8 Sāyana appears to take the first part of the sentence as independent, and as describing prānadevah. For devatā apyeti, cf. Brhadāranyaka Upanisad, IV, 1, 2; Aitareya Brāhmana, IV, 24, 5. No doubt the acc. is mainly governed by the verb, but the prep. force of api is too much ignored in Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, 55 87, 88.

This no doubt refers to the identity of the sun and the self, one of the oldest forms of Brahminical monism. Sāyana illustrates the doctrine by a quotation from the commentary on the Brahma Sütras, III, 3. Sun-worship is a very early and widespread form of religion; cf. Farnell, Cults of Greek States, IV, 143; Evans, Journal of Hellenic Studies, 1901, pp. 108 sq.; Manucci, Storia do Mogor (trans. by Irvine), III, 3, for its real importance in Indra.

for his friends. To him 2 who knows food and feeder a feeder 3 is born, and food is his. Food is water and earth, for of them are foods compounded. Light and air are the feeder, for by them 4 he eats food. Ether is the bowl, for in the ether is all poured. He who knows this becomes the refuge (bowl) of his friends. To him who knows food and feeder a feeder is born, and food is his. Plants and trees are food, animals the feeder, for animals eat plants and trees. Of animals, those who have teeth above and below and are formed like men, 5 are feeders, the rest food. They overcome therefore the other animals, for the feeder is over his food. He becomes over his friends who knows this. 6

2. He who knows more and more clearly the self obtains fuller being.¹ There are plants and trees and animals, and he knows the self more and more clearly (in them). For in plants and trees sap only is seen, in animals consciousness. In animals the self becomes more and more clear, because in them sap also is seen, while thought is not seen in others.² The self is more and more clear

4 They aid digestion.

5 Zimmer (Altindisches Leben, pp. 74-76) shows the identity of the contrast between ubhayādant and other animals, which is found in the Samhitās, with the old Latin contrast of ambidens (in Festus not = bidens) and ἀμφώδοντ- in Aristotle. That, however, ubhayādant originally included the first class of sacrificial animals with man, as he holds (p. 76), appears doubtful. In this passage the resemblance to man is made explicit, and this is scarcely so likely if man were naturally one of the ubhayādant class. Either anu vidhām or the indeclinable anuvidham (as in III, 2, 3) is grammatically possible, but the corruption to anuvidham would be much easier than to anu vidhām. Anu vidhāh is also possible. Vidhā occurs several times, infra, II, 3, 4; 5. Cf. vidhām anuvidhēyate, Maitrāyanī Samhitā, III, 2, 4; 10.

In adhīva caranti the acc. is governed by adhi, a use found in Mantra and Brāhmaṇa alike (Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 87, 88; Atharvaveda, XIX, 49, 2: adhi viīvāny aruhad gabhīrā; RV., VIII, 68, 15^b: adhi tisthan navaṃ ratham; Vājasaneyi Saṃhitā, VI, 2: adhi tvā sthāsyati, &c.). I do not, however, think it can well be construed with the gen., so I think the gen. samānānām is a partitive one, 'of his friends he, &c.' For similar cases of the partitive gen., cf. I, 2, 3, n. 6, and Harivaṃśa, II, 79, 12, where Hopkins, J.A.O.S., XXII, 152, n. 1, takes the gen. as local. Delbrūck (Altindische Syntax, p. 441) is, I think, wrong in holding that adhi rarely has the accusative. The root sthā, e.g., would not naturally take an acc. without the aid of a preposition. Cf. II, 2, 4, n. 8.

2 Max Müller renders, but in others thought is not seen, the apparent meaning being that in man. For he is most endowed with intelligence, he says what he has known, he sees what he has known, he knows to-morrow, he knows the world and what is not the world. By the mortal he desires the immortal, being thus endowed. As for the others, animals, hunger and thirst comprise their power of knowledge. They say not what they have known, they see not what they have known. They know not to-morrow, they know not the world and what is not the world. They go so far, for their experiences are according to the measure of their intelligence.

3. This man is the sea, he is above all the world. Whatever he reaches, he desires to be beyond it. If he gains the sky world, he desires to be beyond it. If he were to gain yonder world, he would desire to be beyond it. Fivefold is this man. What is hot in him is fire; the apertures are the ether; blood, mucus, and seed are water; the body is earth; the breath is air. Fivefold is the air, up-breathing, down-breathing, back-breathing, out-breathing, on-breathing.

some animated beings have not thought. What must be meant is that others, i.e. plants and trees, have no intelligence, and so Sāyaṇa and Ānandatīrtha construe it. Itara frequently means, like άλλος and alius, others, not as opposed to a part of a species, but as another species; A.J.P., VII, 101. Stones have only sattā, says Sāyaṇa, i.e. are only objective, not also subjective.

² Sāyaṇa takes the last sentence as meaning they are born according to their knowledge in a former birth. This, however, assumes the transmigration theory, which is not certainly known in this Āraṇyaka. The better meaning seems to be that taken above, which is more suited in point of fact to the context, for the idea of former birth is nowise necessary or in point. Sāyaṇa cites Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 4, 2 and 7, but this Upaniṣad is earlier. The word yathāprajñam does not occur in Jacob's Concordance. Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, I, 2, has yathāvidyam of transmigration. See also Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, pp. 96 sq.

For ati-\man, cf. Jaiminiya Brahmana, I, 42 (J. A. O. S., XV, 234).

3 Cf. II, 3, 1, n. 1. Anandatīrtha here repeats the identifications with the different forms of isnu.

The five prānas frequently occur. No intelligible explanation of them all is possible. Prāna and apāna, once originally the same, were first divided as expiration and inspiration, then as breath, and the wind of digestion, cf. II, 4, 1 and 2. Vyāna 'through-breathing or circulating air' (Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 263, n. 1) is the bond between the prāna and apāna. Samāna, which 'distributes the digested pieces through the limbs' (Eggeling, p. 264, n. 1), leads to union of the two first. Udāna conducts the soul from the body at death. See Deussen, Philosophia der Upanishads, pp. 249-252; E. T., pp. 276-280, and I, 3, 7, n. 6. Sāyaṇa says that prāna is in the mouth and nose, rising from the heart, apāna is in the lower parts, vyāna in all the veins, udāna in the throat to lead forth the soul, samāna leads food and drink evenly through the whole body. Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, II, 5, 6 adds avāna to the number. For further variations see on I, 3, 7; 4, 1. The same five as here occur in Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 1, 4, 2-6, and Maitrāyaṇī Upaniṣad, II, 6, where see Cowell's

The deities, sight, hearing, mind, and speech, are comprised in up-breathing and down-breathing. For they depart with the departure of breath. He is the succession of speech and thought which is the sacrifice. The sacrifice is fivefold, Agnihotra, new and full moon sacrifices, the four-monthly sacrifices, the animal sacrifice, and the Soma sacrifice. The Soma sacrifice is the most perfect of the sacrifices, for these five kinds are seen in it; that which precedes the libations, is one; then there are three libations, and the rest (of the sacrifice) is the fifth.

4. He¹ who knows one sacrifice above the other, one day above the other, one god above the gods, is clever. This great litany is the sacrifice above the other, the day above the other, the god above the others. This litany is fivefold. As a chorus² it is trivyt, pañcadaśa, saptadaśa, ekavimśa, and notes, and Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 293. With the following, cf. Brhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad (Kaṇva), I, 4, 17, where man, animal, sacrifice, and sarvam idam are all fivefold, and Taittirīya Upaniṣad, I, 7, 1, where mind, speech, breath, sight, and hearing are man.

5 For uttarettare, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, 1, 60. For api+√i, cf.

Caland, Altind. Zauberrit., p. 18.

6 That is the dīkṣā. The last is the avabhṛṭha udavasāniya, &c. See Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, pp. 97 sq. It is worth noting that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa does not deal with the new and full moon or the four-monthly sacrifices, though the Kauṣītaki does, cf. Introd., p. 32.

Ritual-Litteratur, p. 100.

2 Sayana explains these as follows: trivrt stoma is formed by the three hymns at the beginning of the Samaveda Uttararcika, 1-9; RV., IX, 11, 1-3; 64, 28-30; 66, 10-12. The first three verses are taken from the first verse of each sūkta, the second from the second verses, and the third from the third. It is called udyati. The pancadaia is formed out of one hymn, by repeating the first verse three times, the second and third once each, then repeating the second three times, and so on. The saptadasa is the pasicadasa save that in the third round the second and third verses each are repeated thrice, i.e. (1) anabc; (2) abbbc; (3) abbbccc. The ekavimia is made by singing all verses three times, except the last first and second respectively in the three rounds, i.e. (1) analytics; (2) abblecc (or analyce—the MSS. vary); (3) anabece (or abbbece). The pasicavimla is formed by singing in the first round the first verse thrice, the second four times, the third once; in the second round, the first once, the second thrice, the third four times; in the third round, the first five times, the second once, the third three times, according to Dhanamjaya, or the first four times, the second twice, the third thrice, according to Gautama. (This seems to be the sense; R's version is corrupt and S is imperfect.) These stomas are called pakeapakeinī (not as Max Müller, vistuti, which is the generic title of which these are species), dafasapta, and saptasaptini, no name for the last being given. Max Müller quotes Mahīdhara on Yajurveda Samhitā, X, 9, for the trivrt. More in point is Sayana on Aitareya Brahmana, III, 42, which closely resembles this passage, The St. Petersburg Dict. (s.v. trivrt) gives the trivrt as consisting of one sukta, RV., IX, II only, see Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 308, 309; Pañcavimśa Brāhmaṇa, I, 99 sq.; II, 1, 1; 7, 1; 14, 1; Hillebrandt, l.c., p. 101, and schemes in Caland and Henry's L'Agnistoma.

pañcavimia. As a sāman³ it is gāyatra, rathantara, bṛhat, bhadra, and rājana. As to metre it is gāyatrī, uṣṇih, bṛhatī, triṣṭubh, and dvipadā. The explanation⁴ is that it is the head, the right wing, the left wing, the tail, and the body (of the bird). He performs⁵ the prastava five times, the udgītha five times, the pratihāra five times, the upadrava five times, the nidhana five times. This forms a thousand syllables.⁶ The verses here are recited as five orders.ⁿ What precedes the eighty tristichs is one order; then come the three sets of eighty tristichs; and the fifth consists of the rest. This makes a thousand (verses).⁶ That is the whole; these ten by tens are the whole. For number is such. Ten tens are a hundred, ten hundreds a thousand, and that is the whole. These are the three metres; this food indeed is threefold, eating, drinking, and chewing. He obtains this food by these.

5. This is produced as a thousand brhafis. Some recognize a thousand of various metres, saying, 'Is there another?' let us say there is.' Some say a thousand tristubhs, some a thousand jagatis, some a thousand anustubhs. A Rsi says (RV., X, 124, 9), 'Sages in their wisdom discovered Indra dancing an anustubh.' That denotes, they discovered in speech then the breath of Indra. He can become famous and of splendid renown. 'Rather' he is liable to die untimely,'

The gäyatra säman is formed from RV., III, 62, 10; ruthantara from RV., VII, 32, 22; the brhat from RV., VI, 46, 1; the bhadra from RV., X, 157, 1; the räjana from RV., VII, 27, 1, according to Säyana's note; cf. V, 1, 2, n. 2.

[†] The verses corresponding to the body, head, wings, &c., are the first order; the three asitis follow, then come the belly and chest verses.

^{*} There are 1000 stobhas and also in the whole Sastra a 1000 byhatis. The rest refers to the nature of number as being measured by tens. There are nothing but sets of ten. The three 'metres' mean, according to Sāyaṇa, the numbers 10, 100, 1000 which govern all numbers. This, however, is inadequate, as the reference is clearly to the three sets of asitis. The reference to food is because these asitis are the food of the bird. There is no sign that the numbers 100 or 1000 are to be treated as specially important. Sāyaṇa's explanation is otherwise good. He quotes for dasatah, Pāṇini, V, 1, 60. Ānandatīrtha is very weak on this point.

Anandatirtha takes the whole as one argument and as meaning, 'he can die when he likes.'
This is impossible. For the construction, cf. I, 1, 1, 1. 4.

he declares. For the self that is speech is imperfect, since a man understands if driven to thought by breath, not if driven by speech. Let him produce the brhafi, for the brhafi is the whole self. The self is on all sides surrounded by members, and, as the self is on all sides surrounded by members, and as the self is on all sides surrounded by members, and the brhafi of metres. The self is the middle of the members, and the brhafi of metres. He can become famous and of splendid renown, while the other will die untimely, so said he. For the brhafi is the whole self. Therefore let him produce the brhafi.

6. This is produced as a thousand byhatis. Of this produced as a thousand byhatis, there are eleven hundred and twenty-five anustubhs. For by the larger the smaller is comprehended. A Rsi says (RV., VIII, 76, 12), 'I a speech of eight feet,' for there are eight feet of four syllables. 'Of nine corners,' for the brhati?

Anandatīrtha points out that 'he' is Aitareya Mahidāsa or Mahaitareya. Sāyaṇa vaguely says 'a wise man'. Cf. I, 1, 1, 1, 5.

² This is very obscure. The version here adopted means that the activity of manas if evoked by speech (= anustubh) only is imperfect, but it is more perfect if evoked by breath (= brhati). Manas will then stand in its wider sense, not as an indriya, as later, cf. Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, p. 245; E. T., p. 271. This is very strained, but at least it is less absurd than (1) Sāyaṇa's version, 'If he proceeds with the Sastra with reference to the anustubh which is proclaimed as Vāc, and not with reference to the brhatī which is proclaimed as prāṇa, then being driven by his mind he does not manage the Sastra by speech alone.' He adds that without breath speech merely conceived is inadequate, breath being essential for any sense activity. The idea is not unlike the one adopted above. (2) Ānandatīrtha renders, 'Being urged to objects of sense by prāṇa, i.e. Vāyu, and by manas, i.e. Siva, he enjoys them, and not by voice alone.' He read manase because he tries to account for the e. Sāyaṇa must have read prāne na and taken vāg as an accusative or locative, as Max Müller points out. For the dat., which is rarely found in the local sense in the Brāhmaṇa style (Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 144), see Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 43, and cf. II, 2, 2, n. 7.

i.e. make out that the brhatī is the metre.
 Because it is surrounded in the Śastra (Sāyana).

Because metres are both bigger and smaller than the brhati.

* Sāyaṇa ignores the difficulty of this passage. Ānandatīrtha of course renders it, 'he is able to die at will.' The text follows Max Müller's version. The syntax yad brhatī is very common in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 43, &c.; Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 4, &c.; Altindische Syntax, p. 564.

i.e. it is nine feet of four syllables and is formed by adding one to the eight feet of the anustubh. Sāyana says the MS. navasrakti is chāndasah. Cf. Benfey, Sāmaveda, Glossary, p. 87. The correction navasraktir, though easy, is more convincing, because of r following. Cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 31; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 68, n. 15. MSS. frequently differ in such points, cf. Whitney's note on AV., VI, 33, 2 (vyathi(s)); cf. V, I, I, n. 18; 2, I, n. 6. Note should be taken here of the readings of the Mānava Grhya Sūtra, I, 2, 6: caturvimfati in the acc., and I, 23, 15 and 23: pañeavimfaty anuvākān combined with Mānava Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 2, 6: sā ekavimfaty ayam te (see Knauer, p. xli). I confess that the possible explanation suggested by Dr. Knauer of these cases as either contractions with omission of anusvāra or visarga or as neuters is not attractive. In the last case, as perhaps here, the original may have been as Dr. Knauer also suggests ekavimfati(h) I ayam te, &c., with the loss becomes nine-cornered. 'Touching the truth,' for speech united with verse is truth. 'I made the body out of Indra,' for from this thousand brhafis made into anustubhs, which is prāṇa connected with Indra, and from the brhafi he makes speech, the anustubh, as a body. The great litany is the highest development of speech, and it is fivefold, measured, unmeasured, music, true, and untrue. A rc verse, a gāthā, a kumbyā, are measured; a yajus verse, an invocation, conversation, are not measured; a sāman or part of it is music; om is true, no is untrue. The flower and fruit of speech is what is true. He can become famous and of splendid renown, for he speaks the truth, the flower and fruit of speech. The untrue is the root of speech, and, as a tree with roots exposed dries up, and perishes, so a man who speaks untruth exposes his roots, dries up, and perishes. Therefore let a man speak not untruth, but guard himself against it. The syllable om is empty and goes forward. So if of & (as often in MSS. in pausā) and subsequent erroneous contraction. So paūcavimšati(m) may have been written by error in the MS. and then the m dropped and contraction applied. But in verse, of course, we find clear cases of contraction or of the use of shortened forms, especially va for iva, e.g. Šānkhāyana Āraņyaka, XII, 29: puspam iva must metri causa be puspeva or puspam va, probably the former, Oldenberg, Z. D. M.G., LXI, 830; Roth, ibid., XLVIII, 682.

3 Speech is anustubh, verse by hati, and united they touch prana. Anandatirtha explains by equating brhati with a form of Visnu and speech with Uma!

4 'He makes,' in Max Müller's translation, ignores aham. Sāyaṇa does not do this, but he explains the sentence by the action of the Hot, as the Āraṇyaka uses the third person. It only means that the anuṣṭubh is made out of the bṛhatī which is identified with prāṇa, and prana is (see II, 2, 3) Indra.

A curious piece of common sense (cf. Mr. Falconer's advice to Pepys, Diary, Aug. 8, 1662) interpolated to avoid the danger of the preceding doctrine that om is truth. For om as tathā, see Aitareya Brāhmana, VII, 18, and Chāndogya Upanisad, I, I, 8. The comparison a man says om, then that is taken from him; if he should say om to everything, he would empty himself and be unable to have delights. The syllable 'no' is full 10 for one's self. If a man should say 'no' to everything, his fame would be evil and he would destroy himself. Therefore should one give at the proper time, and at the proper time he should refrain 11 from giving. So does he unite the true and the untrue. From their union he grows and becomes greater. He who knows this speech of which (the great litany) is a modification, he is clever. 'A' is the whole of speech and being manifested 12 through the mutes and sibilants it becomes manifold and various. If uttered in a whisper it is breath, if aloud it is body. Therefore it is as it were hidden, for what is incorporeal is as it were hidden, and breath is incorporeal. But spoken aloud it is body and visible, for body is visible.

7. This is produced as a thousand brhafis. It is glory, it is Indra, it is the lord of creatures. 'He who knows it as Indra, as the lord of creatures, leaves this world shaking off all ties,' so said Mahidāsa Aitareya. Having departed, having become Indra, he shines in those worlds. They say, 'If by this form he gains yonder world, then by what form does he experience this world?'

Sayana construes as 'he is emptied for that, viz. the enjoyment of house, fields, &c.' This is to force the meaning of asmai overmuch; it is a dativus incommodi.

^{&#}x27;A' with the different letters is the source of the alphabet. It may be interesting to speculate if this denotes that writing where the 'a' was not expressed was already known. It may be so, but it is not clear. In any case as the date of writing is very doubtful, no great light would be thrown on the date of the Āraṇyaka; cf. V, 3, 3 ad fin., where the reference is clear but cogent only for Saunaka's period. For later reference to the akāra, see Jacob, Concordance, p. 2, and cf. Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa, XX, 14, 2.

² This is the sense, rather than, 'Indra is the lord' as taken by Max Müller. Etan below is the usual Sanskrit attraction of a pronoun to the gender of the predicate; Vergl. Syntax, III, 240 sq.

^{*} The quotation ends here, it seems. The new sentence looks like a prose version of a Śloka, cf. V, 3, 2.

Sāyana quotes Brhadāranyaka Upanişad, IV, 1, 2: devo bhūtvā devān apyeti | He refers also to Brahma Sūtra, IV, 3, 15, and discusses whether this deification is a hindrance to real mukti, and decides it is really a step towards it. But of course the doctrine of mukti is not clearly found in this Āranyaka; see II, 1, 2, n. 9; Hopkins, Religions of India, pp. 232, 238 sq.

For the nasal in pluti, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 299, 300; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 78.

The blood in the woman is the form of Agni, therefore one should despise it not. The seed in the man is the form of Aditya, therefore one should despise it not. This self gives itself to that self, that self gives itself to this self. They thus gain each other. In this form he gains yonder world, in that form he experiences this world.

8. Here there are these verses:1-

⁷ Anandatīrtha has a wonderful explanation. This world and that world are both svastrīrūpam of Bhagavant. Sāyaṇa explains that there are six elements in the body; three, fat, bone, and marrow, are white and represent the man; three, skin, blood, and flesh, are red and represent the woman. ayam is used of the woman because she is connected with earth, asau of the man because he is connected with the sun and the upper world.

The fact that Sayana does not comment on imasmai shows how little he can be relied on to note points in the text. The reading is quite certain, and cf. Whitney, l. c., § 502 b.

This is taken by Sayana and by Max Müller as referring to the words at once preceding. But it is perhaps rather a reference to the question above. Then anena will refer to the knowledge of Indra, and amuna to the human form produced by the union of the parents. Sāyana seems to have been misled by the use of Agni and Aditya into misinterpreting lokam. The tone of the section is noteworthy when contrasted with the pessimism which the body and its imperfections induces in Buddhism and the later Upanişads (Maitrāyaṇī Upanişad, I, 2-4; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 224). Max Müller's view (S. B. E., XV, 1-lii) that, despite its references to Nirvāṇa (p. xlvi) and other hints at Buddhism (e.g. VII, 8), this Upanişad is anti-Pāṇinean cannot be supported. The irregular Sandhi is merely a conscious and deliberate archaism (so perhaps also in the Manava Grhya Sütra, a piece of patchwork), and generally the language is quite recent in form compared to the really old Upanisads. Deussen recognizes the later character and style of the Upanisad, and Winternitz (p. 225) definitely refers it to a post-Buddhistic date. Indeed Weber (Indian Literature, pp. 96 sq.) and Macdonell (Sanskrit Literature, pp. 230, 231) tend to refer it to classical times, though its doctrine is no doubt earlier. The optimism of the Upanisads is natural: what is other than the ātman is miserable, but not the ātman, cf. Brhadāranyaka Upanişad, III, 5; Taittirīya Upanisad, II, 9; III, 6; Īśā Upanisad, 7; Hopkins, Religions of India, p. 240.

* I may note here a small point confirmatory of my criticism of Prof. Arnold's views. The term daksina (pada) occurs in RV., X, 61, 8, which is therefore naturally called one of the

It is obvious that these verses are of the same type as the yajhagāthās of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa and Āśvalāyaṇa Gṛhya Sūtra (I, 3, 10), i.e. they were composed to illustrate and sum up the doctrines which the Āraṇyaka supports, and here as used are older than the work in which they occur (cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, xxxv-xxxvii; Ind. Stud., XV, 11). These verses form an interesting parallel to the rise of the Ākhyāna, in which the verses perhaps denoted the chief movements in the narrative and were fixed before the prose (or verse later) connecting parts (Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XXXVII, 54 sq.; XXXIX, 52 sq.; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 89 sq.). For similar verses, see Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 6, 23; Taittirīya Upaniṣad, II, 8, &c. In Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 4, 10, Ślokas are mentioned after Vidyā, Upaniṣads, and before Sūtras in such a way as to suggest that such Ślokas as here occur are denoted. Asyāḥ is also a pre-Brāhmaṇa and Rgvedic form, though occasionally found later, e. g. III, 2, 3.

This is not very clear. Anandatīrtha explains that the fivefold body is that composed of Nārāyaṇa, &c., and is male and female united, in which all the gods, Nārāyaṇa, &c., are united. Sāyaṇa explains that the breath enters the body, and the worshipper meditates on himself as identical with the breath and thus with all the gods. The five are presumably the five senses.

The metaphor is common, cf. Kāthaka Upaniṣad, III, 4: indriyāni hayān āhuh 1 The senses are meant. Cf. Max Müller. S. B. E., XV, 12, and n. 14.

4 i. e. brahman probably. At least so it was later interpreted, and the idea may well be early, though it might be enough to take it merely as 'the essence of truth'. Cf. Brhadāranyaka, II, 3, 6: atha nāmadheyam satyasya satyam iti prānā vai satyam tesām esa satyam! For the position of brahman in the body with prāna Sāyana cites Praśna Upaniṣad, VI, 3: sa īkṣām cakre kasmin nv aham utkrānta utkrānto bhaviṣyāmi kasmin vā pratiṣthite pratiṣthāsyāmīti sa prānam asrjata! For the next line, cf. Brhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, I, 4, 7: ātmety evopāsītātra hy ete sarva ekam bhavanti; other examples are given in Jacob, Concordance, pp. 260 sq.

latest hymns by Rhys Davids, Buddhist India, p. 30. But Prof. Arnold (Vedic Metre, p. 286) assigns this hymn to the archaic (by which he means the oldest) period!

a Cf., however, Whitney in Colebrooke, Essays2, I, 118, on legendary contemporaneities.

Brahman is called 'a' and the 'I' is there contained.12 This is produced as a thousand brhafis. Of this produced as a thousand brhafis there are thirty-six thousand syllables. So many are the thousands of the days of man's life. By the syllable of life 13 alone does he obtain the day of life, and by the day of life the syllable There is a chariot of the gods which destroys desires.14 Its seat

6 Sāyana cites Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, IV, 27 (Ānandāsrama ed., p. 333): khat phad jahi chindhi bhindhi handhi kad iti vācah krūrāni | ulbanimu he renders ākrošādikam. Cf. also Āpastamba Śrauta Sūtra, XIV, 14, 1; Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 166; Ved. Myth., III, 366.

This merely means they rose above mere names to the unity of brahman or prana. Sayana renders 'dependent on the letter "a" which is the name of prana'. Anandatirtha

nāmā is rendered by Sāyana as equivalent to nāmāyattāh above. This cannot be the case, nor can it well be for nămâni as Anandatīrtha construes it. It must be for năma, the last a being lengthened metri causa. For such cases, cf. Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 62; Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmana, p. 427; Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 9, 7; XVIII, 22, 10, even in prose (cf. Introd., p. 70); J. A. O. S., XXV, 98; below, III, 1, 2, n. 2.

By the help of brahman is Sayana's version, and so also Anandatirtha takes it. More probably it is 'by aid of this doctrine'. For apahatya, cf. Jaiminiya Upanisad Brahmana, II, 1; 10, 2.

¹¹ Sāyaņa quotes Švetāšvatara Upanişad, V, 10 (the late metre is noteworthy):—

naiva strī na pumān eşa naiva cāyam napumsakah l yadyac chariram ādatte tena tena sa codyate II

For the nominative, cf. passages like Brhaddevatā, V, 39, where I would read Ilaspatile with MSS. h. d.; Rgveda Prātiśākhya, XVII, 26; Taittirīya Samhitā, V, 7, 4, 4, &c.

This must be taken as a clear assertion that brahman includes the individual self. Sayana says it refers to Hiranyagarbha quoting the very late Nṛsimhottaratāpanīya Upaniṣad, V: sarvāhammānī Hiranyagarbhah |

Anandatīrtha explains the aksara as the female form of Visnu, the ahas (sic) as the male. As a matter of fact the sentence merely asserts he obtains brahman or prana by means of brahman or prāna, as both are revealed in the syllable and the ritual of the Mahāvrata day, as in I, 2, 2.

18 Sāyana explains this as a chariot of Hiranyagarbha. Ānandatīrtha renders anakāma-KEITH is speech, its two sides the ears, the horses the eyes, the driver the mind. Breath mounts upon it. A Rsi says (RV., X, 39, 12), 'Come hither on what is quicker than mind,' and (RV., VIII, 73, 2), 'On what is quicker than the winking of an eye.' 15

ADHYĀYA 4.

In the beginning the one self was this, there was nothing else blinking. He thought, 'Shall I create worlds?' He created these worlds, water, lights, māraḥ as, 'Prāṇa has no desires and delights in Māyā,' i.e. Ramā. Really all that is meant is that there is a chariot, viz. the body, where prāṇa mounts, as contained above in the verses. Ānandatīrtha explains the uddhi as Ramā in snake form, frotre as Candra and his wife, pakṣaṣī as Candra and his wife, cakṣuṣī as Sūrya and his wife, manaḥ as Rudra. The metaphor is not rare, e.g. n. 3; quotation in Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 5, 3; Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 8; RV., III, 14, 7, as interpreted by Bergaigne (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 270) where the prayer is a chariot; Atharvaveda, VIII, 8, 22, where uddhi and pakṣaṣ also occur, and are rendered as

¹⁵ Sāyaņa adds a long disquisition (cf. Max Müller, S. B. E., I, 235, 236) on the difference of this prānavidyā from that of the Brhadāranyaka Upanisad and the Chāndogya Upanisad, in which prāņa is not related to the Mahāvrata ceremony. Following as usual Sankara he also discusses what is the result of this pranavidya, and concludes that it leads after death and absorption in the paramatman to rebirth in the brahmaloka where after enjoyment of all the powers of a deity, he proceeds to obtain full knowledge and mukti. But Sankara ignores the fact that mukti is not as yet known to this Aranyaka, which in its philosophic doctrine reaches only the unity of existence and the identity of the self and brahman, and which promises immortality, not liberation, to the devout. It is impossible even to say that this Āraņyaka, II, 1-3, realizes clearly the doctrine that all is consciousness, though it approaches this standpoint. It does not assert that the self is unknowable as pure subject or the unreality of existence, as is done by the later Upanisads and the Vedanta. To the writer of this Upanisad immortality meant a continuance of conscious existence, because the identity of the self and the world did not involve in any way the destruction of self. All that it involved was the destruction of what is really self from its accidents. It is of course true that this position is not strictly consistent, but it is no more unsatisfactory than that of Vedäntism.

mortal, and waters. This water is above the heaven, and heaven supports it. The lights are the sky. The mortal is the earth, those under the earth are the waters. He thought, 'There are these worlds. Shall I create guardians of the world?' He formed the person, taking him out from the waters. He brooded on him, and when he was brooded over, a mouth burst forth as an egg does. From the mouth came speech, from speech fire. Nostrils burst forth. From the nostrils came forth scent,7 from scent wind. Eyes burst forth. From the eyes came forth sight, from sight the sun. Ears burst forth. From the ears came forth hearing, from hearing the quarters.8 Skin burst forth. From the skin came forth hairs, from hairs plants and trees. The heart burst forth. From the heart came forth mind, from mind the moon. The navel burst forth. From the navel came forth down-breathing, from down-breathing death. The generative organ burst forth. From the organ came forth seed, from seed water. not pantheistic. Of course the orthodox view of the commentators that the atma is the īlvara, not virāj, and the creation is adhyāropa, from II, 4, 1, to II, 4, 3. This is not, it is admitted by Sayana, clear from the text, but he appeals to Svetasvatara Upanisad, IV, 10, māyām tu prakrtim vidyād, and Brahma Sūtra, I, 4, 23, prakrtis ca pratijnād drstantānurodhāt, besides other passages equally irrelevant. In Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, I, I, aikṣata the regular form occurs. The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa often has unaugmented pasts, see p. 56; Böhtlingk, Sächs. Ber., 1900, p. 413. The next clause, here and II, 4, 3, may be interrogative or merely an expression of determination (so commentators and translators). For āpas, cf. Atharvaveda, VI, 23, 2; Ind. Stud., X, 440, n. 1; J. A. O. S., XXV, 110.

The translation of Max Müller, 'and it is heaven,' can hardly be right, and it is not supported by the commentators. It is true that heaven must come in somewhere, for it is sufficient if it comes in as a support, and so Böhtlingk and Deussen, with Colebrooke, Sītārāma, Rājārāma, and Röer take it. Ānandatīrtha explains ambhas as mahas and the other worlds beyond the heaven where the waters were originally placed; 'the blue firmament.' Rājārāma.

4 This is the later virāj of the Vedānta. Ānandatīrtha calls it Brahman, in accordance with the Visnu legend. Cf. Hopkins, Rel. of India, pp. 232 sq.

5 The five elements (Sāyaṇa), Brahman, &c. (Anandatīrtha).

The sense of √tap, to create by will, is pointed out by Śańkara, who (cf. Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 87 sq., 91 sq.; Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pp. 402 sq.) cites Mundaka Upaniṣad, I, 1, 9: yasya jñānamayam tapas 1 The translation here is borrowed from Max Müller (cf. also S. B. E., XV, 28, n. 2). For yathāndam below, cf. Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, III, 14, 8; Jaiminīya Brāhmaṇa, II, 12. There are sets of three, the organ, the activity, and the natural phenomenon corresponding, which is later called the presiding deity. See e.g. the Anugītā, Mbh., XIV, 1119 sq. For this sṛṣṭikrama, cf. Chāndogya Upaniṣad, VI, 2; Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, II, 1.

⁷ Prāṇa here means clearly the power of smell. Originally (1) it meant the breath in the widest sense, from which it came to denote (2) life or the principle of conscious life, as frequently in II, I-3. On the other hand, (3) it was narrowed down to denote one of five prāṇas, II, 3, 3, and these prāṇas were contrasted with manas and the indriyas, though in death or sleep the fundamental character of the prāṇas came out. (4) The sense 'smell' is an independent and not very common development. (5) Another development applies it to all the organs of life, e.g. eyes, nose, tongue, see I, 3, 7, n. 6. Cf. Sāṇkhāyana Āraŋyaka, p. 21, n. 1.

Apana here has the other meaning of down-breathing, not inspiration, but breathing,

2. These deities being created fell into this great ocean. He troubled him with hunger and thirst. The deities spake to him, 'Grant us a place, where we can rest and eat food.' He led a cow for them. They said, 'This is not enough for us.' He led a horse for them. They said, 'This is not enough.' He led man to them. They said, 'Well done!' Man is indeed well done. He said to them, 'Enter according to your places.' Then fire, having become speech, entered the mouth. Air, having become scent, entered the nostrils. The sun, having become sight, entered the eyes. The quarters, having become hearing, entered the ears. The plants and trees, having become hairs, entered the skin. The moon, having become mind, entered the heart. Death, having become down-breathing, entered the navel. The waters, having become seed, entered the generative organ. Hunger and thirst said to him, 'Grant us two a place.' He said to them, 'To these deities I assign you, I make you sharers or wind, in the lower part of the body. Cf. on II, 3, 3, and II, 4, 3. Rājārāma takes it as 'air inhaled by mouth, not through nostrils'. Colebrooke has 'the air drawn in by deglutition', explaining that swallowing was considered a parallel to inhaling. Cf. Z.D.M.G., LV, 261; LVI, 556; J. A.O.S., XXII, 249.

² This must mean the ocean of being, from which purusa is evolved. Sāyana says into the virāj, but this seems less probable. The v. L, below, ašanāyāpipāse is the form in the Brhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, while in Taittirīya Āranyaka, IV, 23, ašanayā ca pipāsā ca is found. Cf. Aitareya Brāhmana, VII, 15: ašanayāparītaḥ; Aufrecht, p. 431; Böhtlingk, Sāchs. Ber., 1900, p. 418.

^a Because it has no upper teeth, says Sāyana. He is, however, right in quoting II, 3, 2, as showing the real reason for the preference of man, as the most intelligent.

* The commentators Anandatirtha and Sayana, who often follows him, Colebrooke, followed by Röer, Max Müller, and Deussen, explain this purusa as different from though allied to the purusa of II, 4, 1. This hardly seems likely, and the confusion of thought is just as great on the former theory as on the latter. The exact parallelism with II, 4, 1, of what follows is against their view. For the particle su, cf. P. A. O. S., Apr. 1893, pp. xli-xliii.

² Śańkara suggests it may mean 'self made' (cf. Max Müller's trans. (S. B. E., XV, 58) of Taittiriya Upanişad, II, 7) because man is created by his own illusion, or that he is the 'abode of all good actions', which S. Sitārāma in his trans. accepts. Max Müller (S. B. E., XV, 20, n. 4) equates sva° and sukṛta as = deeds performed by oneself and believed to be good.

6 Cf. Jaiminīya Upanisad Brāhmaņa, I, 18, 3, which may be borrowed.

in them.' Therefore to whatever deity an oblation is offered, hunger and thirst are partners in it.8

3. He thought, 'There are these worlds and the guardians of these worlds. Shall I create food for them?' He brooded over the waters.1 From the waters brooded over form 2 was born. The form that was born was indeed food. The food when created sought to go away.3 He was fain to seize it. He sought to grasp it with speech. He could not grasp it with speech. Had he been able to grasp it with speech, man would have enjoyed food by uttering its name alone. He sought to grasp it by scent.4 He could not grasp it by scent. Had he been able to grasp it by scent, man would have enjoyed food by scenting it alone. He sought to grasp it by the eye. He could not grasp it by the eye. Had he been able to grasp it by the eye, man would have enjoyed food by seeing it alone. He sought to grasp it by the ear. He could not grasp it by the ear. Had he been able to grasp it by the ear, man would have enjoyed food by hearing it alone. He sought to grasp it by the skin. He could not grasp it by the skin. Had he been able to grasp it by the skin, man would have enjoyed food by touching it only. He sought to grasp it by the mind. He could not grasp it by the mind. Had he been able to grasp it by the mind, man would have enjoyed food by thinking of it alone. He sought to grasp it by the generative organ. He could not grasp it by that organ. Had he been able to grasp it

* Sāyaṇa, following Ānandatīrtha, explains that, as hunger is mitigated by the knowledge of its (i.e. food's) proximity, or by hearing of it, so the senses all appease hunger and thirst. Sankara's view is that the sensations become eaters by sharing in the deities, i. e. fire, &c., in the body and in the world; so they share in every offering to a deity (i. e. the deity and the worshipper both eat).

The five elements (Sankara and Sayana).

² Form or organism, as Rājārāma translates it, is natural, not something imposed on matter, and it plays no such part in Indian thought as in Greek. Even the Buddhist rupam is not a pregnant conception.

Röer reads nadat, 'crying,' so Rājārāma, and see crit. notes. Sankara explains 'that mice, &c., try to run away from cats that eat them'. He takes ajighāmsat as, 'it sought to run away,' and this is followed by Sayana and Anandatīrtha and by Višvešvaratīrtha, besides being accepted by Colebrooke, Röer, S. Sītārāma, and Rājārāma, Max Müller, and Deussen. But that this is correct seems very unlikely. Rather it may mean, 'He sought to strike, grasp it,' which idea is later developed in detail. This leaves the exact sense of paran difficult. If it is neuter, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1117; Jaiminīya Upanisad Brāhmana, I, 2, 4; 6, 1; Katha Upanisad, II, 4, 1; Maitrayaniya Upanisad, VI, 17; Oertel, J. A. O. S., XVI, 226. But if it = to no purpose (cf. Aitareya Brāhmana, III, 46, 2; Jaiminīya Upanişad Brāhmana, I, 2, 4) a tolerable sense is made as masculine. But I prefer Böhtlingk's atyajigāmsat; cf. Roth, Z. D. M. G., XLVIII, 106-111. If enat is nom., cf. Introd., p. 56. In Manava Grhya Sütra, I, 12, 5, occurs: athainau dadhimadhu samainutah, which Knauer (p. xliv) defends by quoting the Aitareya Brāhmana passage (VII, 22) and Kausītaki Brāhmana, XXII, 1, and by the fact that na in Päli occurs in the nom. (cf. Müller, Pāli Grammar, p. 88). Böhtlingk, Sāchs. Ber., 1896, p. 155; 1900, pp. 418, 428, denies the use.

⁴ As above in II, 4, 1. For a rather similar list, cf. Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 60.

by that organ, man would have enjoyed food by sending it forth alone. He sought to grasp it by down-breathing. He obtained it.⁵ Thus it is Vāyu who lays hold of food, and Vāyu is he who lives by food.⁶ He thought, 'How can this be without me?' He thought, 'By which way shall I enter?' He thought, 'If speech distinguishes, if scent smells, if the eye sees, if the ear hears, if the skin feels, if the mind thinks, if down-breathing digests, if the organ sends forth, what then am I?' Having split open the top of the skull he entered by that door. That door is called vidṛti, the place of happiness. There are three dwelling-places of him, three dreams, this dwelling-place, and this, and this. Born he looked through all beings, to see whether any one wished to proclaim

* $V \bar{a} y u$ is derived from $\bar{a} v a y a t$. The use of this causal form is confined to this sense, but is found both in Samhitā and Brāhmaṇa. The sense is perhaps 'consumed' rather than 'seized'. Possibly $\bar{a} v \bar{v}$ is the source (Monier-Williams' Dict.), but this is less likely; cf. J.A.O.S., XVII,

53; Ind. Stud., XVIII, 24.

"Or he who gives life by food, as Sāyaṇa and Ānandatīrtha take it, quoting Bthadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 2, 1; annam dāma, IV, 3, 6, and Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, III, 2. Sāyaṇa describes the passage as śiṣubrāhmane. For the long series of conditionals, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 950; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 366; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 198. These cases are all normal: they refer to a past unreal condition, for the act of creation is not conceived as continuous, and correspond to the Latin pluperfect subject or the Greek aorist indic. in protasis with år with aorist in apodosis. The form agrahaisyat is remarkable; cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 24: paryagrahaiṣam; ibid., 35: pratyajagrabhaiṣam, and see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 904 b, 1068 a, for other cases of the anomaly. The Supaṇādhyāya also contains the form agrahaiṣam, Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, xxxii; see Mantrapāṭha, II, 8, 3, agrabhaiṣam; cf. Böhtlingk, Z.D.M. G., LIV, 511, with Bloomfield, ibid., XLVIII, 577; J.A.O.S., XXV, 135.

Yankara illustrates by the metaphor, 'Unless the lord the city keep, the watchers watch in vain.' There must be the soul in the body. Sayana compares Brhadaranyaka Upanisad.

III, 4, 1. Contrast with Aristotle, De Anima, III, 5, is interesting.

* i.e. by the tip of the foot, as in II, I, 4, or the skull. Sayana connects the former with the karmendriyas, the latter with the jäänendriyas. Anandatīrtha refers to a variant in Sankara's commentary antar for ataḥ. It obviously must have been wrong, but it is worth noting that Sankara's text was not very complete or certain. It is noteworthy that here we have no hint of karman (cf. Bfhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, III, 2, 13 sq.; IV, 4, 2-5).

⁹ So called because connected with Hari, says Anandatīrtha. The Jaiminīya Upanişad

Brāhmana knows a nāndana sāman and Sāmaveda, II, 651, a nāndana svarga.

These three are variously interpreted. Sankara gives two explanations. The first is that of right eye, inner mind, and ether in the heart. Ānandatīrtha explains the mind as in the throat, and identifies the heart with the ether. He thus gets, in his own commentary, the triad, right eye, throat, and heart, and so Colebrooke. Sāyaṇa as often follows him rather than Sankara, and after him cites the Brahma Upaniṣad, III: netre jāgaritam vidyāt kaṇṭhe svaṇnam samādilēt l suṇuptam hṛdayaṣya tu (al. hṛdayastham) l Sankara and the others explain the states as of waking, dreaming, and deep sleep, for all are sleep as compared with true knowledge of brahman (cf. Kaivalya Upaniṣad, XII). The other explanation is that referring to another birth, viz. one's own body, and those of one's mother and father; this is no doubt quite wrong, but Sāyaṇa reconciles the two theories by assigning two kinds of saṃsāra, dinavyavahāra and janmāntarasvīkāra, to which the theories correspond.

another self.¹¹ He saw this person only as the most widely extended brahman.¹² I have seen it, so he said. Therefore he was Idamdra by name, he was indeed 11 Śańkara does not explain this passage. Anandatīrtha says that either he regarded it as clear or his copyists (cf. n. 8) omitted it. His own explanation gives us a choice. (1) He identified himself with creatures because he did not see the true self, iti being used in the sense of yasmat, or simply, he identified himself with creatures; he did not see the true self, iti marking the close of the adhyaropa section. (2) The adhyaropa ends with avasatha iti. and with sa jata begins the apavada. He examined the creatures separately, whether they had svattah satta or not, and concluded that 'there is nothing that I can call different from the true self'. Vadisyāmi is given for vāvadisat. Sāvana follows this one of Anandatīrtha's explanations. using some of the actual words. Colebrooke has, 'What else (but him) can I here affirm (to exist)?' S. Sîtārāma renders, 'How should be speak of any other?' and Röer has, 'How could he desire to declare any other thing different from him?' Rajarama, 'Can any (element) here call (the ruler) different?' Max Müller and Deussen render, 'whether anything wished to proclaim here another self.' This must be right, or perhaps the subject should be 'any person'. the difference is, however, slight. This version is supported by Anandatīrtha in his own commentary, iha bhūtesu anyam matto 'nyam pravartakam vāvadisat kim vadet, says Visnu, Vāvadisat cannot refer to the subject of abhivyaikhyat and anyam must refer to ātmānam, Vāvadisat may be an intensive aor, subj., or the injunctive of a desid, from the intensive, both rare forms (Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 1019, 1025). Nilakantha thinks this passage is referred to in the Moksadharma, Mbh., XII, 10060, no doubt wrongly, see Deussen's trans. p. 493. For abhivyaikhyat, abhivyaiksat should certainly be read. The confusion between khy and ks is very frequent in all sorts of MSS., cf. Weber, Ind. Stud., IV, 273; Hillebrandt's notes on Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, IV, 12, 10; 15, 1; Gobhila Grhya Sūtra, I, 3, 18 (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, 21); Knauer, Manava Grhya Sūtra, p. xxxv; Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, pp. 174, 175, and at great length in his forthcoming work, Zur Stammbildung, &c., on krechra; Z. D. M. G., L, 42; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 136; Epier. Ind., IV, 122, prakhyālitam for prakṣālitam. The Nirukta, III, 20, already recognizes it and uses it in connecting \(\setminus khyā \) with rksa. On the other hand T, a South Indian MS., has the correct oksat, though perhaps only by conjecture. Rājārāma gives the form as Vedic for abhivyakhyat, and no doubt a confused remembrance of such a form may have helped to keep the absurdity in the text when once it had forced its way in. Vāvadisat he gives as let of \(\sqrt{vad} \). For \(\text{atma} \text{ he accepts the etymology from } \sqrt{at} \), the 'motor' or 'vital force'. Geldner (Vedische Studien, III, 116, 117) adopts the etymology of Weber and Garbe (Die Samkhya-Philosophie, p. 293) of atman from at and so denoting (1) the wandering wind, (2) the samsarin soul, whence come the other meanings, person, self, body, nature. It is quite possible that the soul and the wind were deemed to be closely connected-there are plenty of parallels-but of course in this case we cannot take samsārin in the technical sense, The more usual derivation is from √an (Roth), while Deussen (Allg. Gesch. der Phil., I, I, 285 sq.) prefers to derive atman from two pronominal stems. No explanation as yet offered is satisfactory, since none explains Vedic tmana, &c. (Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik. I, 61). Böhtlingk's conj. vāva dišet, 'to see if it referred to any one save himself,' is good, but not essential.

The commentators all read brahma separately, and though the sense would be much the same this is better than to take brahmatatamam (with S text) as one word. The commentators and translators all agree it is for tatatamam, and Deussen compares durnisprapataram in Chāndogya Upaniṣad, V, 10, 6. We may also compare navamam (=navatamam according to Max Müller in RV., V, 27, 3, see Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 422) Varunavāyvitamam for 'itatamam in V, 3, 2, though there the Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 10, 1, reads pari-

In man 1 he is from the first as a germ.2 That seed is strength gathered from all the limbs and he thus bears a self in his self. When he connects the seed to the woman, then he causes it to be born. That is his first birth. The seed becomes the self of the woman like one of her own limbs. Therefore it hurts her not. She nourishes the self he has given her there. She, as nourisher, is to be nourished. The woman bears the germ. The man before the birth of the child and thereafter 3 supports him. When he supports the child before its birth and yatanam, and for a large number of somewhat similar (but often doubtful) cases, Wackernagel; Altindische Grammatik, I, 280; II, i, 128; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, pp. 58, 59; Bloomfield, P.A.O.S., April, 1893, p. xxxv; A. J. P., XVII, 416-418. Otherwise it might be translated 'just that' in accordance with Pāṇini, V, 3, 93, for which use Bhāgavata Purāṇa, X, 36, 28 is also cited; so Böhtlingk, and in Chandogya, l. c., "tana is now read.

13 For Indra as a designation of atman cf. II, 3, 7, n. 1. For adarsam, Lévi, p. 107.

14 The phrase here occurs in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 43, 1: ity ācakṣate parokṣam paroksakāmā hi devāh; a similar but characteristically slightly different phrase occurs repeatedly in Šatapatha Brāhmana, VI-X, but not in I-V; Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 268; X, 127. Cf. also Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 2, 2, where Indra is mysteriously called Indha as the person in the right eye, for the same reason as here. Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 161) happily compares the riddles found in the Rgveda, the Atharvaveda, and the Yajurveda. The gods require amusement as well as reverence. So also the gods must have animals to play with (Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 148; Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, p. 74, and Keith, J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 936). Other examples of obscurity are Satapatha Brāhmana, VI, 1, 1, 2; VII, 5, 1, 22 (Winternitz, p. 177). Cf. also Winternitz, Mantrapatha, I, xxix, n. Śańkara sums up the result of this chapter in an interesting and polemical discussion of the atman as eternal and unthinkable subject (U, pp. 50-64, trans. by S. Sītārāma, pp. 39-49); but what he says bears rather on his system than on the Upanisad. See also Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, p. 38, n. 6.

1 Sayana following Sankara thus sums up the result of the Upanisad in the introduction to this Adhyāya. There is (1) brahman undeveloped and truly real; (2) then adhyāropa in (a) the fourteen worlds in brahman's egg, (b) viraj who regards the worlds as his body, (c) the indriyas arising in his body, (d) the presiding deities, (e) the subjects of the indriyas including man, (f) the food of the deities and its appropriation, (g) the three states of the self; (3) the apavada, beginning with sa jatah and ending with the end of II, 4, 3. This section takes up as regards other births than the present the question of the three states of the soul. This section seems to be referred to in the Moksadharma, Mbh., XII, 10862, and 9494. Cf. Śatapatha Brāhmana, XI, 2, 1, 1; Lévi, p. 107. For the egg, cf. Gomperz, Greek Thinkers, I, 03.

² This simple and early narrative should not, of course, be explained by the pañcagnividya as Sayana proposes, but is much earlier in conception. Anandatīrtha explains the whole as a question of the different manifestations of Visnu. The edd, except Sitarama and U and Rajarama punctuate at retas, but the comm. and the parallelism yad etad-tad etad are in favour of the other punctuation. The sense is the same. Böhtlingk's enam (= ātmānam) is not essential.

The commentators here differ. Sankara and Anandatīrtha in his (īkā take (1) janmano 'gre as 'before birth'; (2) agra eva as jātamātram; (3) adhi as 'after birth'. This seems preserable, except that agra eva must be considered as explained by janmano 'gre. Anandatīrtha in his bhāṣya explains (1) as above; (2) as agryaḥ, sarvaguṇāgryaḥ; (3) adhi as thereafter, he supports in truth himself, for the continuation of these worlds. For thus are these worlds continued. This is his second birth. This self is appointed for holy deeds. The other self having done its duty and attained old age departs, and departing hence is born again. This is his third birth. A poet says (RV., IV, 27, 1), 'Within the womb, I learned all the races of these gods. A hundred brazen forts restrained me, but like a hawk I escaped swiftly downward.' Vāmadeva lying in the womb thus declared this. Knowing this, he adhikatvena. Sāyaṇa renders (1) agra eva as prasavāt prāg eva; (2) janmano gre as prasavād ūrdhvam; (3) adhi as adhikatvena, apparently borrowing this from Ānandatīrtha's bhāṣya. The services before and after birth which Rājārāma Rāmakṛṣṇa Bhāgavata alone recognizes, as apparently also Colebrooke, are explained as the nourishing the mother and performing the usual ceremonies before and after birth. It is just possible, however, that adhibhāvayati is the verb, and the reference is only to what is done before birth. Böhtlingk omits aera eva.

4 Contrast the late and elaborate passage in Kauşītaki Upanişad, II, 15. The passage, Jaiminīya Upanişad Brāhmaņa, III, 11, is fundamentally different.

⁵ That is the son. The following passage is quoted by Sankara on Bṛhadāranyaka Upaniṣad,

6 Sankara explains that as father and son are one ātman (cf. V, 3, 3), the three births are correct. Sāyaṇa says either (1) the ātman being one, it has three births, two as son, one as father; or (2) the two births of the son have analogies in the case of the father and that of the father in the case of the son, so that each has three births. The third birth is taken by the commentators as rebirth in heaven, hell, or in the world of men. Probably, as there is no proof that the Upaniṣad knows the doctrine of transmigration, it refers to being born in the next world, an idea familiar in the Brāhmaṇas (cf. Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, pp. 168, 169; Sanskrit Literature, pp. 223, 224) which differs essentially from transmigration, i. e. birth into this world again, see Deussen, Philosophie der Upaniṣhads, pp. 294, 295; E. T., pp. 325 sq.; Lévi, pp. 96, n. 1, 97, n. 1; Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth., II, 8; contra, Geldner, Vedische Studien, II, 288; Böhtlingk, Sächs. Ber., 1893, p. 92. For vayo-gata, see Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 190.

This verse is very obscure in this connexion. Sankara, Anandatīrtha, and Sāyana all explain it as referring to the innumerable bodies through which Vämadeva had passed until he obtained mukti through knowledge. This meaning cannot be got from the passage. The context seems to show that it only means that Vāmadeva knew the three births of atman, and so escaped and became immortal. The doctrine of mukti is not apparently known to the writer of the Upanisad. If it were, it would be made clear. For the meaning of the verse in the original cf. Bergaigne, Rel. Véd., III, 322; Eggeling, S.B.E., XXVI, xx, n. 1; Roth, Z.D.M.G., XXXVI, 353; Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth., I, 282; and especially Bloomfield, J.A.O.S., XVI, 1-24, who explains the myth as referring to Agni. When the cloud is rent in the storm, the lightning (=fyena) breaks from the cloud and simultaneously the Soma flows upon the earth. Sayana in his Rgvedic commentary follows this passage. On RV., IV, 26, I, Sāyana says that Vāmadeva, who had in his mother's womb the knowledge of Brahman, sets forth that knowledge of the identity of himself and Brahman, in the verses aham Manur, &c. (so Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, IV, 4, 2, 21 and 22). So [Sāyaṇa] on Atharvaveda, XVIII, 3, 15: sa khalu garbhāvastha eva sann utpannatattvajāānah svasya sārvātmyam anusamdadhau. Sieg (Die Sagenstoffe des Rgveda, pp. 76 sq.) holds, no doubt, rightly that the idea is not found in the RV. passage, but no conclusion as to the priority of the Satapatha Brahmana, I.c. can of course be drawn from the fact that no mention is there made of the legend, which may quite well have been known to the Satapatha, though not referred to. His version stepped forth after the destruction 8 of the body, and having enjoyed all delights in the world of heaven he became immortal.9

Who is he 1 whom we meditate on as the self? 2 Which is that self? That by which one sees, by which one hears, by which one smells scents, by which one forms speech, by which one discriminates sweet and sour? That which is the heart and the mind, 3 perception, injunction, understanding, knowledge, wisdom, vision, firmness, thinking, considering, helping, memory, resolution, will, breath, love, and desire? 4 All these are only names of knowledge. 5 That (self) is

(pp. 88 sq., cf. Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 211 sq.) of this verse takes the last part as meaning, 'Then came the eagle; through the swift one (javasā as an adj.) I escaped,' the speaker being (as in IV, 18) Indra himself. Sieg reconstructs the myth as one in which Indra even before birth desires lordship over the gods, who therefore try first to prevent his birth and then seek to restrain him, until he escapes by the eagle's aid. This is very ingenious but not proved.

* Sarīrabhandāt according to Anandatīrtha. After death, Sahkara and Sāyaṇa. This seems certain and is followed by the translators including Sītārāma and Rājārāma.

The end of this section is, Sāyana says, to produce disgust with the body and with the series of lives undergone by the unenlightened. There is no trace of this in the original. Rājārāma Rāmakṛṣṇa Bhāgavata has an original view of this section (ed., Bombay, 1898, p. 7). He takes it as dealing with (a) the seminal soul which as transferred has its first birth, (b) the second birth as a human being, (c) death and rest in the indestructible heaven. The third sleep is the sleep of death beginning in this, and ending in the heavenly world. This version of the Upanisad—though coloured by Christian influences—yet seems to me to recognize the fact that transmigration is not referred to. Similarly he derives from II, 4, 3 that the human brain is entered by the highest spirit and so becomes worthy of life.

1 This Adhyāya is the final answer to the questions proposed; upāsmahe may also be translated 'worship' or 'service'. Colebrooke takes it: 'What is this soul? that we may worship him.'

² Max Müller and Böhtlingk read ko yam, but Sankara undoubtedly took it as ko 'yam; and though awkward the construction is not impossible, cf. RV., VIII, 4, 6; J. A. O. S., XV, 257. Katarah no doubt refers to the two views of ātman hinted at in II, 4, 3 and here developed as a mere spirit or a central function.

The idea that there is one central function is clearly here developed, and this denial that the senses, &c. are essentially different is creditable to the thought of the Upaniṣad. It is the idea developed in the Theaetetus, 184 sq.; Republic, 533 sq. Cf. Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, III; Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 5, 3, which is the famous assertion that it is by manas man sees and hears. See Deussen, op. cit., p. 246; E. T., p. 273. Sāyaṇa endeavours to discriminate hṛdayaṃ and manas as buddhi and manas, but Śaṅkara regards them as one. The construction is clearly as taken in the translation, though Röer and Sītārāma differ.

4 That these terms, which remind us of the later meaningless Buddhist repetitions, had ever any definite meanings is most improbable. Śańkara renders them thus: sanjāānam = cetanabhāvaḥ, ājāānam = ītvarabhāvaḥ, vijāānam = kalādiparijāānam, prajāānam = prajātāā, medhā = granthadhāraṇasāmarthyam, drṣṭir = indriyadvārā sarvavisayopalabdhiḥ, dhṛtir = dhāraṇam, matir = mananam, manīṣā = svātantryam, jūtis = cetaso rūjādiduhkhitvabhāvaḥ, smṛtiḥ = smaraṇam, saṃkalpaḥ = śuklakṛṣṇādibhāvena saṃkalpanaṃ rūpādīnām, kratur = adhyavāsāyaḥ, asuḥ = prāṇanādijīvanakriyānimittā vṛttiḥ, kāmaḥ = asaṃnihitaviṣayākāṅkṣā trṣṇā, vašaḥ = strīvyatikarādyabhilāṣaḥ. Ānandatīrtha's explanations are, in order, samyakṣṇāna.

brahman,6 Indra, Prājapati, all the gods, the five great elements,7 earth, air, ether, water, lights, all these and those which are mixed with small as it were,8 seeds of various kinds, born of eggs, born from the womb, born from heat,9 born from germs, 10 horses, cows, men, elephants, and all that breathes, whether it walks or ātatajāāna, vividhajāāna, prakrstajāāna, avisprstajāāna, daršana, dhāraņa, māsu pramāņesu tatatvān matih, brahmādīnām īšatvam, sarvaprerana, sarvesu dešakālesu svarūpesu ca samam ramate, sarvakipti, sarvakatrtvam asana, amrtananda, svatantratva. Sayana borrows from both; he refers samjāānam to samyak, medhā to granthatadarthadhāranam, jūtih to javas or as in Sankara, samkalpah to asamīcīne 'pi vastuni samyaktvena kalpanam; for the rest he follows faithfully Sankara. Rājārāma renders: 'consciousness, direction, sagacity, intelligence, retentive power, understanding, courage, power of thinking, freedom of thought, intrepidity, memory, will, capacity, vitality, ambition, obedience.' Böhtlingk makes these subjects and prajñānetram predicate.

5 This may fairly be construed as an assertion of the pre-eminence of knowledge. The parallel passage in the Kausītaki Upaniṣad, III, is clearly later, for it combines elaborately the doctrine of prana (see II, 1-3, above) and that of prajaa. The relations cannot be reversed.

6 Possibly masculine as Śańkara, Anandatīrtha, and Sāyaṇa think, followed by Colebrooke, Röer, Sītārāma, Rājārāma, Max Müller, Böhtlingk, and Deussen. But this is not necessary nor likely in view of the neuter below, and Brahman (m.) is not found as a deity in the Aitareya Brāhmana (but only as priest, p. 68). The occurrence in Maitrāyanī Samhitā, II, 9, 1, is interpolated, v. Schroeder, Ind. Lit., p. 91, n. 1. Muir, Sansk. Texts, V, 323, finds the masc. in various Satapatha passages, unnecessarily. But it occurs, e.g. Kausītaki Upanisad, I, 3. The masc, is natural and is helped by the following masc.

7 This passage is relied on by Deussen (op. cit., p. 168; E. T., pp. 185, 186) in support of his view (accepted by Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, pp. 217 sq., and Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch, Litt., I, 205) of the lateness of the Aitareya Upanisad. But there is nothing in the expression itself to demand a late date, and the fact that the version in the Upanisad of the creation is so detailed, instead of being a proof of lateness, may rather be considered a sign of early date, when the creation still was considered a real act and the doctrine of the omnipresence of brahman as consciousness was not so fully developed. The passages, Brhadaranyaka Upanisad, I, 4, 7; Chandogya Upanisad, VI, 2, 3, both contain a reference to name and form, a conception familiar to Buddhism but not apparently at all early. The Taittirīya, II, 6, is evidently a mere résumé of a well-known doctrine. But that Upanişad bears conspicuous traces of lateness; indeed it already quotes Slokas very often and becomes quasi-metrical, while it knows the Atharvängirases (II, 3) and has a much developed theory of the kośas of ātman. For the elements (ākāśa = empty space), see Böhtlingk, Sächs. Ber., 1900, pp. 149-151; Keith, J. R. A. S., 1909, July.

Mixed with small (Sankara). Iva he calls meaningless. Cf. I, 1, 2, n. 3; III, 2, 6. 'Mixed from smaller portions (of the former)' is Röer's version, which is no doubt the sense. The others of various sorts are opposed to the great elements. Colebrooke has: 'joined with minute objects and other seeds."

9 Sankara explains as yūkādīni which Ānandatīrtha accepts. Sāyana renders krimidamtādīni. The word does not occur in the Chandogya Upanisad, VI, 3, 1, but it is impossible to accept that as a valid proof of later date since such lists (cf. those of the pranas, I, 3, 7; 4, 1) vary enormously in the same book. In jārujāni, cf. jāru, Jaiminīya Brāhmaņa, II, 430, 6 (J. A. O. S., XIX, 100); Böhtlingk's jarāyu is not necessary. For a similar list cf. Anugītā, Mbh., XIV, 1134.

Rendered by Sankara vrksādīni, by Anandatīrtha bhuvam bhittvā jātāni trnādīni, and by Sāyana tarugulmādīni. Rājārāma has 'shoot-born'. The form is normal and is not a case flies, and what is immovable. All that is guided by knowledge, it rests on knowledge. The world is guided by knowledge. Knowledge is its foundation. Knowledge is brahman. He 12 by his knowing self having left this world and having obtained all delights in the world of heaven became immortal.

ADHYĀYA 7.

My speech rests on mind, my mind on speech. Be thou revealed to me. 1 of jy=dy for udbhidya (cf. Scheftelowitz, Zur Stammbildung in den indo-germanischen Sprachen, \S 10).

If The question is whether this justifies an attribution to the author of the doctrine that knowledge alone exists. It is quite open to argue that we only are given the doctrine that the world is guided by knowledge, which leaves us with a final dualism. I think probably the author went further and intended to assert the origin of all from knowledge, cf. II, 4. If so, he represents exactly the later Bhägavata view, he perhaps that of Bādarāyaṇa, of the nature of reality. The self, or god, is conceived as creating the material world as a reality, but the exact nature of the creation is left vague. The relation of brahman and ātman is likewise left vague, a mere identification such as may have been meant being of little value. But of course none of the questions had yet clearly presented themselves. Cf. Thibaut, S.B.E., XXXIV, xcvii sq.; XLVIII, Introd., for Rāmānuja's view, and my reviews of Deussen's Philosophie der Upanishads, J.R. A.S., 1906, pp. 590 sq., and of his Vier philosophische Texte, J.R.A.S., 1907, pp. 462 sq.; Grierson, J.R.A.S., 1908, p. 361. Rājārāma renders prajādna 'source of intelligence'.

12 According to Śańkara, this refers to Vāmadeva, see II, 5.

1 avir avir ma edhi is apparently the correct reading, but the second avir is very curious. Sayana escapes the difficulty by equating the avir to svaprakalam brahmacaitanyam and taking it as a vocative, the rendering avir edhi as prakați bhava, which (though followed by Colebrooke) is unfortunately quite impossible. The phrase avir + √as, &c. is not at all rare, c. g. RV., I, 31, 3: avir bhava Vivásvate (where Bergaigne, Rel. Véd., I, 55, conjectures, no doubt rightly, bhavah, see Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 25); I, 146, 4; IV, 10, 8 (= AV., XX, 77, 8); 1, 16; V, 1, 9: āvir yasmai carutamo babhatha; V, 2, 9: (Agni) avir visvani krnute mahitvá, VII, 103, 8; AV., XII, 1, 60, and avir avir edhi (as read in K) would be perfectly natural, but could hardly have been corrupted into the traditional text. I would suggest that we have here in external combination an example of the working of the tendency which causes is in internal combination to be lengthened where it is part of the stem (e.g. āšīḥ, sajūḥ, see Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 10; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 42, 43; II, i, 126). This point may be noted in favour of the view that in avis the vis is part of the stem (cf. St. Petersburg Dictionary, s. v.). With the whole should be compared Manava Grhya Sutra, I, 4, 4: which has van me manasi pratisthita mano me vaci pratisthitam avir ayur mayi dhehi vedasya vānīh (sic) sthah, and, preceding all this, after the words prāk sviṣṭakṛto 'tha japati, the words rtam vadisyami to the end. The reading vanith is no doubt wrong, being a corruption of ma āṇī by Sandhi, māṇī with ḥ incorrectly restored (it of course would in any case in most MSS. disappear before sth). It appears from Knauer's Crit. Note (p. 6) that

b Cf. Windelband, History of Philosophy, pp. 252 sq.

^{*} Cf. Rājārāma Rāmakṛṣṇa Bhāgavata's ed., p. 7, where he finds in II, 6 the doctrine that all has its source in the highest spirit.

You are the two pins 2 of the Veda. May my lore forsake 3 me not. I join day and night with what I have learned. I will proclaim the real, I will proclaim the true. May this protect me, may this protect the teacher. May it protect me, may it protect the teacher.

vāṇīḥ is a conjecture of his: the text MSS. in I, 4, 4 have either vāṇōm or vāṇō, while, ibid. 8, all save one (vāṇōm) have vāṇō. Only one Paddhati (cf. p. iv) has vāṇōm, obviously an error for vāṇōm (which of course (cf. V, 1, 6, n. 4) is the Sandhi of vāṇō om, if it is not a mere misreading of the MS. There is thus no real support for vāṇōḥ (how exactly Dr. Knauer would take it, I am not sure), and in the Mānava Gṛḥya Sātra the simple Sandhi mātmā for me+ātmā is actually found in I, 3, 2 (so also I, 9, 11: viṣṭarāsō°; I, 11, 16: viṣ̄vādi, &c., see Knauer, p. xxxix). Probably mānō lead to the more intelligible (to the scribe) vāṇō.

For vān, &c., Knauer, who does not notice the Aitareya passage, quotes Pāraskara Gṛhya Sūtra, I, 3, 25; Taittirīya Saṃhitā, V, 5, 9, 2; Taittirīya Āraṇyaka (Āndhra text), X, 72; Atharvaveda, XIX, 60, I. There is also the parallel version in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, I, where vedasāmatsārinīh takes the place of vedasya, &c. This may perhaps mean 'hidden in', but probably we have a mere corruption; see my translation. The Mantras are no doubt old enough. Colebrooke, who comments on the use of Mantra as applicable to part of an Upaniṣad, renders, 'May my speech be founded on understanding, and my mind be attentive to my utterance.'

3 prahāsīḥ may be a second person, or a problematic third person based on a false analogy (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 889; Weber, Berl. Sitz., 1895, p. 830), or an error for prahasit. Precisely the same difference of reading occurs in Khila, IV, 8, 5, trutâm me mã prá hāsīḥ, where Peterson's MS. has hāsīt, and cf. Mānava Śrauta Sūtra, II, 1, 2, 36 (hāsīt) with Taittirīya Samhitā, III, 1, 1, 2 (hāsīḥ), in the same phrase, dīkse mā mā hāsī(ḥ), and in Hiranyakeši Grhya Sütra, I, 6, 20, 1, yathāsat for yathāsah (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, 189). Scheftelowitz renders: 'das von mir Gehörte möge man nicht verspotten vermittels des Erlernten,' taking hāsīh from \(\sqrt{has}. \) The long \(\tilde{a} \) would be unusual, \(\tilde{a} \) but in any case a derivation from \(\sqrt{hd} \) seems preferable in point of sense and is supported by Atharvaveda, VI, 41, 3; Taittiriva Āraņyaka, IV, 42 (Ānandāśrama ed., pp. 352, 355). The translation will be literally: 'O lore, forsake me not,' reading frúta, perhaps, as the nom. is unusual, and the neuter voc. is perfectly well supported (cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, § 66), and the reading fruta me is easily corrupted into frutam me, cf. Lanman's note on Whitney, Atharva Veda, XVIII, 2, 3; Whitney, P.A. O.S., Oct., 1887, p. xxv, and my note in J.R. A.S., 1907, p. 225, although the nominative can stand, cf. Winternitz, Mantrapatha, I, p. xviii. b For the sense cf. Atharvaveda, I, 1, 4; Taittiriya Upanisad, I, 4, 1.

* From here to the end this is identical with the Taittiriya Upanisad, Śikṣāvallī, I, I, or Taittiriya Āraṇyaka, VII, I, 1. The sense of ahorātrān is no doubt, 'I work all day and night,' as Sāyaṇa takes it. Colebrooke renders, 'Day and night may I behold this, which I have studied.' In III, I, 2, the neut. is used.

a Compare, however, sākṣye which Whitney, no doubt rightly, reads in Atharvaveda, II, 27, 5, although the form elsewhere is always sakṣye, and III, 1, 6, n. 5. Ahasīt, given as only grammatical by Whitney (Roots, &c., p. 203), is found in the Daśakumāracarita (Bühler, Ind. Ant., XXIII, 147).

ĀRAŅYAKA III

ADHYĀYA 1.

Next comes the Upanişad of the Samhitā text. The former half is the earth, the latter half the heaven, their union the air, says Māṇḍūkeya. The union is the ether, so proclaimed Mākṣavya. 'For it is not considered independent, and so I do not agree with his (Māṇḍūka's) son,' he said. 'They are alike and it is considered independent,' said Āgastya; for the air and the ether are both alike. So far as regards the deities. Now as regards the self. 'The former half is speech, the latter half the mind, their union is the breath,' so said Śūravīra Māṇḍūkeya. Then said his eldest son, 'The former half is mind, the latter half is speech. For by mind one first resolves and then utters speech. Therefore is mind the first half, speech the second half, and truth their union.' It is indeed alike 'with both, father and son. This compact of mind, speech, breath, is like a chariot with three horses. He who knows thus this union, obtains children," cattle, fame, ² Akāśa is rendered 'void' by Böhtlingk in his translations of Chāndogya and Brhadāranyaka Upaniṣads; see II, 6, n. 7, contra, Whitney, P. A. O. S., Oct., 1890, p. liii.

² This is not at all easy. Mene (like dadyse, II, 1, 3; 8) seems to be passive, because it is difficult to make out a translation either as niscitivān (Sāyaṇa) or manye (Ānandatīrtha). The subject must be vāyuḥ, and the sense must be as in Sāyaṇa (cf. Śaṅkara on Taittiriya Upaniṣad, III, 10, 4; Max Müller, S.B.E., XV, 68, n. 1) that vāyu is included in ākāša and therefore is inferior to it. Ānandatīrtha takes putreṇa as referring to the fact that ākāša is the father of vāyu. The subsequent identification he explains on the ground that vāyu is the stronger. In Taittīriya Upaniṣad, I, 3, 2, the earth, sky, ether (= antarikṣa, Śaṅkara) and vāyu are given as the four factors. Asya is obscure: it may be a gen.=dat. and refer to Māndūkeya, or possibly a vague reference (cf. Rgveda Prātišākhya, I, 2) to the subject, helped by such genitives as that in V, I, I.

* Samāne is neut., probably because mate is understood, or perhaps it is fem. The solution is that the two views are equally correct, because in upāsanās it is not things but words that are considered (Sāyaṇa). Ānandatīrtha rightly takes the last words as giving the opinion of Mahaitareya. Otherwise they must be Āgastya's in which he concurs. Max Müller reads, as S, ceti, but it is not in B or the other MSS. and it is merely a misunderstanding of the commentator.

5 They give a similar result, and so are alike, and equally justifiable, na hy upasana vastutativam apeksate. For manas and vāc, see Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, pp. 30, 31.

Viṣṇu is made the subject by Anandatīrtha. The real subject is clearly the meditation on the Samhitā. For three horses, cf. RV., I, 39, 6; 100, 17; VI, 47, 24; VIII, 7, 28. The metaphor recurs constantly in different forms in Sanskrit Literature, e.g. Mbh., XIV, 1427 sq. The analogy with the Phaedrus, 246, is obvious. For samhatah cf. RV., III, 1, 7; Geldner, Vedische Studien, I, 164.

Anandatīrtha renders the children as prajāāna, and the cattle as Vedas. Sāyana with glory, and the world of heaven. He lives all his days. So teach the Māṇḍū-keyas.*

2. Then comes (the teaching) of Śākalya.¹ The first half is the earth, the second half the sky, their union is rain, Parjanya is the uniter. Thus it is when he rains strongly and continuously for day and night, then people say, 'Earth and heaven have united.' So far as regards the deities. Now as regards the self.

Śańkara regards this Upanisad as intended for persons who are neither fit for mukti (II, 4-6) nor even for union with Hiranyagarbha (II, 1-3).

* This section gives us the views of certain Māṇḍūkeyas. The Māṇḍūkeyas occur in Rgveda Prātiśākhya, § 200, and in the Purāṇa tradition (Weber, Ind. Stud., II, 100 sq.; III, 253). Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, p. 12, has revived the theory that certain of the Khilas represent parts of their Saṃhitā, but cf. Oldenberg's review, Gött. gel. Anz., 1907, pp. 218 sq., and my review, J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 226 sq. The word Upaniṣad in this section clearly means 'secret doctrine'. This is certainly the earliest sense of the word (derived, no doubt, from teaching in the forest, which was done for the sake of secrecy, cf. Introd., p. 15). I cannot accept Deussen's view (Philosophie der Upaniṣhads, pp. 13 sq.) that the earliest sense was 'secret word' (a case like tajjalān, &c.), then 'secret text', then 'secret sense' of a ritual action. The earliest sense may well have been 'secret meaning' of a ritual action, whence it seems to me the other meanings are very easily derived. Deussen's theory is bound up with his view of the Kṣatriyas as propounders of a secret lore, as to which cf. Introd., pp. 50 sq.; III, 2, 6, n. 11. I agree with Deussen, however, and with Winternitz (Gesch, der indisch, Litt., 1, 208, n.) in rejecting Oldenberg's view (Z. D. M. G., L, 458 sq.) of Upaniṣad as upāṣanā. See, however, also Z.D. M. G., LIV, 70 sq., and Max Müller's view in 1869, Rgveda Prātišākhya, p. iv; Hopkins, Rel. of India, p. 218.

A muddled version of this section occurs in the Rgveda Prātišākhya, I, 2; 3: Māṇḍūkeyaḥ saṃhitāṃ vāyum āha tathāhāšaṃ cāsya Māhsavya eva i samānatām anile cāmbare ca matvā-gastyo 'viparihāraṃ tad eva ii 2 ii adhyātmakļptau Śūravīraḥ sutāš a ca vāimanasor vivadanty ānupūrvye i sandher vivartanam nirbhujaṃ vadanti šauddhāksaroccāraṇaṃ ca pratriṇam ii 3 ii See Max Müller, pp. iii-vi. The Śāńkhāyana has, VII, 2, an attempt at an improved version, reading in one MS. parihvytaḥ in both cases. Böhtlingk, in the smaller Dict., I, 130, renders aviparihrta as 'identic', but this makes no sense. The reference in the Prātišākhya is of course valuable as giving Śaunaka's date as a terminus ad quem for the lowest date of the Āraṇyaka.

It refers to the case of iko yan aci, Pānini, VI, 6, 77, i.e. where vowels like i become y before a. A fourth party is introduced. Sākalya must of course be the great grammarian to whom the Samhitā is ascribed, and this gives us not a very ancient date for this Upanisad. But it need not have been written long after Sākalya. Rather it seems to be early. For Sākalya's date see Introd., p. 71. He must probably go back to 700 B.C. Geldner (Vedische Studien, III, 144 sq.) considers that Sākalya must be identical with Vidagdha Sākalya mentioned in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, XI, 6, 3; XIV, 6, 9 (see Weber, Ind. Stud., IX, 277 sq.; Indian Literature, p. 33) and identified with the maker of the padapātha by the Vāyu Purāṇa, LX, 58. He was therefore a contemporary of Āruṇi and Yājāavalkya in opposition to Oldenberg's view (Prolegomena, pp. 371 sq.) which refers him to the end of the Brāhmaṇa period. Weber (l. c.) thinks that Sākala in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 43, 5, refers to his school, but the

b Geldner evidently takes a much more respectful view of the antiquity of these sages than I would. I think it quite possible to hold that Sākalya and they belong alike to the end of the Brāhmana period. On the other hand I think Hoernle's dating (Osteology, pp. 106 sq.) wrong; see Z. D. M. G., 1908, pp. 138, 139; J. R. A. S., 1908, p. 368.

Every man is egg-like,2 there are two halves, they say;3 this is the earth, this is the heaven, and between them is the ether, just as there is the ether between earth and heaven. In this ether 4 the breath is fixed, as is the air in that ether.

reference is too far-fetched to be worth consideration—indeed such comparisons hinder rather than aid progress. The evidence of the Vāyu Purāṇa is worthless. Identifications are easy and obvious, and we cannot tell that we have a piece of tradition at all. The fact that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa does follow the rule of Śākalya (Pāṇini, VI, I, I28), that ā before r becomes a and that a may remain, cannot prove that Śākalya is prior to it: the reverse may be the case. As Geldaer admits, the RV.—and the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa is in the same position—do not follow his rule (VI, I, 127) as to t t before dissimilar vowels, and we are left with grave doubts whether Geldner's view that Śākalya was merely to Pāṇini the author of the padapātha and author of the Prātišākhya is sound. The fact therefore remains that when Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 46, recognizes bhavāsi ātibhiḥ as the pronunciation, it cannot have before it Śākalya's text, unless we admit (which is too bold) that the Saṃhitā is later than Śākalya. I prefer, therefore, Oldenberg's date of Śākalya, and I would lay stress on the fact that in the Āraṇyaka he is Sthavira Śākalya, in the Brāhmaṇa Vidagdha. These names are too distinct to permit of identification. The Śākalya of the Prātišākhya is likewise Sthavira and must be the same as the man here.

² Āndam (later ānḍa, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 171; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 33, n. 14) anḍasadrṭam varnavikāras chāndasah (Sāyaṇa). The neut. is noteworthy as comparatively rare in Sanskrit. Cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 13: krpanam ha duhitā; also II, 3, 5, madhyam ātmā, &c. Parallels are common in Greek and Latin (οὐκ ἀγαθὸν νολυκουρανίη, Monro, Homeric Grammar², p. 166; malum mihi videtur (esse) mors, Cicero, Tusc., I, 5, 9). The use is thus substantival rather than adjectival as is clearly felt in the case of madhyam. See also the striking case, Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 4, 3: tāmād idam ardhabrgalām iva svaḥ (so Böhtlingk, Chrestomathie³, p. 357; Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 85, n. 3). In itī nu there is a lengthening found also in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa in prose (Aufrecht, p. 427) with itī also. Cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 312; II, 3, 8, n. 9.
^a 'They say' can hardly refer to the following words, as Max Müller takes it, though this is partly supported by the last words of the section.

* Tasmin hasmin is certainly curious. The Śāṅkhāyana parallel, VII, 3, is a correction and throws no light. The MS. evidence is strong and Ānandatīrtha renders it as tasmin ha asmin. Perhaps smin stands for asmin (cf. Müller, Pali Grammar, p. 24) and ha is the particle. No root or base ha exists from which hasmin could naturally be formed. Sāyaṇa ignores the point, and may possibly have read tasminn asmin as does Rājendralāla, but this is unlikely. The correction hāsmin leaves the error unexplained. It is to be noted that in the Sunaḥsepa legend, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 13, the MSS. read: iti ha smā ākhyāya, which Aufrecht keeps in the text and gives (p. 431) as one of the grammatical errors of the Brāhmaṇa. The parallel Śāṅkhāyana text has merely iti. Böhtlingk in his Chrestomathie², p. 351, and Sāchs. Ber., 1900, p. 418, amends to hāsmā and claims that Sāyaṇa bears this out. But Sāyaṇa's note while showing that he took smā as equivalent to asmai is not conclusive, though it tends to show that he had āsmā(i) before him, just as he seems to have read tasminn asmin here, but arguments from his silence are dangerous. He ignores imasmai in II, 3, 7. I do not think it impossible that this smin and the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa's smā are parallel phenomena of an attempted simplification of

It is true Sthavira does not occur in III, 1, 2, but I do not think it is reasonable to take the Sākalya of that passage as different from him of III, 2, 1; 6, as does e.g. Weber, Indian Literature, p. 50.
b On him see Max Müller, Egveda Prātišākhya, pp. 7 sq.

Just as there are those three lights in heaven, so there are these three lights in man. As there is in heaven the sun, so there is the eye in the head. As there is in the sky the lightning, so there is the heart in the body. As there is the fire in earth, so there is the seed in the member. Having thus represented the whole world as the self, he said, 'This is the symbol of the earth, this of the heaven.' He who knows thus this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives all his days.'

3. Then come the reciters of the Nirbhuja. The Nirbhuja dwells on earth, the Pratṛṇṇa in heaven, the Ubhayamantareṇa in the sky. Then if one should rebuke him who recites the Nirbhuja, he should reply, 'Thou hast fallen from the two lower places.' If one should rebuke him who recites the Pratṛṇṇa, he should reply, 'Thou hast fallen from the two upper places.' But there is no rebuking him who repeats the Ubhayamantareṇa. For when he unites the words, that is the Nirbhuja form; when he pronounces the two syllables pure, that is the Pratṛṇṇa form. This is the first. By the Ubhayamantareṇa both are fulfilled.

the forms of the base a. Possibly the production of such forms may be due to the analogy of sásmin (RV.), and cf. sasmāt (Chāndogya Upaniṣad); Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 495 fin. See, however, also Böhtlingk's remarks in his Grammat. Absonderlichkeiten im Aitareyabrāhmana, Leipzig, 1900, where he regards the irregularities noted by Aufrecht, I. c., as due to misreadings of the text, and I fully recognize that undue reverence to such texts is absurd. On the other hand old forms do disappear, and cf. perhaps the use of tmā and tmānam, Maitrāyanī Upaniṣad, VI, 7; II, 6, and the Vedic tmanā (Pāṇini, VI, 4, 141; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 61). There is also the elision of a in nasi, Mantrapāṭha, I, 13, 9 (=Hiranyakeśi Gṛḥya Sūtra, I, 16, 3), see Winternitz's edition, I, xxvii; Wackernagel, I, 318.

⁵ These sections I and 2 may be compared with Taittirīya Upaniṣad, I, 3, which treats the saṃhitā with reference to the spaces (earth, heaven, ether, wind), lights (fire, sun, water, lightning), knowledge (teacher, pupil, knowledge, training), generation (mother, father, child, begetting), and the self (lower jawbone, upper jawbone, speech, tongue). This elaborate system must be later than the Āranyaka. Cf. Max Müller, Rgveda Prātitākhya, pp. iii sq.

Or recitations of. The Nirbhuja is the Samhitā, the Pratṛṇṇa the Pada, and Ubhayamantarena the Krama Paṭha. Max Müller (see his Rgveda Prātišākhya, p. iii, and Nachträge, p. ii) first pointed out the importance of this passage. Cf. also Oldenberg. S. B. E., XXX, 146 sq.; Prolegomena, p. 380; Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, p. 51. It is summarized in Pratišākhya, I, 4; see my Šānkhāyana Āranyaka, p. 45, n. 3; III, I, 2, n. 8.

² Acyosthāntarābhyām is clearly a case of irregular Sandhi, ef. Atharvaveda, IX, 1, 1: prthivyántárikṣāt; III, 2, 4, n. 11; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 316, 317; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, pp. 64, 65; 7. A. O. S., XXV, 00-102.

* Sāyana explains nirdistau bhujasadršau pūrvottarašabdau yasmin. Max Müller thinks it may refer to the arms of the words being cut off, as it were, or with two arms stretched out, the two words forming, as it were, two arms to one body. In the following acyosthāk is clearly the reading, though S and R in the commentary vary, reading acyosthā and acyosthā. The Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, VII, 8, has the correct form.

He who desires proper food should recite the Nirbhuja, he who desires heaven should recite the Pratṛṇṇa, and he who desires both should recite the Ubhayamantareṇa. Then if another should rebuke him who recites the Nirbhuja, he should reply, 'Thou hast offended the earth, the deity. The earth, the deity, will strike thee.' If another should rebuke him who recites the Pratṛṇṇa, he should reply, 'Thou hast offended heaven, the deity. The heaven, the deity, will strike thee.' If another should rebuke him who recites the Ubhayamantareṇa, he should reply, 'Thou hast offended the sky, the deity. The sky, the deity, will strike thee.' Whatever he says to him or says in reply to him, that shall assuredly be fulfilled. But to a Brahmin one must not say anything save what is auspicious. Only in exceeding of prosperity may one say ill to a Brahmin. 'Not even in exceeding prosperity may one say ill to a Brahmin, let Brahmins be honoured,' so says Śūravīra Māṇḍūkeya.

4. Then come the imprecations. Let him know that breath is the beam. If any one rebuke him who has become breath as the beam, then if he thinks himself strong, he says, I have grasped the beam, breath; thou canst not overcome me who grasp the beam, breath. Let him then say, The beam, breath, bruvan vā bruvantam vā. This may perhaps be taken as I have taken it as equivalent to, 'whether he speak to him or speak in reply.' This is quite a simple construction. But it is not so taken by the commentators. Sāyana renders bruvan as equivalent to bruvantam, and takes the second part as vā abruvantam. This is followed by Max Müller. Ānandatīrtha interprets it as bruvan vā abruvan vā bruvantam vā abruvantam vā. For similar curses, cf. Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, VII, 10, and Chāndogya Upaniṣad, II, 22, 3.

⁶ Sāyana takes this as permitting a curse on a Brahmin in the case of great wealth (such wealth being sinful). Ānandatīrtha denies this, and carries on the negative. Thus Sūravīra's dictum confirms this. This is less probable. Max Müller accepts Sāyana's view that the man is to say, 'Let them be known to Brahmins.' It is simpler to take it as in the text. For na-cana, cf. V, 3, 3; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 544 sq.; Channing, J. A. O.S., XIII, xviii; Jaiminiya Brāhmana, II, 77 (J. A. O.S., XV, 240): na te sarīrāni cana grham prāpsyanti, and Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmana, IV, 14, 5. The rule that na precedes seems true for the Brāhmana prose.

The two accus. with $\sqrt{br\bar{u}}$ (for $br\bar{u}$, cf. Bloomfield, A.J.P., V, 180; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 182; Macdonell, Vedie Grammar, p. 36) are said by Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, p. 174; cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, p. 8; Gaedicke, Der Accusativ im Veda, p. 265) not to be found in the Brähmana language, which this passage disproves. Brū is expressly mentioned as governing two accusatives in the Kārikā cited by the Kāšikā Vrtti on Pāṇini, I, 4, 51, where a much more marked case than that here (where the second acc. is merely a pronoun) is adduced, viz. māṇavakam dharmam brūte.

says, ātmano jūānasāmarthyānusārenoktiprakārā ucyanta iti šesaķ.

² Cf. Śākalya's view, III, 1, 2. The metaphor is from house building. The opt. below is clearly indefinite (like the subj. in Latin and opt. in Greek); see III, 2, 1, n. 1; and see my note on the Kāṭhaka, J. R. A. S., 1909. For vaṃla, see Zimmer, Alt. Leb., p. 150.

² The construction is curiously changed below to the accusative, unless, as is possible, the other person is meant. But see St. Petersburg Dict. s. v. man 3. The nominative is, will forsake thee.' But if he thinks himself weak, he should say to him, 'Thou hast not been able to overcome he who have been fain to grasp the beam, breath. Breath, the beam, will forsake thee.' Whatever he says to him or says in reply to him, that shall assuredly be fulfilled. But to a Brahmin one must not say anything except what is auspicious. Only in exceeding prosperity may one say ill to a Brahmin. 'Not even in exceeding prosperity may one say ill to a Brahmin, let Brahmins be honoured,' so says Śūravīra Māṇdūkeya.'

5. Now the reciters of the Nirbhuja say, 'The former syllable is the former half, the latter the latter half. The space between the former half and the latter half is the union.' He, who knows thus this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives all his days. Now Hrasva Măṇḍūkeya says, 'We that recite the Nirbhuja say that the former syllable is the former half and the latter syllable the latter half, but that the union is the space between the former and latter halves in so far as thereby one produces the union and distinguishes accented and unaccented and separates the mora and what is not.' He, who knows thus this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives all his days. Now his son, however, quite regular, see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 268; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 208 and 99. Cf. also the idiom kṛṣṇọ (&c.) rūṇam kṛ (Taittirīya Samhitā, V, 2, 6, 5; VI, 1, 3, 1; 6, 5; 2, 4, 1; 4; 7, 1; VII, 1, 6, 2; 3; 4; Brāhmaṇa, I, 1, 3, 3; Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 35, see Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 111). The construction with the nom. (cf. Delbrück, Vedische Syntax, pp. 104 sq.; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 33) is no doubt rare in later Sanskrit, but I have found it in an independent passage in Ānandatīrtha, and the analogous use of the gerund is found in the Rāmāyaṇa, &c. Cf. the curious phrase, Manu, VIII, 91: eko'ham asmīty ātmānam-manyase. Chaknuvam in Rājendralāla is merely an assimilated n altered into anusvāra. The error of B in reading chaknuvantam shows how little dependence can be put on this MS. As to āha, cf. III, 2, 4, n. 10. Enam is here in apposition to prāṇam, but I agree with Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 136, that the strict rule (Böhtlingk, Z. D. M. G., XLI, 182) cannot be proved for Vedic or Sanskrit.

* Samadhitsisam is of course the agrist indic. of the desiderative of the root dhā. Max Müller translates samadhitsisantam as a participle, but this is impossible. Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit

⁵ These curses are just intelligible, but the curses in Sāākhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, 8 and 9 offer serious difficulties. As the text stands the first case is that of rebuking another, when if strong the rebuker (this must be the subject) says to the other, 'Thou hast grasped the breath or beam but canst not overcome me who am fain;' if weak, he says, 'Thou hast sought to grasp, but couldst not.' In the second case the sense must be (reading parah or making param mean the subject of the main clause) the man who holds that prāna is vamia says to his rebuker, 'I have been fain to grasp the beam, breath, thou canst not overcome one who is fain,' if the rebuker is strong. If not, he says, 'Thou hast sought to grasp, but couldst not.' Other renderings are quite possible and the text can be altered (e.g. read samadhām in VII, 8), but it is not possible to be certain of the sense; see my trans., pp. 44-46.

Āraņyaka, VII, 11-13.

Madhyama, his son by his wife Prātībodhī, says, 'One pronounces these syllables by their letters, neither separating entirely nor uniting absolutely, and the mora which is between the former and latter halves and indicates the union is the sliding. I consider therefore the sliding to be the union. A Rṣi says this also (RV., II, 23, 16), 'O Bṛhaspati, they know nought higher than the sliding.' He, who knows thus this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives all his days.

6. Tārukṣya¹ says, 'The union is formed by the Brhat and Rathantara Sāmans. The Rathantara is speech, the Brhat breath.² By these two, speech and breath, the

² Metronymics like this were inevitable where polygamy was possible. They do not prove matriarchy or anything similar. A similar instance is the famous Kṛṣṇa Devakīputra of Chāndogya Upaniṣad, III, 17 (not 7 as in Max Müller), 6, who is the subject of an interesting discussion in Garbe's translation of the Bhagavadgūtā, and cf. J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 976 sq.; 1908, p. 173, n. See also Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 169. A child sometimes, if illegitimate, was named after its mother, e. g. Satyakāma Jābāla, Chāndogya Upaniṣad, IV, 4. For a long list of metronymics of a curious character see Bṛhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, VI, 4, 30-32. The reading of B is a mere error in an inaccurate MS. Max Müller suggests Prātibodhī as the correct form, and this seems the form in the Śāṅkhāyana. For the i, cf. however Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 75. Pratibodha is a recognized name in the Gaṇa vidādi. For other metronymics, cf. Fleet, J. R. A. S., 1905, pp. 637, 638; Hopkins, J. A. O. S., XIII, 105, 370, n.; for a discussion of matriarchy as affecting the Aryan Hellenes, see Farnell, Archiv f. Religionswissenschaft, 1904, pp. 70 sq., and reff.

The reading is clearly anekikurvan. Ekikurvan is an easy but bad blunder. Säyaṇa explains that you must not (1) pronounce tava it as tava+it, nor (2) as tavat, but (3) as tavat. This cannot be meant. It is really intended that you should pronounce so as to give a sound of ai together. Compare the fact that in the so-called elision of Latin both elements were distinctly preserved in pronunciation (cf. Lindsay, Latin Language, p. 144), as in modern Spanish. Cf. also Deussen, Sechzig Upanishads, p. 215. This passage is of particular interest as confirming the notice in the Rgveda Prätišäkhya, III, 8 (200) (Max Müller's edit., p. lxv) that Mändūkeya laid down the use of the circumflex in the Prašlista Sandhi (e. g. a+i, &c.) as well as in the Abhinihita Sandhi (ϵ or o+a), and the exceptional cases of i+i, in which the circumflex is regularly laid down, and the fact that the a is not merely elided generally recognized by the Prātišākhyas (Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 324; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 104). So Pāṇini, VIII, 2, 6, has svarito vānudātte padādau, and see Wackernagel, I, 292, 293; Macdonell, p. 104. The requirement of the circumflex is only intelligible on the anekīkurvan theory.

The form anekīkurvan is interesting. Ekī + \sqrt{kr} is found in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1093, and contrast III, 2, 3: aikyā bhāvayan; ekībhā occurs in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 4, 2 in the sense of dying, and cf. Maitreya Upaniṣad (Max Müller, S.B. E., XV, xlvi) tama ekībhavati parasmin; cf. also Jacob, Concordance, p. 268. For RV., II, 23, 16, cf. Geldner, Vedische Studien, III, 68.

union is made.' Tărukṣya guards ³ (his teacher's) cows for a year for the sake of this Upaniṣad. For it alone does Tārukṣya guard the cows for a year. A Rṣi says (RV., X, 181, 1; 2), 'Vasiṣṭha bore hither the Rathantara, Bharadvāja carried hither the Bṛhat of Agni.' He, who thus knows this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives out all his days. Kaunṭharavya says, 'Speech is united with breath, breath with the blowing air, the air with the All-gods, the All-gods with the world of heaven, the world of heaven with brahman. This is the gradual union.' He, who knows this gradual union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven, just as does this union. If he for the sake of another or for his own sake recites (the union) let him know as he is about to recite, that this union has gone up to heaven, 3 This is a quaint piece of human nature. There are plenty of parallels, cf. Chandogya Upanisad, IV, 4. The omission of the second sentence in B is clearly a slip, showing how untrustworthy is the MS. when uncorroborated. For the nimittasaptami, cf. Brhadaranyaka Upanişad, I, 3, 2; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 77, 4; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 92; Geldner (Vedische Studien, III, 33, n.) finds such a loc. in RV., I, 6, 9: sam asminn rajate girah. Raksayate is a hist, pres. The middle here gives clearly the idea of personal interest (cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 166 b; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 236 sq.). For the hist, pres. cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 502; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 172; Sanskrit Syntax, § 327; Brugmann, Griech. Gramm.3, § 156, and especially his paper, Berichte der Königl. sächs. Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften, 1883, pp. 169 sq.; Giles, Comp. Phil., § 547. The present tense essentially denotes what is continuous or progressive (cf. Monro, Homeric Grammar 2, pp. 62, 63) as opposed to the momentary, and that whether the verb has the sense of an action or a state. The historic use with a particle of time is Homeric, but not the simple historic present, though it is found in the earliest Latin (e.g. the epitaph of Lucius Cornelius Scipio (B. C. 298), cepit, subigit omne(m) Loucanam opsidesque abdoucit) and must be Indo-European.

The acc. of time is common, see Introd., p. 56; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 170, 171; Gaedicke, Der Accusativ im Veda, pp. 175 sq.; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-

Syntax, § 28; Hopkins, A.J. P., XXIV, 7.

 abhivyāhārṣan is an extraordinary form. Whitney, J. A. O. S., XIII, lxx, takes it as an aor. ind., but I cannot make sense of this. To take it as at first seems most natural as a mistake for a future participle ("harṣyan") is faced with the difficulty that $\sim$/hr$ gives only hariṣy- as the future in accordance with the established rule (Pāṇini, VII, 2, 70), that roots in $r$ take "intermediate i" (Max Müller, Sanskrit Grammar", \(\frac{2}{3}\) 332), and that even if harṣ were assumed, hārṣ would need explanation, though $\frac{2}{3}$ and $\frac{2}{3}$ are constantly confused in MSS. (e.g. arātṣyam and arātṣam, Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhītā, IV, p. 138°; Whitney, P. A. O. S., Oct., 1887, p. xxv; aiṣiṣyam and aiṣiṣam, Chāndogya Upaniṣad, I, 11, 2; Whitney, P. A. O. S., Oct., 1890, p. lii; niḥṣāṇa and niḥṣyāṇa, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 16; Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, p. 431, above I, 1, 5), aprākṣyaḥ and aprākṣaḥ, Chāndogya Upaniṣad, Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, xiv, n. 1; Knauer, Mānava Grhya Sūtra, p. xxvv, and occasional longs are formed, e. g. in sākṣye, Atharvaveda, II, 27, 5, for sakṣye, &c., asākṣi (Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, \(\frac{2}{3}\) 887). There remains only to take abhivyāhārṣan as an aorist participle (without of course any past sense), 'while reciting;' cf. e. g. RV., II, 4, 7: dhákṣad urvīm. But such forms are also very and that so it will be with those who know it (and become) gods. So will it come to pass. He, who thus knows this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives out all his days. Pañcālacaṇḍa 6 says, 'The union is speech.' 'By speech are the Vedas composed, by speech the metres. By speech friends are united, by speech all beings, therefore is speech all this.' Now when one repeats or speaks, breath is in speech, speech then swallows breath. When one is silent or in sleep, speech is in breath, breath then swallows speech. They swallow each other. Speech indeed is the mother, breath the son. A Rṣi says (RV., X, 119, 4), 'There is one bird, he enters the sky; he sees this whole world; with ripe mind I beheld him nigh at hand; the mother absorbs him, and he the mother.' He, who thus knows this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives out all his days.

rare. The form abhihāryate in Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad (=abhiharyati) may be explained perhaps by the cases of irregular lengthening above, and by the (Epic) use of middle terminations for active (J. A. O. S., XXV, 132), rather than as a causative passive as in the Dictt. In Atharvaveda, XVIII, 2, 58 the editions both read vidhakṣán and the pseudo-Sāyaṇa apparently so read, though he renders by ichan, but the parallel passages, RV., X, 16, 7 and Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, VI, 1, 4, have both the correct vidhakṣyán (Whitney, Translation of Atharvaveda, p. 846), and the accent proves clearly that vidhakṣdn is incorrect. Macdonell (Vedic Grammar, p. 57, n. 1) suggests that in the case of yokṣe, vidhakṣdn, sākṣe, mekṣāmi, the y has dropped phonetically; cf. J.A.O.S., XXV, 142.

šaivat tathā syāt might of course mean, 'may it ever endure' (as taken by Max Müller), but the usual use of the phrase in the Aitareya Brāhmaņa supports the rendering above adopted, e.g. II, 21, 2: ya enam tatra brūyād vācā vajrena yajamānasya prānān vyagāt prāna enam hāsyatīti šaivat tathā syāt; 22, 3; 28, 3; 5; 29, 7; IV, 7, 7; VI, 23, 13; 26, 6; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 343, n. 1 (for the construction with tīvara there mentioned, cf. Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 8). Eggeling on Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, V, 4, 3, 2 (S. B. E., XLI, 98, n. 2), now adopts 'wohl' as the regular equivalent of šaivat at any rate in the Brāhmaṇa, and see also Oertel's note on Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 54, 3. Sāyaṇa takes vidyāt as a part of sa or sa yadi is of course not a particle but the demonstrative. The cases in which Max Müller (S. B. E., XV, 110, n. 7, on Bihadāranyaka Upaniṣad, II, 4, 7) and Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, pp. 215, 216), following the St. Petersburg Dict., find sa as a particle are merely instances of an ordinary anacoluthon, and do not prove that sa was ever felt as a particle. Precisely the same idiom is common in early English, and no one there thinks of 'he' as a particle, see Kellner, English Syntax, pp. 68 sq. Correct Caland, Ueber des Rit. Sūtra des Baudhāyana, p. 46.

⁶ Pañcālacanda must mean Canda (no doubt Prākrit for Candra, ef. Atharvaveda, II, 14, I (Cánda)) of the Pañcālas, as Sāyana takes it. The Aitareya Brāhmana, VIII, 23, knows a king, Durmukha Pāñcāla.

This is the proof of the nature of speech as other than and distinct from breath. Their activities are different. Anyo'nyam is very interesting, as already it tends to become a separate word, though it still is here two words, see Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 321 sq.

This verse is more misconstrued even than usual. He enters the sky, it is said, as wind; the world he sees as prāṇa; he is seen close in the heart (Sāyaṇa). On the √rih of the RV. verse, cf. Hopkins, J. A. O. S., XXVIII, 125 sq.

Then comes the Prajapati union.9 The first half is the wife, the latter half is the husband. The union is the son. The act of union is the begetting. This union is Aditi. For Aditi is all whatever there is, father, mother, child, and begetting. A Rsi 10 says this also (RV., I, 89, 10), 'Aditi is mother, is father, is son.' He, who knows thus this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven.11 He lives out all his days.

Sthavira Śākalya says that breath is a beam,1 and that as the other beams rest on the main beam of the house, the eye, the ear, the mind, the speech, the senses, Proclaimed by Prajāpati (Sāyana), but see Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, VII, 16. Cf. Taittirīya Upanisad, I, 3, 5, and on III, 1, 2. Prajanana occurs in the concrete sense in RV., III, 29, 1 (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 305).

This verse is cited and explained in full in Jaiminiya Upanisad Brāhmana, I, 41, which is in fact parallel. For Aditi, cf. especially Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pp. 203 sq.;

Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, pp. 120 sq.

1 This Adhyāya (cf. Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, VIII, 1) deals with meditations on the several classes of letters. The construction yathā-syuh-samāhitah is noteworthy. For the verb understood cannot be considered as other than an indicative, so that the optative in the first clause must be indefinite. The same force seems to be found in V, 1, 4: pratisthāpayatiyadā-frāmyet; Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 16: tad yathā vraje pašūn avasrjyārgalesike parivyayet evam evaitaih padanusangaih sarvan kaman ubhayatah parigrhyatman dhatte, VII, 1, &c.; Aitareya Brāhmana, V, 34, 4: tam yady etesām trayānām ekamcid akāmam abhyābhavet tasyāsti Vāmadavasya stotre prāyaicittih, Manu, VIII, 3, 1; 78 (other examples in Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 349). So with yáthá, Delbrück, p. 350; with yátra, &c., ibid., p. 351. So in kṛtakṛtyāḥ syuḥ in Sāyaṇa's introductions to the RV., curiously misunderstood by Peterson (Rgveda Handbook, p. 126). The use differs distinctly from but is easily derived from the use of the opt. with either an opt. (potential) (cf. the use in Avestan, Jackson, P. A. O. S., April, 1896, p. 187; Delbrück, Vergl. Synt., II, 372) or an opt. (imperative) in the apodosis, since in either of these cases the future sense is primarily present, whereas when an indic. forms the apodosis the sense is clearly merely indefinite. The use, especially as here in sentence, is common in Homer, where the subj. with primary and the opt. with secondary tenses have both this sense (cf. Monro, Homeric Grammar 2, pp. 258 sq., 269 sq.), is found in the subj. in early Latin prose as well as verse in which Greek imitation is always possible (e.g. Cato Maior, de Mor., ingenium prope uti ferrum est: si exerceas conteritur, nisi exerceas rubiginem contrahit), in early English (Kellner, English Syntax, p. 239), &c.

The use of the pass, part, with or without copula (Introd., pp. 64, 65) is significant. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, pp. 394, 395), followed by Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 176), regards the use as corresponding both to imperf. and aor., but while of course it is dangerous to dogmatize on matters which ultimately depend on a delicate analysis of a language so remote as Vedic Sanskrit, it seems to me that there is a very clear distinction between (1) the aor., the tense of which has just happened; (2) the imperf., the tense of narration; the body, the whole self, rests on this breath. 'Of this self the truth is like the sibilants, the bones the mutes, the marrow the vowels, and flesh and blood, the fourth part, the semi-vowels, so says Hrasva Māṇḍūkeya. We have, however, learned that the number was three. Of those three, bones, marrow, and joints, there are three hundred and sixty (parts) on this side and on that side. These make up seven hundred and twenty. Seven hundred and twenty are the days and nights of the year. This self then, which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech, is like the days in number. He, who knows thus this self, which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech, as like the days, obtains union, likeness, and nearness to the days, becomes rich in sons and cattle, and lives out all his days.

2. Then comes Kauntharavya. There are three hundred and sixty syllables, three hundred and sixty sibilants, three hundred and sixty unions. What we have called syllables are the days; what we have called sibilants are the nights; what we have called unions are the junctions of the nights and days. So far as regards and (3) these forms with participles which express a completed action whose results persist into the present. Of course many actions can be regarded from either point of view and be differently described, but that is not to say that the effect is not different when different forms are used. To take some of Delbrück's instances, RV., I, 81, 5: ná tváváň Indra káš caná ná jätó ná janisyate, the sense is not either 'was born' (imperf.) or 'has just been born' (aor.), but 'exists, having been born', in Taittirīya Samhitā, II, 6, 9, 3: tê deva aviduh prácyuto vai párastát sómó 'tha no nágachati gandharvá vai páry amosisur íti, which Delbrück gives as a case of the part, corresponding to an aor., the sense is clearly different between the continuing absence of the Soma and the one definite past act of the Gandharvas in stealing it. The real tendency of the Mantra and Brahmana is to assimilate the part. to a present, though, as is the case with all the expressions of past time in the Mantras, occasionally it may have a narrative sense (e.g. RV., III, 48, 22: Přímyā dugdhām sakŕt páyak). The present sense-yet with the past action-is very clearly seen in cases like Brhaddevatā, VIII, 47: prathamāyām rci stutāh tardharce dyaus ca bhūmis ca Asvinau cottare tatah II It is not stuyante, for the actual praising is over (astaut is regularly used of the Rsi), and yet it does not mean ' were praised'.

2 Max Müller takes anyat as 'the rest', but it rather means, the other, the fourth.

This view is apparently Sākalya's (Sāyaṇa), the first three being his, to which Māṇḍūkeya adds a fourth. The threefold view, with ghoṣa for svara, vyañjana for sparia, is found in II, 2, 4, where the difference of terms denotes a difference in dates.

4 Anandatīrtha explains all this of Visnu, as usual.

5 The symbolism of the year is common in all religions, cf., e.g., Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, IV, 284, 285.

the gods. Now as regards the self. The syllables which we have explained with reference to the gods are with reference to the self bones; the sibilants which we have explained with reference to the gods are with reference to the self marrow; the marrow is indeed the real breath, for it is seed, and without breath seed is not effused. Or if it is effused without breath, it will decay and will not produce. The unions which we have explained with reference to the gods are with reference to the self joints. Of these three, bones, marrow, and joints, there are five hundred and forty parts on this side and on that. They make one thousand and eighty, and one thousand and eighty are the rays of the sun. They make the brhati verses and this day. Thus the self which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech is like the syllables in number. He, who knows thus this self, which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech, as like the syllables, obtains union, likeness, and nearness to the syllables, becomes rich in sons and cattle, and lives out all his days.

3. Bādhva¹ says, 'There are four persons, the person of the body, the person of the metres, the person of the Veda, and the great person. That which we have called the person of the body is the corporeal self. Its essence is the incorporeal conscious self. That which we have called the person of the metres is the collection of letters. Its essence is the letter 'a'.² That which we have called the person of the Veda is that by which one knows the Vedas, Rgveda, Yajurveda, and Sāmaveda. Its essence is the Brahman priest. Therefore should one choose a Brahman priest who is full of brahman and can discern flaws

It is curious, as S points out, that no comment is made on the similar passage in III, 2, 1. For Kauntha°, cf. the Dhātupāṭha root kunth which Franke (Vienna Orient. Journ., VIII, 323) compares with Greek κυλλότ, Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 170. The name seems not to occur elsewhere, except in the parallel passage in Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, VIII, 2.

² The words inserted by B are quite out of place here, and show how little that MS. can be relied upon. For majjāām, cf. Atharvaveda, II, 12, 7; Roth, Z. D. M. G., XLVIII, 102. For the construction, cf. Baudhāyana Dharma Sūtra, II, 17, 11, 37; J. R. A. S., 1909: contra Böhtlingk, Sāchs. Ber., 1892, p. 197.

Visnu according to Anandatirtha, who has considerable difficulty in working out the details of his interpretation here.

² Cf. II, 3, 6. The precision in the use of the agrist is to be noted, cf. Introd., p. 60.

in the sacrifice. That which we have called the great person is the year which causes some things to fall together and others to grow up. Its essence is the sun. Let one know that the incorporeal conscious self and the sun are the same. Therefore the sun appears to each and every man. A Rsi says (RV., I, 115, 1), The bright face of the gods hath arisen, the eye of Mitra, Varuṇa, and Agni.

the Atharvaveda) as the Atharvan texts always try to make out (see Bloomfield, S. B. E., XLVI, lviii sq.; Atharvaveda, pp. 32 sq.; Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, pp. 193 sq.). Kurvīta yo-palyet is quite a clear instance of a clause of characteristic, 'such a priest as can see.' In these cases the force is slightly different from two other senses of the same origin, purpose, and result. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, p. 339) states that clauses of purpose cannot be found in prose, but quotes Atharvaveda, VIII, 10, 9: iyám evá tád veda yád ubháya upajívema; Satapatha Brāhmaņa, XI, 5, 1, 13: ná vái sắ manusyèsv Agnér yajñíyā tanûr asti yayestvāsmåkam ékah syād íti, which resemble in essentials this passage. The usage is perhaps more clearly developed in Latina, but it is wrong to say (as do Allen and Greenough, Latin Grammar, p. 343) that the clause of characteristic is a development peculiar to Latin, and it is doubtful whether the use is to be traced to a definitely conditional origin and not rather derived directly from the opt, meaning as a weak future (Goodwin, Greek Moods and Tenses, pp. 376 sq.) or as expressing supposition (cf. Monro, Homeric Grammara, pp. 290 sq., and p. 276, 'The opt. with KEV is especially common after a principal Clause of negative meaning (in which case the consequence is necessarily matter of mere supposition): as-II. 5, 192 ίπποι δ' οὐ παρέασι καὶ άρματα τῶν κ' ἐπιβαίην, &c. The pure opt. occurs in II. 22, 348: οὐκ ἔσθ' δε . . . ἀπαλάλκοι.' Το derive such a sense from an opt, of wish (Delbrück's old theory, Synt. Forsch., I, 13, modified in Synt. Forsch., IV, 115, Altindische Syntax, p. 302) seems quite impossible. The use as a mild imperative is easily derived from a weak future or supposition, and the use as an interrogative follows naturally (cf. Introd., pp. 62, 63). For the indefinite use, cf. III, 2, 1, n. 1, and Brhadaranyaka Upanisad, I, 4, 17; IV, 3, 32, &c.

For brahmistham (which as brahmistha occurs already in the Taittiriya Samhita), cf.

Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 468 e. The formation is of course obviously secondary.

* Aikyā bhāvayan is a strange phrase, for if aikyā is what it seems to be, an instrumental in -ā, then this comparatively late word is found in a remarkable form, though not at all impossible, cf. madhyā (Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 327 c), or it may be a dative in -ā (for this cf. Latin ā, Lindsay, Latin Language, p. 386, and see Aufrecht, Festgruss an Böhtlingk, pp. 1 sq.; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 59; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 280; Pischel and Geldner, Vedische Studien, I, 61; Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 28). Whitney (Sanskrit Grammar, § 1091) takes the word as parallel to formations like akkhalīkṣṭtya (or akhkh², RV.), masmasā kuru (Vājasaneyi and Taittirīya Samhitās), &c., and compares Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (I, 14, see Aufrecht, p. 430) anṛnākartoḥ; Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, śūlā kuryāt (roast on a spit). Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 194, takes the same view with some doubt.

This is of course the most common doctrine in the Upanisads. Sāyaṇa quotes for the last part the Taittirīya passage (which I have not so far traced): asāv ādityaḥ sarvāḥ prajāḥ pratyudaṇn udeti tasmāt sarva eva manyante mām pratyudagād iti l On this passage of the RV., cf. Whitney, Translation of Atharvaveda, p. 725 (on XIII, 2, 38); Deussen, Geschichte, I, i, 213. Sāyaṇa's commentary on it in Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, I, 7, 6, and II, 13, 1 differs completely from his comm. here and can hardly be by the same hand.

^{*} Compare, e.g., Caesar, Bell. Civ., ii, 15 unde agger comportari posset, nihil erat reliquum; Cicero, ad Fam., v. 12 neque enim tu is es, qui nescias. Cf. Ṣaḍviṃśa Brāhmaṇa, II, 10; Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā, II, 1, 3.

It hath filled heaven and earth and the sky. The sun is the self of all that stands and moves.' This I regard as the regular 6 Samhitā as composed, thus says Bādhva. For the Bahvrcas consider him in the great hymn, the Adhvaryus in the fire, the Chandogas in the Mahāvrata rite. They see him in this earth, in heaven, in the air, in the ether, in the waters, in plants, in trees, in the moon, in the constellations, in all beings. Him they call brahman. The self which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech, is like the year in number. He,7 who recites to another the self, which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech, and is like the year,

4. To him the Vedas yield no milk; he has no part in what his teacher has taught him. He knows not the path of virtue. A Rsi says this also (RV., X, 71, 6), 'He who forsakes the friend who knows his friends,1 in speech he has no part. What he hears, he hears in vain, he knows not the path of virtue.' This means that he has no part in what he has studied and that he does not know the path of virtue. So a man who knows this should not 2 lay the fire for another, nor sing the Samans of the Mahavrata for another, nor recite the Sastras of that day for another. Only 5 may he recite for a father or a teacher, for that is done for oneself. We have said 4 that this incorporeal conscious self and that sun are one and the same. Where these two are separated,5 the sun is seen like the moon,6 its rays do not manifest themselves,

All the above must be Bādhva's view, just as III, 2, 2 gave Kauntharavya's views. The following alludes to the fact that the Adhvaryu's mystic speculations centre in the Agnicayana, cf. Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, xxiv.

The section runs on in a way that cannot be early. V, I, I and 2 is precisely similar, and the present section division must remain of doubtful (though early) date. The divisions of the Śāńkhāyana are similarly illogical. For the loc., cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 205.

Sāyana points out that Taittirīya Aranyaka, I, 3; II, 15, reads in this verse sakhividam, a point overlooked in Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 700b. Sayana's reference does tend to show that he also wrote a Taittiriya Āranyaka commentary, which on other grounds might be deemed very doubtful (cf. III, 2, 3, n. 5).

2 i.e. act as Adhvaryu, Udgātr or Hotr priest. It is impossible to square the total prohibition here with V, I, 5, which (see n. 5) contemplates a breach of the rule, but it agrees with the opinion of 'some' (eke) in V, 3, 3, see n. I on that passage.

A frequent exception. Cf. V, 3, 3, n. 1.

4 III, 2, 3. The relevance of this passage is not obvious. Sayana takes it as a reflexion induced by the idea of the attainment of brahman in the brief space of life, whence omens as to the duration of life are inserted. The connexion of sun and self is elsewhere used to give omens of death. In Brhadaranyaka Upanisad, V, 5, 2, the sun appears as white only to the man about to die. The parallel passages in the Sankhayana are VIII, 7, and XI, 3; 4.

5 This is not very logical, as there is no reason why the separation of the two should be a sign of death. The rest of the signs are clearly old folklore ideas pressed into service. For the extensive literature on Vedic superstitions, see Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, pp. 167 sq., 183-185; Hatfield, Ausanasādbhutāni, J.A.O.S., XV, 208, &c.; Bloomfield, the sky is red like madder, the wind is not retained, his head smells like a raven's nest, and a man should know that his self is gone and that he will not have long to live. Let him do then whatever he considers must be done, and recite seven verses beginning, 'What is near, what is far' (RV, IX, 67, 21-27), the single verse, 'Of the ancient seed' (RV, VIII, 6, 30), six verses beginning, 'Where purifying Brahman' (RV, IX, 113, 6-11), and the single verse, 'We from the darkness' (RV, I, 50, 10). Next when the sun is seen pierced, and looks like the nave of a cart-wheel, or he sees his shadow pierced, let him know that this is so. Next when he sees himself in a mirror or in the water with a crooked head or without a head, or when his pupils are seen inverted or crooked, let him know that this is so. Next let him cover his eyes and look; then threads are seen as if falling together. If he sees them not, let him

Atharvaveda, pp. 82 sq.; Kauśika Sūtra, XIII, and Adbhuta Brāhmaņa; Aufrecht's idea (Z. D. M. G., XXXIII, 573) that the passage is not in place is disproved by the parallel in the Śańkhāvana, VIII, 6 and 7; XI, 3 and 4.

i.e. its rays are pale and cold. Kākakulāyagandhikam is probably an adj. as a quasi-pred. For examples, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 78, 79. Kulāya is a curious word: in Mānava Grhya Sūtra, II, 14, 23, Knauer takes it (wrongly, I think) as = stall (cf. p. 55) of his edit.).

Sanskrit-Syntax, § 281. The form in anīya is rare in the Brāhmaṇas, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 400, 401; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 965. The use of man with participles of all sorts is curious, cf. the use with the gerund, Whitney, § 994 e; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 223; with the pres. part., III, 1, 4. With the past part., even in Bṛhaddevatā, e.g. VII, 125.

The reading of the text is supported by Sāyana and also by Ānandatīrtha and is certain. For water divination, cf. Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, IV, 230. For adarsa (also in the Brhadāranyaka and Katha Upanişads), cf. Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, xxiv.

Sāyaṇa explains the operation thus, cakṣuṣī nimīlya netrasyāpāngam avaṣṭabhya netrasamīpam paṣyet; Ānandatīrtha has, angulyā akṣimūlam avaṣṭabhya. The baṭarakāni (barāṭakān or varāṭakan in Sānkhāyana) are, Sāyaṇa says, vartulāni sūkṣmāni fuklavarnāni kesonḍrakasabdābhidheyāni, and he takes sampatantīva as samyan netrān nirgachantīva. This is hardly possible. For varāṭakān, cf. Śrīharṣa, Khaṇḍanakhanḍakhādya, p. 239, cited by Jacob, Laukikanyāyāñjali, p. 1. The construction is difficult, as the yathā is not properly in place. It may be that yathā goes with baṭarakāni and iva qualifies only sampatanti, and the sense is, things are seen like, &c., but it is also possible that tad yathā is practically = then it is that. This use is of course common in later Sanskrit, e.g. Bāṇa, Kādambarī (p. 337, 12, ed. Peterson; p. 600, ed. Nirnaya Sāgara): āgameṣu sarveṣu eva purāṇarāmāyaṇabhāratādiṣu samyag anekaprakārāḥ iāpavṛttāḥ tad yathā, &c. Cf. the Pāli use of seyyathā. Bṭhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 3, 42 sq. has a series of tad yathā; so ibid., IV, 4, 4, 5, &c.

Cases of conditional sentences without particles are of course very frequent in Vedic as know that this is so. Next let him cover his ears and listen, then there is a sound as of a burning fire or of a chariot. If he does not hear that sound, let him know that this is so. Next when the fire appears blue like the neck of a peacock, or when he sees lightning in a cloudless sky, or no lightning in a cloudy sky, or in a great cloud sees bright rays as it were, let him know that it is so. Next when he sees the ground as though burning, let him know that this is so. So far as regards the visible signs. Then come the dreams. He sees a black man with black teeth, he kills him; a boar kills him; a monkey jumps on him; the wind carries him swiftly along; having swallowed gold he spits it out; he eats honey; he chews stalks; he carries a single 18 lotus; in other languages. Cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 284; Sanskrit Syntax, § 487; Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmana, p. 431; my note, J. R. A. S., 1909.

The Maitreya Upanisad (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, xlvi) has a passage which may be reminiscent of this text: agnir vaiśvānaro . . . tasyaisa ghoso bhavati yam (wrong reading ? yad) etat karnāv apidhāya śrnoti sa yadotkramisyan bhavati nainam ghosam śrnoti.

For upabdi, infra, which denotes literally the noise of going and is particularly in place here, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 9, 3; Jaiminīya Brāhmaṇa, I, 253; Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 37, 3, with Oertel's note; RV., I, 74, 7, with Oldenberg's note (S. B. E., XLVI, 94); Schmidt, K. Z., XXV, 55. Scheftelowitz (Zur Stammbildung in den indo-germanischen Sprachen, § 9) compares RV., IX, 77, 4: urubjá, which he considers as going back to IG. pago, cf. Greek πηγή. The construction above driyate and abhikhyāyeta in parallel uses, and below driyate-paiyen-na paiyenpasyeta, are decidedly curious (cf. Introd., p. 63). The temptation to amend to driveta is very strong, and on the whole I incline to think that it would be dangerous to insist on these examples. The case of upekseta-driyante differs, for the two verbs are not parallel. The first is an instruction, the second expresses categorically the result (and drsyante may have helped to bring about the incorrect drivate). In III, 1, 4, where upavadet and aha occur, the aha is very strange, and one would like to take saknosīty āha - hāsyatīty as two sentences both dependent on bruyat. There is, however, the real difficulty that a-\hat{a}-\hat{ha} would be a strange combination, and the division of the sentences is also curious, though no more curious than the aha. I suspect some corruption of the text. Sayana renders differently. He takes the whole as one Mantra and supplies bhavan as a subject for aha, and so in the next sentence he interpolates bhavan aha in sense. In the numerous passages in the Aitareya Brahmana which are more or less parallel (see the reff. cited in III, 1, 6, n. 5), no such aka occurs, and hāsyati has no prefix. But probably ā-hāsyati must go together. Āha might, of course, be taken as a first person and made part of the quotation (cf. Speijer, § 178), but this is not likely, and for the indef. opt., cf. III, 2, 1, n. I.

n' Mayūragrīvāḥ is perhaps intended by the reading of B, mayūragrīvā ameghe (but Śāṅkhāyana has mayūragrīvā when it can be °vāḥ); and undoubtedly grīvāḥ is the form alone recognized by Pāṇini and usual in the earlier literature, J. R. A. S., 1906, pp. 916-919. Probably the reading was originally mayūragrīvāmeghe by an incorrect Sandhi for mayūragrīvāḥ. For similar irregular Sandhi, cf. Bühler, S. B. E., II, xli (from Āpastamba); Macdonell, Bṛhaddevatā, I, xxvii; and V, 3, 2, n. 9; III, 1, 3, n. 2. For the next portent, cf. Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 112.

 Red' in colour (Sāyaṇa); for red as unlucky, cf. Z. D. M. G., XL, 117.

he drives with a team of asses and ¹⁴ boars; wearing a wreath of red flowers, he drives a black cow with a black calf towards the south. ¹⁵ If he sees any of these, he should fast and cook a pot of milk, and offer it, reciting a verse of the Rātrī hymn (RV., X, 127, 16) to each oblation, and having fed the Brahmins with other food, ¹⁶ himself eat the oblation. Let him know that the person within all beings who is not heard, ¹⁷ not reached, not thought, not subdued, not seen, not understood, not classified, but who hears, thinks, sees, classifies, sounds, understands, and knows is his own self. ¹⁸

5. Now comes this Upanisad of the whole speech. All these indeed are Upanisads of the whole speech, but this they so call. The mutes are the earth, the sibilants the sky, the vowels heaven. The mutes are fire, the sibilants air, the vowels the sun. The mutes are the Rgveda, the sibilants the Yajurveda, the vowels the Sāmaveda. The mutes are the eye, the sibilants the ear, the vowels the mind. The mutes are the up-breathing, the sibilants the downbreathing, the vowels the back-breathing. Then comes this divine lute. The

The ten dreams are so taken by the commentator and by Max Müller whose note (p. 262) is apparently wrong. Etetām kimcid is noteworthy. The neut. of the pronoun is practically nominal and is to be compared with the neut. in predication, III, 1, 2, n. 4. So in Latin, e. g. Horace, Sat., i, 7: Lydorum quicquid. The parallel passage in the Sänkhäyana has corrected the original kimcid of the MS., but the correspondence is conclusive.

This is the most advanced point in the definition of the Atman arrived at in the Aranyaka. The Atman is not object, but subject only—as Săyana says, âtmă vişayo na bhavati vişayî tu bhavaty eva. This occurs frequently later and with it the doctrine that the self cannot be known. Săyana cites the antaryamibrāhmana, Brhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, III, 7, 13, the aktarabrāhmana, ibid., III, 8, 11; the Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, I, 8; the Prašna Upaniṣad, IV, 6; and the Nṛṣimbottaratāpanīya Upaniṣad, II. See also Deussen, Philosophie der Upaniṣhads, pp. 133 sq.; E.T., pp. 147 sq. Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmana, IV, 18, is devoted to this topic (= Kena Upaniṣad).

i. e. the human body. This metaphor explains Prasna Upanisad, II, 2, where vāṇa (V, 1, 4) is equated to farīra, which Max Müller (S. B. E., XV, 274, n. 3) finds unintelligible. Connected with Visnu is Ānandatīrtha's explanation of the word daivī. Ambhana is a curious word. I think it is from anu + √bhan (as in Class. Sansk. for √bhan, Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 194). Compare ambara for anu + vara and jāmbila for jānu + bila (ibid., 59). The omission before v (common) led to omission before b and sporadically before bh. The meaning would be 'sounding-board' (?). Cf. v. Schroeder, Ind. Lit., p. 755.

human lute is an imitation of it. As there is a head of this, so there is a head of that; as there is a stomach of this, so there is a cavity of that; as this has a tongue, so that has a tongue; as this has fingers,² so that has strings; as this has vowels, so that has tones; as this has consonants, so that has touches; as this is endowed with sounds and firmly strung, so that is endowed with sounds and firmly strung; as this is covered with a hairy skin, so that is covered with a hairy skin. For in former times they covered lutes with a hairy skin. He, who knows this divine lute, is heard when he speaks, his fame fills the earth, and wherever they ^a speak Aryan tongues, there is he known. Then comes the essence of speech. When a man reciting ^a or speaking at an assembly gives not pleasure, let him recite this verse, ^a May the she-ichneumon, that rules all speech, who is covered as it were ^b by the lips, surrounded by teeth, the thunderbolt, cause me to speak well here. This is the essence of speech.

² The words angulayah and tantrayah seem to have been transposed in the original; they are in correct order in Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, VIII, 7. Somewhat analogous is the transposition of tanā jarāyu in Satapatha Brāhmana, VI, 6, 2, 15, on which see Eggeling's note (S. B. E., XLVI, 255). Cf. also Brhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, III, 1, 4 with Max Müller's note (S. B. E., XV, 122), and my Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, p. 55, n. 3.

³ The expression āryā vācah was not understood by the commentators (and in the Sāhkhāyana Āraņyaka, VIII, 9, we find that it has become āryā vāg vadati), who take āryāh as nominative and render it vedajāstrapāram gatāh. This is a clear sign of considerable antiquity, and the expression may also be cited as an early piece of evidence for the existence of several dialects of the early Indian language, which we know must have existed; see I, 5, 2, n. 19; Oertel, A.J.P., XX, 447 on daivī, and Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, XIV, 5. For the word ārya, cf. Zimmer, Altindisches Leben, p. 214; Pischel, Z.D. M. G., XL, 125; Geldner (Vedische Studien, III, 96, 97) insists that arya cannot mean 'the Aryan' which is represented by ārya. Oldenberg (see index to S. B. E., XLVI) still adopts the equation Ārya = Aryan.

Sāyana distinguishes between reciting at a conclave of priests, and speaking in a prince's hall. Virurucuseta is quite impossible as a form, and it is an easy error in view of the preceding syllables, each having u. The middle of the opt. of the desiderative is not common. Cf.

⁵ Sāyaṇa gives an alternative rendering, na = not, and pavih = clear, the subject being the speaker's defective speech. Ānandatīrtha gives only the explanation as na = iva. The verse in B occurs among the Sānti verses of the so-called third Adhyāya. For the metaphor, cf. Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, III, 19. In the version in the Ānandāṣrama ed., p. 2, nakulī is printed as a separate word. But nakulī can only mean a female ichneumon, and nakulīdantaih is a phrase for which no parallel seems readily forthcoming. Sāyaṇa gives vajravaddhanī-bhūtair antarālachidrarahitair which does not help. In any case to join kulīdantaih makes a curious though not unparalleled metre in an early verse such as this must be, and if a nom could be found in kulī the run of the verse would be much improved. The rendering of the text by Max Müller 'surrounded by birth, as if by spears' is purely conjectural, and I suspect the tradition. The parallel passages are of little use. The Sāma Mantra Brāhmaṇa, I, 7, 15, has oṣṭhāpidhānā nakulī dantaparimitah pavih, while the Gobhila Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 4, 29, gives oṣṭhāpidhānā nakulī only. Oldenberg (S. B. E., XXX, 84) renders 'the she-ichneumon, covered by the lips', as does Knauer in his translation. If this is to be made into sense, it must be taken that the she-ichneumon is a synonym for what is very piercing: the nearest approximation to this idea is the passage in Atharvaveda, VI, 139, 5 (cited in Zimmer, Altindisches Leben, p. 86), which refers to the ichneumon's (m.) skill in chopping up and then restoring his work.

6. Now Kṛṣṇahārita¹ proclaims this Brāhmaṇa² as it were regarding speech to him.³ Prajāpati, the year,⁴ after creating creatures, burst. He put himself together by the metres. Because he put himself together by means of the metres, therefore is it the Saṃhitā. Of that Saṃhitā the letter n is the strength, the letter n the breath, the self. He who knows the verses in the Saṃhitā and⁵ the letters n and n, he knows the Saṃhitā with its breath and its strength. Let him know that this is lifegiving.⁶ If he is in doubt n whether to say it with an n or without an n, let him say it with an n. If he is in doubt whether to say it with an n or without an n, let him say it with an n. Hrasva Māṇḍūkeya says, 'If we repeat the verses according to the Saṃhitā, and if we say the teaching n of

A son of Harita, who was dark in colour (Sāyaṇa), cf. Hiranyadant Vaida, II, 1, 5. A Kumāra Hārita (so, not Hārīta) appears în Bṛhadāranyaka Upaniṣad, II, 6, 3; IV, 6, 3; VI, 4, 4. Weber (Indian Literature, p. 50) reads Hārīta, and the lawyer is always so called (ibid., p. 269), even in Āpastamba Dharma Sūtra, I, 10, 29, 12; 16. On the other hand Vārttika 8 on Pāṇini, I, 1, 73, recognizes Hāritakāta, and Pāṇini, IV, 1, 100, Hāritāyana as names, where Hārita appears. Weber's Hārīta here is therefore probably wrong, and Šāńkhāyana Āranyaka, VIII, 11, has kṛtsnahārita.

² Brāhmaņa here means secret doctrine like Upaniṣad. Iva seems to be used to indicate the somewhat unusual sense; the Śāṅkhāyana version has eva; cf. I, 1, 2, n. 3; β. R. A. S., 1908, p. 1193, n. 1. Sāyaṇa in his commentary repeatedly has phrases like antaryāmibrāhmaṇa, the secret doctrine of the antaryāmin, see III, 2, 4, n. 18, and cf. the name of Bihadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 4 (puruṣavidhabrāhmaṇa), Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 25, and the common tasyoktaṃ brāhmaṇam.

3 To his pupil or son (Ānandatīrtha and Sāyaņa).

* The reading of B, samvatsaram (see Introd., p. 3), must be a correction to improve the sense. But it could never have been corrupted into samvatsarah. Prajāpati as the year is a Brāhmaņic commonplace (for its deeper significance, see Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, xx sq.), e.g. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, II, 17, 2; VI, 19, 7; Maitrāyaṇī Samhitā, I, 10, 8; Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, VI, 15; Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 1, &c. The phrase Prajāpatih prajāh srṣṭwā vyasraṃsata is frequent in Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, VI-X, not in I-V; Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 268; and for a similar case cf. II, 4, 3, n. 14. One might translate, 'he is the year.' Cf., however, Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 1, 1, 1 and 2. The confusion of vyasraṃsadā and sata is another example of the confusion of surd and sonant so common in Śaradā MSS. Cf. Lanman in Whitney's Translation of the Atharvaveda, pp. 57, 1045; J. Hertel, Tantrākhyāyikā, p. xvi; Roth, Z. D. M. G., XLVIII, 106-111.

5 This is the literal rendering. Sāyana takes it, 'Who recites the verses thinking of the n and s which accompany the Samhitä.'

To the Samhitā (Sāyaņa), or perhaps to the reciter, if not to both.

7 Sāyana takes it, 'If a pupil ask his teacher,' but this is unnecessary. The question is, he says, whether the reflection on the Samhitā is to take the differences of n and s into account or not.

* Sāyana refers this to Śūravīra's doctrine, III, 1, 1. For upāptau, cf. Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XIV, 5; Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 6, where Dr. Friedländer renders 'hinreichend, genilgend'.

Māṇḍūkeya, then the letters n and s are obtained for us.' Sthavira Śākalya' says, 'If we repeat the verses according to the Saṃhitā, and if we say the teaching of Māṇḍūkeya, then the letters n and s are obtained for us.' Then the seers, the Kāvaṣeyas, knowing this, 'say, 'To what end shall we repeat the Veda, to what end shall we sacrifice? For we sacrifice breath in speech, 'I or in breath speech. For what is the beginning, that is the end.' These Saṃhitās let no one 12 tell to one who is not a resident pupil, who has not been with the teacher for one year, and who is not himself to become a teacher. Thus say the teachers. 13

The sayings are identical, and apparently this is intended to denote that the doctrine received universal acceptance. The passage may indicate (cf. also Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, IV, 10, 3, where Śākalya is younger apparently than Māṇdūkeya) that the Māṇdūkeya Śākhā had

10 This is a clear proof that the holders of the Aranyaka doctrine rejected sacrifices or recitations as means of knowledge, cf. Brhadāranyaka Upanisad, I, 5, 23; Kausītaki Upanisad, II, 5; Chandogya Upanisad, V, 11-24; Taittiriya Upanisad, II, 5; Deussen, Phil. d. Upanishads, p. 63. A Tura Kāvaseya purohita of Janamejaya occurs in Khila, I, 9, 6, and in-as already noted by Colebrooke, Essays, I, 72; see Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XLII, 239 sq.—the Aitareya Brāhmana, IV, 27; VII, 39; VIII, 21. For the spelling cf. Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, Addenda, p. 190; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 239. Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 199) uses the story of Kavaşa as the son of a non-Brahmin (Aitareya Brāhmaņa, II, 19) as a piece of evidence in favour of the theory of the attribution to the Ksatriyas of philosophic speculation over the origin of the doctrine of transmigration (cf. Introd., pp. 50, 51; Garbe, Beiträge zur indischen Kulturgeschichte, pp. 1 sq.). He argues that the Brahmins merely accepted and made these doctrines their own by adopting them along with the doctrine of the four Asramas. This all seems very doubtful. That among the priests none should rise superior to the sacrificial cultus is contrary to all religious history. That hermits, &c., were originally not of the priestly caste is a mere theory and not a probable one. Winternitz' view leads him (p. 202, n. 1) to adopt the improbable theory of Aranyaka as a text to be studied by Vānaprasthas, for which he quotes the (late) Āruņeya Upaniṣad (Deussen, Sechzig Upanishads, p. 693) and Rāmānuja (Thibaut, S. B. E., XLVIII, 645). Cf. Introd., p. 16. It must always be remembered that the Brāhmanas contain already in germ all the ideas which make up the fundamental doctrine of the Upanisads; even the doctrine of transmigration is presaged in the doctrine of repeated deaths in the other world. It is impossible to explain why the Brahmins became so completely the bearers of the atman doctrine if it was not theirs ex initio. Professor Macdonell has told me that he concurs in this view, which thus gains great weight, and see my notes, J. R. A. S., 1908, pp. 838, 868, 1142. The Kavaseyas are cited by Śankara on Śvetāśvatara Upanisad (ed. Röer, p. 257) as opposed to works, Weber, Ind. Stud., II, 418.

11 Cf. Jaiminīya Upanişad Brāhmana, I, 2, 2, 6.

12 Cf. V, 3, 3; Weber, Indian Literature, p. 49, n. 35.

¹³ Mahidāsa, &c. (Ānandatīrtha). Cf. I, 1, 1, n. 5; II, 3, 5, n. 4. Probably the plural is only maiestatis.

ARANYAKA IV

AŚVALĀYANA (Śrauta Sūtra, VII, 12, 10) gives the following account of the purpose of the Mahānāmnī verses. On the fifth day of the pṛṣṭhya six day ceremony, at the midday pressing of the Soma, corresponding to the Niṣkevalya Śastra, the Udgātṛs sing sometimes the Śākvara Sāman as one of the Pṛṣṭha Stotras,¹ and then² use the Mahānāmnī verses as the basis of the Sāman. These number nine, but for the purposes of the Sāman they are made into three, each consisting of three verses. These verses are recited adhyardhakāram, that is, first one and a half verses are recited, then comes a pause, then the remaining one and a half, followed by the syllable om. Then are recited the nine purīṣa-padāni, additional verses. These may either be recited simply straight on as they stand in the text, or the first five may be made into two sets of five syllables each, thus:

Evā hi eva i evā hi Agnā 3u i the hi being taken without Sandhi, the last four purīṣapadāni being repeated without a pause in the middle. See also Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, X, 6, 10, and comm.

The Mahānāmnī verses occur in the Āraṇya Saṃhitā, and in the Naigeya Śākhā at the end of the Pūrvārcika of the Sāmaveda, and as one of the Khilas of the Rgveda, see Peterson, Second Report, p. 97, Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, pp. 134-136. They are referred to in the Brhaddevatā, VIII, 100, Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, X, 6, 10, Rgvidhāna, IV, 25, and Śāṅkhāyana Grhya Sūtra, II, 11, 12, &c. From these sources, and from Baudhāyana, cited in Oldenberg, Prolegomena, p. 509, n., it appears that they followed directly upon the verse lac chaṃ yor, which, according to the Śāṅkhāyana Grhya Sūtra, IV, 5, 9, is the end of the Rgveda Saṃhitā (in the Bāṣkala recension), and, according to Nārāyaṇa on Āśvalāyana Grhya Sūtra, III, 5, 9, is the end of the Bāṣkala recension. It is not, however, quite clear what this means, since lac chaṃ yor occurs as the last verse of two Khilas, V, 1 and 3, in Scheftelowitz's edition, viz. the saṃjñānam and prādhvarāṇām Khilas, and the three Khilas, V, 1-3, the second being the nairhaslyam, have 5+3+7=15 verses. The view of

Oldenberg, who had not the evidence of the MS, of the Khilas before him. was (Prolegomena, p. 502) that the Samhita ended with the first lac cham yor, i.e. with Khila, V, I, and Scheftelowitz (pp. 11, 132) holds that this is correct. Oldenberg, however, held (p. 509) that the Mahānāmnī verses followed directly after tac cham yor, and (p. 501) expressed the view that the following ten verses were some of them modern. But of the direct evidence for the immediate sequence of the Mahānāmnī verses, cited by Oldenberg, the Rgvidhāna alone fully bears him out, for the Khila MS. has the Mahānāmnī verses after the prādhvarānām Khila, and this is probably the meaning of Brhaddevatā, VIII, 94. as interpreted by Prof. Macdonell. It is an easy conjecture that the Rgvidhana, which has other coincidences with the Brhaddevatā 6, followed that work, but misunderstood the word caturtham, which most probably must mean 'the fourth of the hymns after X, 190'. This fact weakens greatly the force of Oldenberg's argument from the modern character of the last ten verses, and in point of fact it is difficult to deny that the verse lac cham yor is modern in appearance, and that it need not be separated in time from the last seven verses. For the second tac cham yor being the end of the Samhitā in the Bāṣkala recension, we have the clear evidence of the commentator on the Caranavyūha,6 who actually cites the verses. Dr. Scheftelowitz considers that the commentator is untrustworthy, and later than Sayana, but this appears very doubtful. We know, he argues, that the commentator explains the eight extra hymns attributed to the Bāşkala Śākhā by the Anuvākānukramanī as being seven of the Vālakhilyas and the samjñānam hymn of fifteen verses, but the number should be ten, as the samjñānam hymn is really composed of three hymns. But it is difficult to maintain that it is impossible that the fifteen verses, despite their difference of contents, were not regarded in early days as one hymn, for several of the Rgvedic hymns are notoriously patchwork, and this applies more strongly still to later Samhitās.

Much more important is the question of their antiquity. Oldenberg makes the Mahānāmnī verses an exception to his general view, that the Khilas are on the whole of later origin, and holds that they are coeval with the Rgveda, and were merely omitted because of some reason of ritual teaching from the ten Maṇḍalas. Dr. Scheftelowitz, who disputes Oldenberg's general position, and accepts Hillebrandt's theory of the purer ritual tradition, assigns the verses (p. 3) to the end of the Rgvedic period. Further, Oldenberg has suggested that the verses are alluded to as the Sakvari verses in Rgveda, VII, 33, 4; X, 71, 11, and this suggestion is at least plausible. They are apparently referred to as Mahānāmnīs in the Atharvaveda and Yajurveda (see below). It is borne out to some extent at least by the character of the language, which shows the rare forms ánusamsisah, stuse, vide, īśe, rñjáse, and samnyase. The metre is also of an archaic type in so far as resolutions are frequently necessary to restore it. The Khila Anukramanī gives the following note: vidā daša pādāš ca pañca Viśvāmitra Indro vā Prajāpatir Aindram pāvanam ānustubham purīsapadāny Āgneyavaisņavaindrapausņadaivāni vairājāni dvisiyāpancamyāv usnihau caturthī nyankusārinī saplamī puraslādbrhafi navamyantye pankfi. As a matter of fact, as both Weber * and Oldenberg recognize, the verses are not preserved in their primitive form, but only as modified to suit their supposed sacred character. In verses 2, 5, and 8, which were apparently originally anustubhs, the fourth pāda has been omitted for the insertion of a sort of refrain. Verses 1, 3, and 6 are in anustubh. Verse 4 appears to be 8+12+8+8; verse 7, 12+8+8+8; verse 9, 8+8+8+8. The rest is in no regular metre. Oldenberg (p. 33) considers that originally the metre consisted of seven and five sets of eight syllables respectively, but this seems hardly borne out by the facts. It should be noted that the Khila text manufactures the last four of the nine purisapadāni into one verse (!), and in this respect is certainly not old, for the purisapadāni cannot reasonably be held to have ever made up a verse. They are referred to, however, as five in the Kausītaki Brāhmana, XXIII, 2, and connected with Prajāpati, Agni, Indra, Pūṣan, and Devāḥ, and in the Brhaddevatā, VIII, 102, they are connected with the same deities, save that Vișnu is substituted for the Devāh (so the A version; the B version omits Prajāpati, while Mitra's text includes both Prajāpati and the Devah, see Macdonell's note). They are also mentioned in the Pañcavimsa Brāhmana, XIII, 4, 12, where elaborate directions are given as to their selection to make up the śākvara sāman, Lātyāyana Sūtra, IV, 10, 18, Śānkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, X, 6, 13, &c., and in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 4; V, 7; VI, 24; Atharvaveda, XI, 7, 6; Vājasaneyi Samhitā, XXIII, 35: Kāṭhaka Samhitā, X, 10; Taittirīya Samhitā, V, 2, 11, 1.9

The verses contain several phrases reminiscent of the Rgveda, perhaps borrowed from earlier hymns; at least they tend to convey an impression of second-hand use: jétāram áparājitam=RV., I, 11, 2; sá naḥ parṣad áti=RV., X, 187, 1; Indram dhánasya sātáye is the last pāda of RV., VIII, 3, 5d (this I owe to Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 210b); sám anyésu bravāvahai=RV., I, 30, 6; sákhā sušévo ádvayāḥ=RV., I, 187, 3d; śaviṣṭha vajrinn rħjáse=RV., I, 80, 10 (with ojásā). These last two cases seem to me strongly in favour of the later date of these verses, for bravāvahai is not unnatural in RV., I, 30, 6, where it seems to refer to Indra and the speaker who are to agree in other battles, the previous half verse referring to a conflict, but it is distinctly awkward here where the first half verse has no reference to a fight or other occasion of association. This only, however, proves that the Mahānāmnī verses are not among the earliest parts of the Rgveda.

For the last four reff, I am indebted to Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 696*, who gives other passages; cf. also Weber, Ind. Stud., XVII, 358; Eggeling, S. B. E., XLI, xx; XLIV, 380, n. 2.

The last four purişapadāni are made out of the preceding verses, evā hī śakró, from v. 2; vaśī hī śakró, from v. 5; váśāħ ánu, from v. 4. The Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 2, 9, shows that other pādas of the verses were used independently in the ritual: pracelana pracelayāyāhi piba matsva i kratuś chanda rlam brhat sumna ā dhehi no vasav ily anuṣtup i Ibid., 12, has: ud yad bradhnasya viṣtapam iti paridhāniyā i evā hy evaivā hindra 3 i evā hi śakro vaśī hi śakra iti japitvā i apāḥ pūrveṣām harivaḥ sulānām iti yajati i and again the purīṣapadāni in VI, 3, 26.

For the question of the 'authorship' of this Āraṇyaka by Āśvalāyana, cf. Introd., pp. 18 sq. For the view that this forms a sort of Āśvalāyana Saṃhitā may be compared the fact that there is an Āpastambīya Mantrapātha, a collection of Gṛḥya verses and formulae, to accompany the Āpastamba Gṛḥya Sūtra. So too, as Oldenberg (S. B. E., XXX, 3-11) has conclusively 10 shown, the Mantra Brāhmaṇa was prepared to accompany Gobhila's Gṛḥya Sūtra, though it is not apparently ascribed to Gobhila, just as IV is not attributed to Āśvalāyana in the Āraṇyaka itself. Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 232) merely repeats Max Müller (Ancient Sanskrit Literature, pp. 314 sq., 339).

O generous one, show 1 us a path, proclaim the regions, guide us, lord of many mights, wealthy one 1111

¹⁰ I do not consider Winternitz (Mantrapatha, I, xxxi sq.) to have refuted Oldenberg.

movest.2 Thou movest, most generous, bearer of the bolt. Come hither, drink, and be glad II 3 II

Grant us wealth with good heroes. Thou art 3 the lord of might according to thy will. Thou movest, most generous, bearer of the bolt, who art the most powerful of heroes 11411

Most generous of givers, wise one, guide us aright. Indra finds all. Him I praise. For he has will and strength # 5 #

Him we summon to our aid, the conqueror, unconquered. May he convoy us beyond our foes. He is strength, resolve, and mighty order 11 6 11

Indra we summon for the winning of wealth, the conqueror, unconquered. May he convoy us beyond our foes. May he convoy us beyond our enemies 6 11 7 11

2 rājase may be regarded as the second singular pres. indic, of a sixth class root rāj, as Whitney (Sanskrit Grammar, § 758 a) takes it here. The exact sense is doubtful. It may conceivably = 'thou art praised', but the sense 'move' is possible, if the root is akin to the Greek δρίγω. Cf. Delbrück, Altindisches Verbum, p. 181; Bartholomae, Indog. Forsch., II, 281; Neisser, Bezz. Beitr., XX, 59; Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 396, 436 ('press on, strive forward'); Pischel (Vedische Studien, I, 109), however, compares saraj with δρέγω, and Geldner (ibid., III, 29 sq.) postulates a √rj=subh: diptau, either transitive or intransitive. He does not, unhappily, quote or explain this passage. In RV., VIII, 9, 17 he renders vémi tva Paşan rajasê as 'I desire to adorn thee', and possibly the form rajasê might be an infin. = an imperative (cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 412; Neisser, Bezz. Beitr., XX, 59; Hopkins, A. J. P., XIII, 21 sq.; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 216 d). The accentuation piba mátsva seems most probable, cf. taránir ij jayati kzéti puzyáti in RV., VII, 32, 9, and other examples given in Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 36 sq.; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 594 b; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, p. 80; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 105. mátsva is irregularly accented, but there are many parallels, Whitney, § 628; Macdonell, p. 99 (foot).

² bhivah is according to Whitney (Sanskrit Grammar, § 83 b, c; cf. Delbrück, l.c., p. 144) either an injunctive of an unaugmented a acrist, or a subjunctive of the root acrist. But in sense it may be an indicative. vájáñ ánu may perhaps be 'according to our will'. rāyāh suviryam is curious, but the variant rāyē is merely an easy correction. Cf. rāyāt poṣam, RV., IV, 40, 4. The Taittirīya Samhitā, III, 1, 9, 4 has: vider gaupatyam rāyas poṭam suvīryam samvatsarīnām svastim, where the conjunction of rāyas and suvīryam is different, but where vider supports the derivation of vidā from √vid. Cf. V, 1, 6, n. 3.

* vide must be 3rd sing. like ite, and may mean 'knows', cf. Hopkins, J. A. O. S., XV, 276, n. Sāyana renders it as a 2nd sing. For stuse see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 894 d; Delbrück, l.c., p. 181. If stusé is read, the accent is somewhat irregular. But irregular accents in quasi-subordinate clauses are numerous, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 595-598; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 43; RV., I, 189, 3; III, 1, 1, with Oldenberg's notes (S. B. E., XLVI, 182, 223); Z.D.M.G., LX, 735 sq.

Sayana takes ati parşad as 'let him destroy', and the last pada as meaning, 'the sacrifice, the metre used, the fruits of the offering, and all great.' The words are clearly not in place here, and make little sense.

* sridhah Sāyaṇa explains as those whom we should hate, although they do not hate us. The meaning is perhaps 'beyond all failures'; cf. dti sridhah in this sense in RV., I, 36, 7; III, 9, 4; 10, 7.

Place us in thy favour, ancient one, lord of the thunder, bright one. Most powerful, thy rewards are extolled. For the strong god bears rule 11 8 11

Lord of man, slayer of Vṛtra, this new hymn ⁷ I offer now to thee. Among others let us two converse together. The hero who fares for the cows is a kind and guileless friend II 9 II

Thus, thus, O Agni. Thus, thus, O Indra. Thus, thus, O Viṣṇu. Thus, thus, O Pūṣan. Thus, thus, O Gods. For he is strong. For he has strength and will, according to his will. On all sides of come hither. Show, generous one, show.

⁷ This is doubtful. mányase, the variant of the other texts save SV., is remarkable as being accented, and does not help. It looks like an obvious error or correction for sámnyase, which becomes sánnyase, SV., Naigeya Śākhā, and then by haplography sányase, SV., Āranya Samhitā, and then mányase through the frequent mistake of s for m in Śāradā MSS. mányase makes no good sense, but samnyase also is very difficult (even if taken as Oldenberg (S. B. E., XLVI, 404) would take it in RV., V, 17, 2, as a first person). It comes apparently from √as. Dr. Scheftelowitz now agrees with this view (cf. my remark in J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 224). For tam tan (i. e. tad) can be read (supply sūktam or, with tam, mantram) but navyam may be from √nu, meaning praiseworthy. The dual bravāvahai in the original context refers to the singer and Indra who are in other (contests) to be united. Here it must (cf. n. 7 on I, 1, 2) mean something of the same sort, but anyeju has no longer any direct antecedent. SV. aryéju is merely a facile correction like so many SV. readings. For the loc., góju, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 122; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 81 b; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 301, 304; A.J. P., XIII, 284. Sányase as a dat. hardly makes sense.

* Sāyaṇa takes evā as from √i and ā. The sentence is practically a mere exclamation and cannot be translated. The words ā yō, &c., yield no sense as they stand. Sāyaṇa renders, 'He who comes to think what is to be thought of for our weal, let him come to think what is to be thought of.' The variant āyo is no help, though it might mean 'Come to the man who deserves favour', cf. Taittirīya Saṃhitā, II, 1, 3, 2. For the pluti, ā 3 i, see Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 298.

Cf. Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 12, where the sentence runs: ehy evā hīndropehi vilvatha vidā maghavan vidā iti, from which it may be legitimate to assume that ehi should be supplied in the purīsapadāni. The last vidā may point to vidāb being the form. vilvadhā in RV. means either (1) everywhere, I, 141, 6; (2) always, V, 8, 4.

The Taittirīya Āranyaka, I, 20, has: evấ hy eva t evấ hy Agne t evấ hi Vāyo t evấ hīndra t evấ hi Pāṣan t evấ hi devāḥ t when Sāyaṇa renders eva as ayanaṣīlāditya and evā as etavyāḥ prāptavyāḥ kāmāḥ, and supplies asi, 'Thou art desires:' hilabdenādityaṣya sarvakāmahetutva-prasīddhir ucyate. Ibid., 23, has: evấ hy evēti t... evấ hy Agna iti t... evấ hi Vấyo iti t... evấ hindreti t... evấ hi Pūṣann tti t evấ hi dévā tti t The accents are those of the Ānandāṣrama text (I, 88, 89), and may be wrong. In the Maitrayaṇī Saṃhitā, II, 3, 18 (a reference which I owe to Bloomfield's Vedic Concordance, p. 305*) all the MSS. have evã (or evá) hy Agne. The Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXIII, 2, gives two accounts of the Mahānāmnīs or Sakvarīs, and gives as the five purīṣapadāni: evã hy eva t evā hy Agne t evā hīndra t evā hi Pūṣan t evā hi devāḥ t

It is by no means obvious how these verses came to be considered as an especially fruitful rain-spell. As such they are clearly recognized in the Gobhila Grhya Sütra, III, 2, and the Khādira Grhya Sütra, II, 5, 22 sq., where the Śakvarīvrata is clearly a rite of sympathetic magic to produce plentiful rain (see Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pp. 420-422, with whose remarks I fully concur).

In the Mahāvrata ceremony there are twenty-five verses to accompany the kindling of the fire.¹ In the twenty-one² verses (used in the Viṣuvant) four are inserted before the second last, beginning, 'With fuel Agni' (RV., VIII, 44, I). A bull is to be offered to Viśvakarman³ accompanied by muttering the verses. The Ājya and Praüga Śastras are taken from the Viśvajit.⁴ The Śastras of

² There are in the Darsapürnamäsesti, see Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, pp. 74 sq., fifteen verses beginning with RV., III, 27, 1 (cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 299; Bergaigne, Recherches sur l'histoire de la liturgie védique, p. 19); see Taittiriya Brahmana, III, 5, 2, 1. There are only eleven separate verses, but the first and last are each thrice repeated. In the Visuvant the fifteen are extended into twenty-one by the interpolation of six verses beginning with RV., III, 27, 5. These are inserted before the second last verse, RV., V, 28, 5. Then four more verses, beginning with RV., VIII, 44, I, are added before this verse to make up the twentyfive. The Śāńkhāyana here ignores these verses. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, I, I, I4, gives the number as 17. See a list in Asvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, I, 2, 7. The construction acc. for nom. is remarkable and is not a mark of late or careless style, for these irregularities and the use of numerals are found in the Mantras (e.g. saptá rṣīṇām, śatám pūrbhíh, cited by Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 486 c) and in the Aitareya Brāhmana, III, 48, 9: catuhsastini kavacina āsuḥ, while in VII, 2, 7, parṇafaraḥ sastis trīṇi ca fatāny āḥrtya occurs (see Aufrecht, p. 428). Above, II, 2, 4; 3, 8, occurs sattrimšatam sahasrāni, while Aitareya Brāhmana, VII, 1 has sattrimsatam ekapadah, which examples all appear to be transfers of accusative for nominative, though the possibility of their being new stems in a cannot be denied (especially as the Aitareya Brāhmana actually has trayastrimiatyā, a transfer to the i declension). Cf. Introd., p. 56. The idiom has hardly been adequately noticed in Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 82.

The Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, I, I, prescribes a bull for Indra and a goat for Prajāpati. The Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 7, 7, mentions also a savanīya pašu, see Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, pp. 125, 136. Cf. also Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XIII, 2, 17. Upānīsu means not in silence but so as not to be overheard, see Sāyana's quotation, karanavad aiabdam manahprayogam, and Āpastamba Yajūaparibhāṣā, 9, 11 and 113 (S. B. E., XXX, 319 and 345), where the Sāmidhenīs are not upāmīsu but antarā (see note on 11).

the Hotrakas are taken from the Caturvimsa rite.3 In the morning pressing the Brāhmanācchamsin should add the verses, beginning, 'The busy moving ones' (RV., X, 153, 1), and at the midday pressing the verses, 'Of this strong youthful one drink' (RV., X, 160, 1).6 The tristich which forms the strophe begins, 'The buffalo in the bowls, the barley-mixed' (RV., II, 22, 1), the tristich forming the antistrophe consists of the three verses, Indra, come hither to us from far away' (RV., I, 130, 1), 'For to Indra heaven, the wise one, bowed' (RV., X, 127, 1), and, 'To him a song excelling' (RV., X, 133, 1). The Marutvatīya Sastra is taken over from the Caturvimśa and extended by the hymns, 'Fair has been my effort, singer' (RV., X, 27, 1), 'Drink the Soma for which in anger thou breakest' (RV., VI, 17, 1), 'With what splendour' (RV., I, 165, 1), and, 'Indra, with the Maruts' (RV., III, 45, 1).8 The Marutvatīya Sastra ends with the hymn, 'Thou art born, terrible, for strength, for energy' (RV., X, 53, 1). At the end of the Marutvatīya Sastra, the Hotr, leaving his place by the incomplete route,9 offers three oblations in the Agnīdh's fire with a ladle of udumbara wood (accompanying them with the verses):-

5 The Hotrakas are the Maitrāvaruna, Brāhmanācchamsin, and Achāvāka. In the Agnistoma their Śastras begin with RV., III, 62, 16; VIII, 17, 1; III, 12, 1, respectively. In the Caturvinsa they begin with RV., V, 68, 3; I, 4, 1; VIII, 72, 13, respectively.

6 The Mahāvrata differs in these points even from the Caturvimsa. Sāyana leaves it undecided whether the passages extend to five verses, or only to one verse by the paribhāṣā, ream pādagrahaņe, for which see Āsvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, I, 1, 17.

* For the Marutvatīya Śastra of the Hotr at the midday pressing, see I, 2, 1 and 2. In the Agnistoma it begins with RV., VIII, 68, 1-3, and VIII, 2, 1-3. The Caturvimśa contains alterations, and the Mahāvrata adds the hymns enumerated. Ātānaḥ (found in VS., TS., &c.) must mean vistāraḥ as Sāyaṇa has it here. Cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, V, 4, 12, where Sāyaṇa renders śastraklptiḥ. Friedländer, on Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 3, suggests the sense 'scheme' for it. In RV., II, 1, 10, ātániḥ = 'expander'; cf. my Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, p. 3, n. 6.

'Indra, Bṛhaspati, Soma, and the goddess, Vāc, have aided me.10 May Mitra and Varuṇa, Heaven and Earth, aid me when first I call || | | |

'May the Ādityas, the all-gods, and the seven anointed Kings, U Vāyu, Pūṣan, Varuṇa, Soma, Agni, Sūrya, with the constellations, may they help me II 2 II

'May the fathers protect me, and all this universe, and the children of Pṛśni, the Maruts, with their splendour, ye who have Agni as your tongue and are worthy of sacrifice, may ye gods, hearing our cry, protect us 11311'

He offers ten oblations on the mārjālīya altar 12 to the south, the last of which he first divides into four and deposits to the north of the fire. In the middle of the day, after the carrying forth of the fire, the mārjālīya fire is made east, he mutters the parimādāḥ japāḥ, vāg āyur višvāyur višvam āyur ehy evā hīndropehi višvatha vidā maghavan vidā iti (cf. above, p. 263), after which he adores the several members of the fire altar conceived in human form (XVII, 12, 6-13, 6). For the Parimāds themselves, cf. my Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, p. 4; Eggeling, S. B. E., XLI, 288, n. 2, and for the meaning of √mad, Lanman in Whitney's Translation of Atharvaveda, p. 158. The Hotr goes north to the Agnīdh's fire. (For Agnīdh, cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 189, and Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 18, n. 6.)

19 Or 'may they aid me', as Sāyaṇa takes it. He thinks pūrvahūtau is an epithet of Dyāvapṛthivī or Mitrāvarunau.

11 Sayana explains this by the list in Taittiriya Āranyaka, I, 7, ārogo bhrājah paṭarah pataingah i svarnaro jyotisīmān vibhāsah i te asmai sarve divam ātapanti i This may be right, otherwise one might expect it to mean the seven Adityas. No doubt the seven Adityas set the model to the later theory of seven suns, whose names are variously given (cf. seven Rsis, seven Hotrs, seven sounds, &c., Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 225); see Vișnu Purăna, VI, 2; Hopkins, Great Epic of India, p. 475. Rajendralala reads in the text mā nu, which is certainly wrongly accented and seems not quite as likely as manu in view of the anu elsewhere used. The Taittiriya Brahmana, II, 5, 8, 2 has: anu tvendro madatv anu Béhaspatih I anu Somo ánv Agnir avit I ánu tvá vísve devá avantu I ánu saptá rájano yá utábhisiktáh I ánu tvá Mitravarunav ihavatam I anu dyavaprthivī visvasambhū I sūryo ahobhir anu tvavatu I candrámā náksatrair ánu tvāvatu I Note the different reading utá abhlsiktāh. The text appears from Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 9734, to occur in Kāthaka Samhitā, XXXVII. 9 d, which has (9 c) sūryo 'hobhir anu tvāvatu, confirming mānu against Mitra's mā nu (which is followed in the Concordance, p. 1028b), and (9 b) anu Somo anv Agnir avit, and (9 a) anu tvendro madatv anu Brhaspatih, thus presenting only one line as against the two lines of the Āranyaka and the Brāhmaṇa. In the next verse yé aguijihva utá vā yájatrāh is a tag found in RV., VI, 52, 13 c, and in the other Samhitas (Bloomfield, p. 795b); the other three padas seem as yet unparalleled. The series of prose Mantras below is also (see Index II) unique.

¹² In the middle of the sadas and the havirdhānas there is a space from north to south. The agnīdhrīya altar is at the north, the mārjālīya at the south. With caturgṛhītam, ājyam must be understood, see Āpastamba, Yajūaparibhāṣā, 195 (S. B. E., XXX, 341); cf. caturgṛhītena juhoti, Taittirīya Āranyaka, V, 2; caturgṛhītās tisra ājyāhutīr, Aitareya Brāhmana, VIII, 10, 9, °gṛhītam, VII, 21, but the construction is very awkward. Throughout the terms dakṣina and uttara are ambiguous. For the sadas the priests' tent, cf. Śatapatha Brāhmana,

III, 5, 3, 5, and Eggeling's note.

to kindle.13 (The offering is made in it) when it is covered up, and either to the east, the north, or the north-east side. (The verses used are as follows):—

'May I become unassailable like fire; may I become firmly rooted like the earth II II

- 'May I become unapproachable 14 like the sky; may I become unassailable like the heaven II 2 II
- ' May I become without a superior like the sun; may I become renewed like the moon $0.3\,0$
 - 'May I become renewed like mind; may I be multiplied like the wind 15 H 4 H

'May I become one's own like the day 16; and dear like night 11 5 11

'May I become born again like kine; may I become glorious 17 like a pair 11 6 11

'Mine be the flavour of water and the form of plants 11 7 11

- 'May I become widespreading 18 like food, and lordly like the sacrifice 11 8 11
- 'May I become like the Brahmin in the world, and like the Kşatriya for prosperity II 9 II

'When, O Agni, this assembly is gathered (RV., X, 11, 8)19 11 10 11'

The idea seems to be that the fire is kept in from the time it is lighted on the mārjālīya altar but is now 'wakened'. prabhṛti in this use is first found in the Śrauta Sūtras, Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 112.

yathā mana uttarottaram abhivrddhikānksayā prayatamānam sat tattatphalaprāptyā nūtanam rūpam pratipadyate . . . yathā vāyur āṣāāhādimāse samudratīrādideše vā svayam uttarottarābhiveddhyā sangharūpo bhavati (Sāyaṇa).

¹⁷ This must be the sense though the expression marīcayah, 'glories,' is curious. Kine have offspring yearly, and pairs (e.g. Umā and Mahesvara, Laksmī and Nārāyaṇa) are glorious (Sāyaṇa).

In the reading vibhuh, and Sayana may have so read, but this is not necessary. For a converse case, cf. V, 2, 1, when Rajendralala reads vasu for vasuh. The next Mantra offers considerable difficulty. Sayana renders as the Brahmin in the world and ksatram rajyam gajāfvādišriyām adhipatih, apparently taking iriyām as a genitive (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 349, 351). But the parallelism of the sentence calls urgently for a locative which gives fair sense, 'in point of wealth.' The speaker desires (a) renown, (b) wealth. Only the exact force of the locative varies in the two cases.

19 The last oblation is accompanied by a RV. verse.

Standing there he worships the sun,²¹ turning so as to keep his right side towards it as it turns, with these verses, omitting the cries of svāhā,²² and with the verse, 'Come hither, this is sweet, this is sweet. Drink this bitter draught. This is sweet, this is sweet.' He then instructs the maidservants,²⁸ who carry full pitchers, six in front, three behind, (saying), 'Walk three times from left to right round this altar and this pitcher of water, smiting your right thighs with your right hands, and saying, "Come hither, this is sweet, this is sweet."'

This must mean that in the rite the RV. verse is to be altered by reading in pāda 3, ratnā cātra vibhajātha svadhāvaḥ for ratnā ca yad vibhajāsi, and in pāda 4, bhāgaṃ no atra vasumantaṃ vītha for vītāt. Sāyaṇa adds that these alterations are improper, just as the alteration vidheḥ for vrdhatu in Brhaspatir no haviṣā vrdhātu, Taittirīya Saṃhitā, I, 2, 2, 1; VI, 1, 2, 3; Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā, I, 2, 2; III, 6, 4. The v.l. is not in Bloomfield. But this is not implied in the Āraṇyaka. The verse occurs in Atharvaveda, XVIII, 1, 26, and Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā, IV, 14, 15, but in neither place so altered. Bloomfield (Vedic Concordance, pp. 43^b, 749^b) also can merely quote Sāyaṇa's view. Perhaps the Bāṣkala Sākhā is meant. A different case occurs in IV: Îndraṃ dhānasya sātāye havāmahe when havāmahe is added (as in Mahā ārāyaṇa Upaniṣad, 7, cited by Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 210^d) to the first three words which are found in RV., VIII, 3, 5 d. But the Mahānāmnī verses are not part of the RV. and their occurrence is not parallel to this remarkable case.

This is done later in the Sänkhäyana Āranyaka, I, 5, where the words are almost identical, atraiva tisthann ādityam upatisthate. The Mantra is quite different, see Śrauta Sūtra, XVII,

22 The offerings are accompanied as usual by the cry spāhā. These are omitted. For the rule, cf. Apastamba, Vajňaparibhäsa, 87 (S. B. E., XXX, 339).

23 Cf. Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 14, where apparently deliberately the direction is from right to left (apradaksinam), though the words said are alike, hai mahā 3 idam madhu idam madhu. The dance is clearly a rain and vegetation spell, cf. Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, III, 103. These and the other ceremonies are all mentioned in the other parallel passages, Lātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 10-12; IV, 1-3; Tāṇḍya Brāhmaṇa, V, 5, 6; Kāṭhaka, XXXIV, 5; Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XIII, 3; Taittirīya Samhitā, VII, 5, 9 and 10; Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, I, 2, 6, 7. These versions differ in many details; the most important rite which is mentioned in neither of the Rgvedic works is the struggle of an Arya and a Sūdra for a round skin, which represents the sun (cf. Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pp. 444, 506; Usener. Archiv f. Religionswissenschaft, 1904, pp. 297 sq.). It is noteworthy that in Latyayana, IV. 3, 18, where the words repeated are like those in Sankhayana the form vadatyah also occurs. So Drāhyāyana; Taittirīya Samhitā, VII, 5, 10, has gāyantyah. The direction there is also pradakşinam. After the eight ājya libations in the āgnīdhrīya fire, according to the Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 4, come the parimāds. They are twenty-five in number and are followed by seven stotriyas named āngirasa sāman, bhūtechadāņ sāman, kroša, anukroša, payas, arka, and arkapuspa. The Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, I, 2, 8; 9, contains a somewhat parallel version. see Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 288, n. 2, and thus again (cf. Introd., p. 36) agrees with the Śāńkhāyana against the Aitareya. These sāmans are called devachandāṃsi, Śāńkhāyana, I, 5, and are followed by japas. Then comes an adoration of the members of the fire (see here V, 1, 2), and of the sun, and the Hotr declares that the 'great one has united with the great

2. 'When the singing of the stotra has been requested, then do ye cast down the water in three places, on the northern altar, on the mārjālīya altar, and the rest within the enclosure.' Having gone away so as to keep the mārjālīya fire on his right, he stands before the sacrificial post in front of the fire, with face to the west, and worships the head of the fire with the words, 'Honour to the Gāyatra which is thy head:' then, returning by the way he came, with face to the north, he worships the right side of the fire with the words, 'Honour to the Rathantara which is thy right side.' Then passing to the west of the tail of the fire, with face to the east, he worships the left side of the fire with the words, 'Honour to the Bṛhat which is thy left side.' Then on the west.

one', i. e. Agni with Pṛthivī, 'the god with the goddess,' i. e. Vāyu with Antarikṣa, 'Brahman (neut.) with Brāhmaṇī' (see Introd., p. 68, n. 1), i. e. Āditya with Dyaus. On this follows (I, 6) a Viśvāmitra legend (cf. Aitareya, II, 2, 3) to explain these identifications. For the use of upa + \sqrt{sthā}, cf. the famous passage in the Mahābhāṣya, I, 3, 25 (Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 480, 481), where an ape upatiṣṭhati to warm himself, but a man upatiṣṭhate in reverence.

² This describes the worship of the fire altar in its simplest bird shape, head, two wings, tail, and body. In Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 13, the sāmans and the order differ, being (1) pārvārdha with Gāyatra, (2) right side with Rathantara, (3) left side with Bṛhat, (4) madhya with Vāmadevya, (5) tail with Yajūāyajūīya. Cf. Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, IX, 1, 2, 35 and 39; X, 1, 2, 8, and Eggeling's summary (based on this passage and Śāṅkhāyana), S.B.E., XLIII, 283, n.; Lāṭyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 11, 3, where as here the body is placed last, but which agrees as to the sāmans with Śāṅkhāyana and also with Drāhyāyaṇa, and in which the sprinkling of water in three parts also occurs. The Sāmans referred to will be found as follows, gāyatram in trivṛt stoma, Sāmaveda, II, 146-148; 263-265; 800-8c2 (or II, 8, 4, see S.B.E., XLIII, 178); rathantaram in pāñcadaša stoma, ibid., II, 30, 31; bṛhat in saptadaša stoma, ibid., II, 159, 160; rājanam in pañcaviṇṣta stoma, ibid., II, 833-835; bhadra in ekaviṃsta stoma, ibid., II, 460-462. For the Sāmans cf. II, 3, 4. For a drawing of the agnikṣetra see Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 235.

² He had gone from the mārjālīya in the south to the east side of the cityāgni and he now returns to the south. Rāthantara is unusual, but it is supported by all the MSS.

4 It is not clear why he should not go round to the north, but all that is done is to go to the end of the west or tail side, when looking east, along the left side, he utters the Mantra.

^a paicāt may simply mean 'next', or, as Sāyaṇa takes it, refer to the place where the Hotr stands. Apparently the difference between this and his former position is that he stands directly behind the tail, instead of going past it. This account of his movements corresponds on the whole with that of the ceremony of the Satarudriya, which has analogies to the Mahāvrata (Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, IX, I, I, 44). In it, according to the Satapatha, IX, I, 2, 35 sq., the Sāmans, (1) gāyatram, (2) rathantaram, (3) bṛhat, (4) Vāmadevyam, (5) yajñāyajñīyam, and (6) Prajāpatihṛdaya, correspond to (1) head, (2) right wing, (3) left wing, (4) body, (5) tail, (6) heart; according to Lāṭyāyana, I, 5, 1I, which very closely follows the order of

of the fire, with face to the east, he worships the tail with the words, 'Honour to the Bhadra which is thy tail and thy support.' Then on the south of the tail he worships the body with the words, 'Honour to the Rājana which is thy body.'

3. He returns to the seat as he went.¹ The swing has already been made ready.² Having cleansed the two posts, the ropes, and the cross-beam, and having taken them by the road called tirtha,³ having gone round to the left the Agnīdh's altar,⁴ (having brought them within) the seat by the east door (he places the implements ³) to the left of all the altars. The planks of the swing are made of udumbara or of palāśa, or of both. There should be three planks worked on both sides, or two, and a like number of sharp-pointed sticks. The movements in this Aitareya passage, the (1) gāyatram, (2) rathantaram, (3) brhat, (4) yajñāyajñīyam, (5) Vāmadevya, and (6) Prajāpatihrdaya, correspond to (1) head, (2) right side, (3) left side, (4) tail, (5) right arm-pit, and (6) left arm-pit. Cf. also the elaborate ceremonial of the parimādah at the Mahāvrata as described in Satapatha, X, 1, 2, 9; Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 4 (with Friedlander's note, p. 37); and the similar use after the beginning of the prstha stotra of the parimādaķ (prāņa, apāna, vratapakṣau, Prajāpater hrdaya, Vasisthasya nihava, sattrasyardhi, śloka and anuśloka, yāma, āyus, navastobha, rsyasya sāman) in the worship of the parts of the altar in Tāṇḍya Brāhmaṇa, V, 4, 1-13; Lāṭyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 9, 1 sq.; Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, I, 2, 6, 5. In the Mahāvrata Sāman the parts of the bird are head, right wing, left wing, tail, and trunk only (Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, xxvii). The whole conception is clearly borrowed (cf. Introd., p. 50) from the altar in the Agnicayana which gave origin to the mystic doctrines of the Adhvaryus (see especially Satapatha Brāhmaņa, VI-X), and of which the Mahāvrata is an adaptation by the Hotys. In Vājasaneyi Samhitä, XII, 4, the trivrt is the head, the gayatram the eyes, brhat and rathantaram the wings, the hymn the soul, the yajūmsi the name, the metres the limbs, the Vāmadevyam the body, the yajñāyajñīyam the tail. For the relation of sāman and words, cf. Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XXXVIII, 439 sqq., 464 sq.; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 143 sq., and see Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 180, n. 2; Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 276 sq. The Vāmadevya is based on Sămaveda, II, 32, 33; the Yajñāyajñīya on Sāmaveda, II, 53, 54.

¹ He comes back to the seat near the mārjālīya fire, which he left to worship the citya altar. The expression occurs several times in the Śrauta Sūtra. For the eight altars see Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 148, n. 4 and the plan on p. 475, followed by Caland and Henry,

² By the Adhvaryus. Cf. Aitareya Brāhmana, VII, 32.

² This is the name of the passage between the utkara and cātvāla, Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, V, 15, 2, &c.; Maitrāyanī Samhitā, III, 8, 10. The action is rendered intelligible by a glance at the plan in Eggeling.

* The pari of parivrajya must refer to circumambulation. The meaning of the phrase is probably given by Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 11, 4, pūrvayā dvārāgnīdhram prapadyottarenāgnīdhrīyam dhiṇnyam paryetya, though the pūrvayā dvārā here is otherwise applied. The idea is, he goes round the altar from right to left, probably. Cf. also ibid., V, 14. The sentence is so elliptical as to be unintelligible without Sāyaṇa's pravelya. Śāṅkhāyana, XVII, 7, 11, is much more simple.

5 The verb must be gathered from atyādadhati below; strictly speaking the next sentences are parenthetical and this sentence is continuous with daksinottare sthūne nikhāya.

swing should be a yard in size from east to west, its cross breadth should be a yard less a hand; the points of its (planks) should be to the north, and they should be fastened together by sticks with their points east. Having inserted the posts in the earth to the north and south, around the seat of the Hotr, he spreads the cross-beam over them so that it is on a level with the worker's face.6 Holes are (bored) in the corners of the planks of the swing. He fastens the planks above by means of the ropes, the right one on the south, the left on the north.7 The ropes should be of darbha grass, and with three strands,8 one rope to 6 In the Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 10, 7 and 8, the height is measured by the head of the Hotr, or if he is small his outstretched arms. Ibid., 4, 6, shows that both the planks and the cross-beam have the points north. For the construction with kartuh dependent on āsya°, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1316. Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 113) gives many classical examples. For abhitah with accus., cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 183. It is found in Mantra, but more often in Brahmana, Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 88. For uttarena with accus, cf. Gaedicke, Der Accusativ in Veda, pp. 207 sq.; see Liebich, Bezz. Beitr., XI, 284. Delbrück and Gaedicke seem right in explaining the use as derived from the accus. with antar and antara. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 273, offers no explanation. In V, I, I, we find uttarato 'gneh; in V, I, 2, daksinatah puchasya with the more natural adnominal genitive. But in V, 1, 2, aparena has the accus. In Śańkhāyana Āranyaka, VII, 3, antarena has the gen.; in the Sütra, the acc. The measures are dubious, see Hopkins, J. A. O. S., XXIII, 141.

The Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 10, 14, 15, explains that the right rope is tied to the north of the south post, the left to the south of the north post, i.e. inside the posts, just as in a modern swing. The point of view is of course facing east, with the south on

The use of trigune and dvigune with different senses of guna is awkward, but appears clearly so meant. Sayana points out that the rope as doubled would be 21 fathoms in length, of which only a yard would be used by the rope passing under the plank (above isumātrah prān prenkhah). There would thus be plenty of rope available for the tying, as the top was only a man's height or less. Sayana takes savyadaksine as 'inclining to the left and right', i.e. the ropes should not go straight up. The only obscure point in this description of the tying on of the seat of the swing to the cross-beam is pradaksinam, since it is not at first sight obvious how this applies to the act of fastening ropes. It apparently must mean that after the rope has been passed under the seat of the swing the one end is rolled round the cross-beam slanting to the right, the other (on the opposite side, of course s) also slanting to the right and the ends then are tied across. Provided there was sufficient friction to keep the ropes from slipping this would seem to give a substantial knot (cf. nistarkya). If this is so, we cannot accept Sayana's theory of savyadaksine and must fall back either on the view that the word means merely left (hand) rope and right (hand) rope, or take the epithet

^{*} It is very unlikely that both ends of the rope should have been brought to the same side of the cross-beam. In that case pradaksinam would be rather less than more in point. Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 106, n.) points out that adjective dvandvas are not unknown even in Sanskrit (cf. his Sanskrit-Syntax, § 208), and (p. 32, n. 1) argues from Pāṇini, VI, 2, 38, when ekādaša is given as a dvandva that the grammarians recognized such types. He (§ 107) gives classical examples of distributive dvandvas.

the left, one to the right, and five fathoms long, and should be folded double. Then folding (each end) thrice (to the right) round the cross-beam he makes a knot on the top, which can only be untied by twisting. They support the posts so as to be steady by means of branches and brushwood. The swing should be four fingers or a hand distant from the ground. On the right it may be somewhat higher or level. It should be a foot from the altar.

4. When the swing has been put in position, the Hotr taking a lute of udumbara wood, with a hundred strings, in both hands, strikes it, beginning from the lower side, as one does an ordinary lute. The different notes of the lute he should produce in turn by the seven metres, each with four (syllables) as applying to each rope and as meaning, 'with strands coiled from left to right.' Cf. perhaps the equally obscure passage, Āpastamba Yajāaparibhāṣā, 60, 61 (S. B. E., XXX, 331, where Max Müller says, 'The exact process here intended is not quite clear. The ropes seem to have been made of vegetable fibres. See Kāty., I, 3, 15-17'). If savyadakṣine=left and right, cf. for the use of the dvandva, Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 160, who cites Atharvaveda, XII, 1, 28: padbhyām dakṣinasavyābhyām; Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, I, 5, 10, 1: suvarṇarajatābhyām kušībhyām. The different order of words, savyadakṣina, is in accordance with the usual rule as to number of syllables determining the order of the numbers of their compounds, Wackernagel, II, i, 166.

The distance according to Sānkhāyana should be a prādeša, XVII, 10, 13. Ibid., XVII, 1, discusses the planks; 2, the ropes and āsandī; 3, the lute; 4, the drums; 5, 6, 7, the other accessories and the preliminary steps, in great order and detail. Cf. Lāṭyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 12.

i.e. he plays notes corresponding to verses composed in these metres. The four more are, Sāyaṇa says, virāj, dvipadā, atichandas, and chando 'ntaram. If this last be omitted ten are got. But despite its use elsewhere, e. g., Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X. 1, 2, 8, it must surely over, or with ten. (He should say), 'I produce thee with the gāyatrī metre. I produce thee with the anustubh metre. I produce thee with the usnih metre. I produce thee with the brhafi metre. I produce thee with the pankti metre. I produce thee with the tristubh metre. I produce thee with the jagafi metre. I produce thee with the virāj metre. I produce thee with the dvipadā metre. I produce thee with the atichandas metre.' Having gone through the metres according to the series of notes, he strikes the lute thrice, beginning from the foot with a branch of udumbara wood, fresh and still leafy, using the foot of it, (to the words), 'For up-breathing I strike thee, for down-breathing I strike thee, for cross-breathing I strike thee.' But he should not say, 'I strike thee,' for other desires.5 Then he hands over to the Saman singers the lute with the branch.6 He places his two hands on the back plank (with the words), 'For creatures thee (I touch),' and pushes the swing to the east (with the words), 'Swing forward like the breath,' crosswise (with the words), 'Swing crosswise for cross-breathing,' and back to himself (with the words), 'Swing like backbreathing.' He repeats the words bhuh, bhuvah, and svar.8 He then pushes the swing to the east 9 (with the words), 'For breath I push thee,' crosswise (with the words), 'For cross-breathing I push thee,' and back to himself (with the words), 'For down-breathing I push thee.' (With the words), 'May the Vasus mount thee with the gāyatrī metre, I mount after them,' he places his elbows on the back plank.10 Then he should touch the front plank with his mean, each metre has four more syllables than its predecessor, viz. 24, 28, 32, &c., and so Sāyaṇa takes it on Aitareya Brāhmana, VIII, 6, 6.

No doubt, as Sāyana says, a reference to a practice of other Sākhās, but not to the Sāhkhāyana Āranyaka or Śrauta Sūtra. For the words audumbaryā, &c., cf. audumbaryārdrayā jākhayā sapalājayā in Aitareya Brāhmana, VIII, 13. For the construction, cf. the acc. of whole and part, e.g. AV., V, 8, 9 (cited by Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 20; Delbrück, Vergl. Synt., I, 385): enam-marmāni vidhya, when, however, according to Whitney, Translation of Atharvaveda, the reading should be marmani, loc., though marmāni appears also in the Ajmir edition, sanvat 1957. Somewhat analogous cases appear in Speijer, § 83; Gaedicke, Der Accusativ, p. 268. Or mūladešena may refer to the lute.

In Sänkhäyana it is the Udgätr who has throughout to deal with the lute.

[†] Clearly the vyāna is a breath at right angles to prāna and apāna. This is an unusual conception of it, and is not mentioned in Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, p. 252; E. T., p. 279.

Sāyana says that the repetition of these three words denotes a desire that the three worlds be established by the threefold moving of the swing. They are used in Lāṭyāyana, IV, I, 4, in connexion with the playing of the lute. Cf. also Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 339; Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, p. 432, n.; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 162.

hands separately,¹¹ like a serpent about to creep. He should touch the middle plank with his chin, or if there are two ¹² the point of joining of the two. (With the words), 'May the Rudras mount thee with the tristubh metre, I mount after them,' he lays his right thigh ¹³ (over the seat). (With the words), 'May the Ādityas mount thee with the jagatī metre, I mount after them,' (he lays) his left thigh. (With the words), 'May the All-gods mount thee with the anustubh metre, I mount after them,' he mounts (the swing).¹⁴ To the west of his own altar he places his right foot pointing to the east, and then his left.¹⁵ If the former is tired, then the latter; if the latter, then the former. But the two together must never be off the ground. The Hotrakas sit down on bundles of grass, and so does the Brahman priest. The Udgātṛ sits on a stool of udumbara wood. If he has to leave for any absolutely necessary action, then having set one to guard, he descends towards the east, and having carried out the exact business he

Then he sits crosswise on the swing and touches the back of it with the Mantra, Prajāpatis tvārohatu vāyuh prenkhayatu. This act is preceded and followed by three expirations and three inspirations. The Mantras of the Udgātr in mounting his seat in Lātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 12, 8, are like those in Śāńkhāyana, omitting arko'si, but Lātyāyana, III, 12, 9, permits them to be reduced to simply gāyatreṇa tvā chandasārohāmi, &c. In Lātyāyana the verses are said by the Udgātr. Ibid., 10–12. Gautama adds a fifth stoma with vairājena, Dhānamjayya has four, and Sandilya only three.

There may be two or three, V, 1, 3. They are fastened by the sucis.

Ind. Stud., XIII, 268, and cf. the Rajasūya verses, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 6, 1-4.

The exact sense of this is taken by Sāyaṇa to be that the feet are to be used alternately, and this seems correct, though it is not said exactly that the two cannot ever be both on the ground at once. They must not be both off the ground, cf. I, 2, 4. For the gen. with paścāt, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 10, 9: etya grhān paścād grhasyāgner upaviṣtāyānvārabdhāya rtvig antatah kamsena caturgrhītās tisra ājyāhutīr aindrīh prapadam juhoti. This corrects Speijer's remark (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 83), followed by Delbrück, Vergl. Synt., I, 743, that paścāt is not so found before the Śrauta Sūtras, should mount again in the manner above set forth, omitting the utterance (of bhūḥ, bhuvaḥ, and svar).16

5. He instructs the Prastotr, 'In the pañcavimsa stoma proclaim the first pratihāra when either three verses remain to be said, or two and a half¹ or twelve and a half.' Jātūkarnya holds that this should be done when there remain twelve and a half verses. When the Prastotr has spoken, he repeats² (the verse), 'Thou art a bird with fair wings. I shall speak forth this word, which will declare much,² fare far, produce much, gain much, effect more than much,

16 Säyana takes ajapayā vrtā as the form. It may equally be ajapayā āvrtā, āvrt being more usual in this sense, as in Mānava Gṛḥya Sātra, II, 4, 2; 9, 8; Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, V, 11, 4; 5, &c.; cf. Weber, Ind. Stud., V, 410. If avaiyakarmine is read the sense must be, 'If he should go for (to serve) some one who has something he must do on hand.' At first sight this seems easier, but if "karmine had been original it would hardly have been changed to karmane, a less obvious construction, while the reverse of this process would be not unnatural. If "karmine is read, see for the formation which is rare in early texts, Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 121, 122. For the dat., cf. Gaedicke, Der Accusativ im Veda, p. 135; Delbrück, Vergl. Synt., I, 177, 301.

1 So Sāyana explains ardhatṛtīyāsu. The pratihāra is repeated five times usually before the last pada of the verse, cf. Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 100 and reff. For the imperative in "tāt, signifying an action to be carried out after something else, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 363; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, $5 570, 571. The dictum of Whitney that the benedictive sense of the imperative in tat was not exemplified, can only be supported on a very narrow interpretation of the word 'benedictive', not merely for classical Sanskrit (where it occurs often in Jaina Kāvya texts) but also for Vedic. E. g. in RV., III, 22, 2: agne vi pašya brhatābhi rāyésấm no netấ bhavatād ánu dyūn, it is surely absurd to take bhavatāt as imperative, as does Oldenberg (S.B.E., XLVI, 288); similarly in Whitney's own example from RV.: yad urdhvas tisthā drávinehá dhattāt, 'mayst' is clearly the sense, and 'may' he himself uses in translating the example from the MBh., bhavan prasadam kurutat. Probably, therefore, in denying the 'benedictive' sense, Whitney refers to that word in the narrowest sense of a blessing pronounced by some person who in the ordinary view is entitled to bless. This is so far borne out by the fact that Pāṇini, III, 1, 50 (asisi ca) is explained by the Siddhantakaumudī (following the Kāšikā Vṛtti) as āšīḥ prayoktur dharmaḥ l āšāsituḥ pitrāder iyam uktiḥ l In these cases the benedictive is regularly used in Sanskrit, e.g. tat kim anyad āšāsmahe kevalam vīraprasuyā bhūyāḥ (Vikramorvaśī), or the king's formal āśīḥ, e.g. ākalpāntam ca bhūyāt samupacitasukhaḥ samgamo sajjanānām (Ratnāvalī), or the imperative (e.g. in the verse from the Ratnāvalī just cited in fact three imperatives occur), but in the early language at any rate I can find no certain example of -tat so used. But the distinction between a wish and a blessing is evanescent.

² The Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 8, and Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 17, give the Mantras in reverse order, and omit the ukthavīryāni. For suparņo 'si garutmān see Vājasaneyi Samhitā, XII, 4; Śānkhāyana identifies this with prāna, but see my Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, p. 77, n. 6.

* Sāyaṇa interprets these epithets very inadequately, but it is most probable that they are all genuine including swar vadisyantīm, which has least MS. authority. The Ānandāśrama edition considers Sāyaṇa's text defective, but most probably he regarded some of the epithets as obvious, though perhaps he had not swar vadisyantīm. Lāṭyāyana has only after vadisyāmi: bahu karisyantīm bahu karisyan swar gamayisyantīm svar gamayisyan mām imān yajamānān, see IV, 2, 10. So also Drāhyāyaṇa. Sānkhāyana Āraṇyaka recognizes bahu karisyantīm bahor bhūyaḥ karisyantīm svar gamisyantīm svar imān yajamānān vaksyantīm only, which resembles which goes to heaven, which will declare heaven, fare to heaven, produce heaven, gain heaven, carry this sacrifice to heaven, and carry the sacrificer, me, to heaven.' The word 'sacrificer' applies only to one who has been consecrated, not to one not consecrated.⁴ In the case of a friend of his,⁵ he should say 'carries N. N. to heaven', not 'will carry'. He then repeats the ukthavīryas,⁶ and, 'Breath (is united) with speech, may I be united with speech. Eye is united with mind, may I be united with mind. Hearing is united with the self, may I be united with the self. May I have greatness, glory, good fortune, enjoyment, the slobha⁷ and the stoma verse, sound, renown, prosperity, fame, and fruition.' ⁸

Lātyāyana's version given above. The Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 17, 1, has: premām vācam vadisyāmi bahu karisyantīm bahu karisyan bahor bhūyah svar gamisyantīm svar gamisyan. Bloomfield (Vedic Concordance, p. 642b) gives Lātyāyana and Śānkhāyana as having svargam, &c., instead of svar gam', &c., but that this is quite wrong may be proved, not only by its inherent improbability but also by Śānkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 8 (the Āranyaka unluckily did not come to Bloomfield's notice), where occurs svar hy eṣā vāg gamisyantī bhavati; see my note, J. R. A. S., 1908, p. 204.

4 i. e. not to the Hot; in an ekāha or ahīna, but in a sattra. Cf. V, 3, 3, n. 1, and

III, 2, 4, n. 2.

This seems to be the same. If so, this passage recognizes the performance for a friend against Sānkhāyana Ārauyaka, I, I; the case of an enemy is specially dealt with in that Ārauyaka, I, 8; nāmum being said. The future is not to be used, for the present is to be used to signify the immediate attainment of heaven (Sāyana).

6 The six Mantras, ghojāya tvā, ślokāya tvā, śrnvate tvā, upašrnvate tvā, āśrutyai tvā, āśrutāya tvā, says Sāyana. Though Śāńkhāyana does not mention the ukthavīryāni here, they are frequently alluded to in the Śrauta Sūtra, VII, 9, 6; 10, 15; 19, 25; 20, 11, &c. See Sāyana's list, Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, V, 9, 21; 10, 10; 14, 16; 15, 23; 18, 13; 20, 8, and

cf. Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 327. There is one for each of the Hotr's Sastras.

⁷ Sāyaṇa explains as the fruits of these parts of the Sāman. The omission of the verb may be compared with V, 2, 2, n. 13. In Taittiriya Āraṇyaka, IV, 21, is mayi dhāyi suvīryam after a series of loc. Compare for the list, Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, V, 1, 10: bhargam me voco bhadram me voco bhūtaṃ me vocaḥ śriyaṃ me voco yaso me voco mayi bhargo mayi bhadraṃ mayi bhūtir mayi ṣrīr mayi yaṣaḥ. Scheftelowitz, Zur Stammbildung in den indo-germanischen Sprachen, takes bhargas as equal to 'beauty', quoting RV., I, 141, I: bāṭ itthā tād vāṇuṭe dhāyi darṣatāṃ devāṣya bhārgaḥ sāhaso yāto jāni; III, 62, 10; AV., XIX, 37, 1; VI, 69, 2; Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, V, 4, 5, I, and comparing Old Slavonic bliskati, &c. These sentences it will be noted contain older forms of words and expressions than the ordinary Sūtra form or the mere liturgical direction; cf. Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. viii, and V, 3, 2, n. 17. So vāg devī somaṣya tṛpyatu and duhāṃ maḥat in V, 3, 2. A precise parallel is found in Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, IV, 11: sām ahām āyuṣā l sāṃ prāṇena l sāṃ vārcasā l sāṃ pāyasā l sāṃ gaupatyēna l sāṃ rāyās pōṣena l vy āsau, &c. Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 17, 1, has: saṃ vāh prāṇena sam ahaṃ prāṇena, and saṃ caḥur, &c., as in the Aitareya, but saṃ irotram, &c., it omits.

After stoma, śloka may well be 'verse', or possibly 'hymn of praise'. Elsewhere it means, however, merely 'fame', e.g. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 4, 7 (Kānva), 18 (Mādhyandina): evām kīrtim ślókam vindate, which appears to be the only Upaniṣadic passage with that sense (Jacob, Concordance, p. 940).

* Bhujabhuktyor bhedo bhogyabhedena drastavyah (Sayana).

Having called 9 (to the Adhvaryu), he mutters the word 'speech'. There are three calls 10 (for the Hotr), at the beginning of the Śastra, of the nivid, and of the concluding verse. The Adhvaryus 11 make sounds. On this day one 12 should give much food. They cause a warrior 18 to pierce a skin. They smite the earth drum, and women play lutes 14. There is intercourse of creatures, 16 and a conversation between a student and a courtesan. The Udgātṛs sing various Sāmans for the Niṣkevalya Śastra, 16 the Hotr begins with the strophe of the Rājana Sāman. 17

In Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 12, 5, the anujapa is: vāg āyur višvāyur višvām āyur ehy eva hīndropehi višvatha vidā maghavan vidā iti. The call is adhvaryo tomsāvom, Aitareya Brāhmaņa, III, 12, &c.; Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 17, 14. Garbe, Ritual-Litteratur, pp. 100-102; Caland and Henry, L'Agnistoma, p. 232.

Not, as in the prakṛti, also with the anurūpas and dhāyyās (Sāyaṇa).

¹¹ Kārayanti is little, if any, more than a simple verb. Cf. epic examples in Holtzmann, on Whitney's Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 1041, 1068; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 156; Sanskrit-Syntax, § 304. So in Pāli and Prākrit, Müller, Pāli Grammar, p. 107. This is a preliminary to the beginning of the Sastra. Presumably the words, like those mentioned below, are intended to frighten away demons, &c. Cf. Cook, Journal of Hellenic Studies, 1902, p. 15; Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, III, 31; Crooke, Northern India, p. 196; my Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, p. 78.

13 The ceremony is described at greater length in Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 15. The king or his representative pierces the skin with three arrows, which are not allowed to penetrate through. The idea is clearly a rain spell. The arrows pierce the sky and bring down the waters the sky imprisons. This idea may explain the archer in the myth of the descent of Soma, though the idea appears distorted there (Bloomfield, J. A. O. S., XVI, 22 sq.). For the acc. and instr., cf. Gaedicke, Der Accusativ im Veda, pp. 275 sq.; Liebich, Bezz. Beitr., XI, 272 sq.; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 225, 226; Vergl. Synt., II, 117, 118; III, 2, 4, n. 16.

The drumming is performed on a raw hide, stretched over a hole dug in the ground outside the vedi, by means of the tail of the sacrificial animal, Śāńkhāyana, XVII, 5. There are also four or six ordinary drums used. The wives used various instruments, ghāṭakarkarīr avaghaṭarikāḥ kānḍavīnāḥ pichorā iti, ibid., XVII, 3, 12. Another list, partly the same, in Lāṭyāyana, IV, 2, 1-8. Cf. Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth., II, 190; J. A. O. S., XXIII, 309.

Cf. Taittirīya Samhitā, VII, 5, 9, 4. The conversation of the student and courtesan is given in Lāṭyāyana, IV, 3, 9-11; the mithuna in 17; cf. ¹⁶ Sāyaņa explains that the Udgātṛs sing their Sāmans first of all ending with the rājanam sāman, the first tristich of which serves as the commencement of the Nişkevalya Śastra of the Hotr. On the priests, cf. Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pp. 383 sq.; Weber, Ind. Stud., X.

17 The Lātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, which goes into further detail, mentions also as part of the

6. 'That was the oldest in the worlds' (RV., X, 120), 'That fame of thine, O Maghavan, through thy greatness' (RV., X, 54), 'He groweth more for strength' (RV., VI, 30), and the three verses beginning, 'Thee, manliest of men, with songs, with hymns' (RV., III, 51, 4), (are the commencement of the Sastra). Here some say that one should take from the body-verses the two quarter-verses, 'Join with the sweet what is sweeter than sweet' (RV., X, 120, 3°), and 'The sweet with the sweet hast thou conquered' (ibid., 3d), and replace them with the wing quarter-verses, 'O Maghavan, O Indra, the strong steeds' (RV., VII, 33, 22°), and 'O Indra, grant a cow, a chariot horse' (RV., VI, 46, 2°), and put in place of the latter those other two. He thus wins the profit of a cow and ceremonies a fight between an Ārya (Vaiśya) and a Śūdra for a skin which is compared with the sun, and the appointment of persons to praise and criticize the acts of the priests, IV, 3, perhaps in order to avert the evil eye (Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, III, 172); cf. the abuse of the Roman triumph. The first ceremony clearly shows the nature of the rite as a sun spell, which has many parallels in different parts of the world (Usener, Archiv f. Religionswissenschaft, 1904, pp. 297-313), as Agnisvāmin on IV, 3, 7, points out. It is discussed in Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, V, 2, 6, 7. For ritual alσχρολογία as stimulating vegetation or serving a piacular purpose, cf. Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, III, 104; IV, 267; Frazer, Golden Bough, I³, 97; Crooke, Northern India, p. 193; v. Schroeder, Mysterium und Mimus, pp. 309 sq.

See I, 3, 3-8. This Khanda deals with the body and the sūdadohas verse following it. It corresponds to Śāńkhāyana Āraņyaka, II, I, and Śrautra Sūtra, XVIII, I.

² Sānkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 14, 7; Āranyaka, II, 1; 11, omits the last two pādas and does not replace them, but puts them before the dvipadās. The stanza RV., VII, 33, 22°, occurs in the right, the stanza RV., VI, 46, 2°, in the left wing. The Śatapatha Brāhmana, VIII, 6, 2, 3, seems to agree with Śānkhāyana, though not precisely; Eggeling, S.B. E., XLIII, 113, n. Eggeling's explanation of the ardharcau in the Śatapatha as referring to RV., X, 120, 3°d, and VIII, 20, 1°b, seems to overlook the fact that in the Śānkhāyana the ardharca, 'X, 120, 3°d, carries with it the ardharca, VIII, 69, 2°d, making up in all ardharcau; they are called tau in Aranyaka, II, 1.

This is practically a defining genitive. Cf. IV: rāyaḥ suvīryam, and contrast Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 295; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 65. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, pp. 153, 154) gives examples of the genitive of material and origin, and see Vergl. Synt., I, 340, 346 sq. The construction sam pakṣayoḥ palanāya is curious. The sam is joined with palanāya by Sāyaṇa, and we might compare for this infra, upa-apīle, V, 3, 3; or sam might be taken with dhalte (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1081). The use of the genitive a with palanāya (as with āplyai, Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 5; 6, &c.) disentitles it to be ranked as a real infinitive: cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 48; Whitney, l.c., §§ 287, 982. The easy conjecture sam, though rather tempting, is unnecessary. The conjunction of cow and horse is truly Vedic, cf. Indra's hymn, RV., X, 119, 1: Iti vā iti me māno gām āśvām sanuyām iti; Atharvaveda, XII, 1, 5: gavām aśvānām, &c.; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 57; Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 346b. For ātman dhatte, cf. Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XIV, 28, 9; XV, 6, 7.

^{*} It is possible to think of paksayoh as a dative (cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 12, for the confusion of °bhyām and oh forms), but this is not essential.

a horse, and the wings are made strong to fly. He intertwines these hymns with the verse nadam va odafinām (RV., VIII, 69, 2), joining quarter-verse with quarter-verse, making them into brhafī verses, so that the quarter-verses of the nada hymn are second. He also inserts in the first stanza the syllables of the word puruṣa, one in each quarter-verse, at the end, save in the case of the third quarter-verse. Thus does he intertwine them. We will also set (a verse forth) as an example, thus: 4—tad id āsa bhuvaneşu jyeştham pu nadam va odafinām t yato jajña ugras tveşanṛmno ru nadam yoyuvafino 3 m tl sadyo jajñāno ni rināti śatrūn patim vo aghnyānām t anu yam višve madanty ūmāh so dhenūnām isudhyaso 3 m tl

The verse should be thrice repeated.⁵ Should (the Udgātṛs) sing as the Rājana Sāman other verses which occur (in the hymns enumerated), then (the Hotr) recites them in their own ⁶ place, but here (at the beginning of the Śastra) he recites these verses (i. e. RV., X, 120, 1-3). If the other verses do not occur in these hymns, he should take as many out of the hymns mentioned and recite the (other verses) in their place, but still recite these verses (RV., X, 120, 1-3) here. (The verses removed) in this case are to be those before the sūdadohas verse. The Śastra always begins with the verses commencing, 'That was the

The pluti and the om after the fourth pāda are probably meant. Cf. Šānkhāyana, ll. cc., and I, 5, 1. Rājendralāla and the Ānandāśrama edition are both inconsistent. For the pluti, see Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 297-300. Both isudhyaso 3 m and yuvatino 3 m present curious forms, which may be compared with the rule recognized in Pāṇini, VI, 1, 95, that om with a preceding a vowel gives om, and this Sandhi in its turn has early parallels (Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 64). So in Mānava Gṛḥya Sūtra, I, 4, 4, vāṇom stands, in my opinion, for vāṇi+om (cf. II, 7, n. 1). See also Caland and Henry, L'Agnistoma, pp. 112, 166, 178, 232, 237, 238, &c., for examples of this Sandhi.

⁶ Literally, 'in their place.' The Udgātṛs may either adopt tad id āsa as the beginning or stotriya, or use other verses of the enumerated hymns, or use quite new verses, but in all cases the Hotr must stick to tad id āsa as a commencement, and must not follow the strophe of the Rājana Sāman. The new verses are to be inserted before the sūdadohas verse, omitting a corresponding number of those in the ordinary version. If the verses occur in the hymns enumerated, then they are simply recited in their own original place, since the whole of the first three hymns is included in the Sastra, and the three verses, I, 51, 4-6, count presumably as a hymn for this purpose. Cf. n. 3 on V, 2, I. For the construction, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, V, 7, 1: mahānāmnīṣv atra stuvate iākvareṇa sāmnā.

oldest in the worlds' (RV., X, 120, 1). The reply of the Adhvaryu is not altered. (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse, beginning, 'Of that milk yielder' (RV., VIII, 69, 3).

Agnistoma, pp. 55, 56; Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 104, n. 45.

The verses laid down in Sānkhāyana are, after a tūṣṇiṃśaṃsa of three verses, RV., X, 120, 1-3; 4-9; X, 29, 1-8; X, 55, 6-8; X, 54, 6; X, 55, 2; X, 56, 1; making 23, the first being twice repeated, and the whole interspersed with the pādas of the nada hymn. In X, 120, 3, however, the third and fourth pādas together with the corresponding pādas of the nada hymn are omitted, and placed before the dvipadās (II, 11).

After the body-verses the order in Sānkhāyana and the Aitareya differs as shown below :-

^{*} It should be noted, however, that this division, which is that adopted by Dr. Friedländer, is doubtful as regards the two sides, which (Introd., p. 10) he divides into shoulder, arm, and hand. For the word skandha (really 'cervical column', Hoernle, J.R.A.S., 1906, p. 918) occurs in the section dealing with the graiva verses, and the word akṣā (rc) or akṣa, both of which are used in Āranyaka, II, 3, as regards the part rendered as 'shoulder', seems rather to denote 'collar-bone'. At least, so I infer from the fact that akṣaka has this sense in Caraka and Suśruta (Hoernle, J.R.A.S., 1907, p. 13), and akṣa this sense in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa. Possibly the reading should be akṣam in Āraṇyaka, l.c.: cf. akṣa sthaviṣṭha (sic) just after, and cf. I, 2, 2, n. 11, but akṣā rc is good sense. The exact divisions are probably (a) collar-bone, (b) arm, (c) hand.

(Then come) the neck-verses. 'Of Indra, the smiter, the powerful, the earnest, who has the world, are might and strength, great and delightful. The mighty overcomes

² The translation again is purely conjectural. Whitney, by reading adhres (infin.), dhysandm dhrsitam, and 'vyathi, makes it, '(He is) not to be dared against; (his) might, dared, dares daring against (others); as, of old, his fame (was) unwavering, Indra's might (is) not to be dared against.' Taking the Aitareya text as it stands, I think we must resolve nadharsa as na ādharṣa(h) and take the word as an adjective meaning 'impetuous'. I think nādhṣṣa, however, almost certainly right (cf. RV., V, 8, 5), 'He is not to be dared against.' The editions and Whitney with Sayana read the two words following as a dadharsa dadhrsanam. This is quite possible, though the change in quantity is remarkable, but it seems to have escaped notice that å dadharsad adhrsanam is quite possible, and could have the same sense while keeping the prefix ā in both cases and restoring the metre (ā dadharṣad ā l dhṛṣāṇām) and explaining the Śāńkhāyana text. If nādhrsa is read, I would not take the participle as a neuter nom., but translate, 'He dares against the daring; his might is dread.' This avoids the inconvenience of the idea of might daring, and the rare use of the present participle as a finite verb. The second half of the line is very obscure. Ati vyáthih occurs also in RV., X, 86, 2, and here as there Sāyaņa explains it as a verbal form, which is quite impossible, 'When Indra caused his foe to fall.' It might however mean, 'When trembling (cf. Naigh., II, 13) passed from Indra,' referring to the terrors which so often fell on Indra before he showed his might. For a different theory as to vyáthih (= track), see RV., IV, 4, 3 (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 331); AV., IV, 21, 3, with Whitney's note; and see Geldner, Vedische Studien, II, 29. Geldner holds that vyáthih originally means 'Falschheit' and thence 'Malice, Zorn, Ungnade, Arger, Hass, Feindschaft', and so has the gen. of the subject or object. So he renders RV., IV, 4, 3, as, 'no one approaches thee when angry,' and in AV., VI, 33, 2, takes purå yáthā vyathíh (this is the AV. accentuation as in AV., IV, 21, 3) Iráva Índrasya nádhrze lávah, as 'Like a citadel (cf. ürja and ürj, Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 185) unapproachable, is the anger, the fame, the not him who is exceeding strong. His vigour is dreadful. When aforetime trembling passed from him, Indra's might was dreadful. May he give us that wealth, wealth of tawny hue. Indra is the lord, the most mighty among men.' (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse. The head-verses are in gāyatrī metre, beginning, 'The singers call aloud to Indra' (RV., I, 7, 1). If (the Udgātṛs) sing the Sāman with other verses which occur (in the service), then the two sets are to be interchanged in place. If the other verses are ones not occurring, or some occur and some not, (then they should be inserted in the place of verses occurring which should be taken out.) The last verse of the hymn (should be recited, the insertion being made before it), and then the sūdadohas verse. Then come strength of Indra.' Unhappily he does not cite or discuss this passage, where of course pura cannot be made by any effort of the imagination to be a noun. But accepting the sense 'wrath', then AV., VI, 33, 2, would give the sense 'As aforetime, the anger', &c., and this passage might be rendered, 'As of old (pura yat) his anger is excessive' (att), and on the whole this is perhaps the least unlikely version of a very difficult and probably corrupt text. Cf. v. Schroeder, Mysterium und Mimus, p. 316, n. 2, whose version of RV., X, 86, 2, suggests 'because of anger'.

For the form of the verse, cf. e.g. Vājasaneyi Samhitā, I, 8: dhūr asi dhūrva dhūrvantam I dhūrva tam yo'smān dūrvati tam dhūrva yam dhūrvāmah, and Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 159. In the next verse the AV. reads tām (Ppp. no) urum and tuvistamas (APr., III, 96; IV, 59), while the Ppp., the comm., and one MS. have dadhātu, and the commentary on the AV. and two MSS. (out of three) in Śāńkhāyana have °sadriam. One MS. of Śāńkhāyana has purum, the others puram. Tavástama occurs in RV., I, 190, 5; II, 33, 3. For the dat, inf. in e, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 970.

This is Sāyana's version. The Anandāsrama reads ubhayāsamsthā na viparvayo with the opposite meaning, but this is less probable. The apodosis to the last clause is borrowed from the indication in V, 1, 6. As the next clause shows, the insertion of the new verses is to be made before the last verse preceding the sūdadohas verse and not directly before that verse. The word samāmnātāsu refers here to verses occurring in the hymn itself. The form ubhayāsaṃsthānaviparyayah, however, presents great difficulty, for the use of ubhaya in compounds is confined to cases like ocabra, opani, ohasta, &c., and it is hardly likely that the second member of the compound is asamsthana, or that the fem. is kept because re is fem. (Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 49-52). But, further, there is no special meaning in samsthana, and the conjecture ubhayāsām sthānaviṭaryayaḥ is possible. Ubhayāsām (rcām) is precisely correct for two sets of three verses (cf. RV., I, 26, 9; 189, 7, and regularly later, cf. Bloomfield. Vedic Concordance, p. 272), and Sayana's version in no way confirms either the reading of Rajendralala or the Anandasrama. The form would be very rare, the ordinary feminine being ubhayi (common in the Aitareya Brahmana), and possibly ubhaya is the Vedic adverb. It may be noted that R's version of the comm., tāsām arthe (R4 against R1 and R5), alone makes sense, S's tāsām madhye being nonsense. Cf. Introd., p. q.

The Sānkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 2, gives the head-verses thus, RV., I, 7, I-3; I, 6, 7-9; I, 84, 13-15; VIII, 76, 10-12; VIII, 93, I-3, any of those used by the Sāman singers. Some use I, 50, I-9, to correspond with the Sāman singers. If the latter use only I, 50, I-3, then the reciter can take any two of the other treas to make up the nine verses. As in the Aitareya,

the vertebrae-verses. 'The Soma is pressed for thee, come to the sacrifice, rejoice in the carouse, rich in gifts, for wealth. O Indra, thou art generous and young for us to sing.' He can overcome his foes in slaying Vṛtras; he is skilful and a plunger. We magnify our leader, Indra. Impetuous, bright, the leader, the dweller on the mountains, hastening towards you, Indra, shouting aloud, with his eternal steeds.' (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse. The three sets of verses, neck, head, and vertebrae, are all to be repeated with a pause at the half-verse.

2. The (verses of the) right wing are connected with the Rathantara Sāman.¹ The Rathantara has for its strophe, 'We praise thee, O hero' (RV., VII, 32, 22), and for its antistrophe, 'Thee for the first drink' (RV., VIII, 3, 7), both being

* These verses contain an unusual number of rare expressions, and the uncertainty as to their accent adds to the difficulty. The reading of vijárah is very doubtful. R in the commentary, which is followed by Bloomfield, Vodic Concordance, S, and the MSS. have vijarah, while Sāyana perhaps read vidurah (višiṣṭalokadvārāni gṛṇadhyā asmadagre kathayitum atra hṛṣṭo bhava). I have translated the vijárah (? vijarāḥ) of R's text, and taken gṛṇadhyai as an infinitive practically equivalent to an imperative, 'Let us sing of,' cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 411 sq.; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 982 d; Hopkins, A. J. P., XIII, 21 sq.; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 216.

⁵ Vigāhāḥ, Sāyaṇa renders as sevitum šakyaḥ. Cf. RV., III, 3, 5, where it is an epithet of Agni. The sá no netāraṃ looks like an imitation of older verses, such as RV., II, 6, 5, without much regard to their construction. Possibly the reading should be (cf. on IV) sáṃ (which would become san before no). So Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā, IV, 12, 6, has sa dāšuṣe kiratu bhūrī vāmam, but in Taittirīya Saṃhitā, III, 3, 11: saṃ, &c. Eṣāḥ may be from the root iṣ (cf. Max Müller's conjecture on RV., IV, 2, 4, S. B. E., XLVI, 320) and meaning 'swift'. S takes sasāhatur as one word, but this makes nonsense of Sāyaṇa. The form is unusual, see Whitney,

* Sámajaḥ (for the form, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 73, 74) apparently means the 'bringer-together'. Rjīṣi cannot have the sense which it normally has (see Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth., I, 235 sq.; Bloomfield, J. A. O. S., XVI, 39) and which is here ascribed to it by Sāyaṇa, rjīṣopalakṣitasomarasavān. In RV., III, 32, 1, it seems to mean impetuous, and cf. rjīṣiḍ, ibid., I, 32, 6. Vām he explains as the husband and wife engaged in the sacrifice. Rājendralāla reads vāsu which is quite wrong, though followed in Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 205*. It would of course be acc. with sāmajaḥ. Śāsvadbhir evaih possibly merely means 'as usual', or 'in his eternal courses'. Cf. évaiḥ, 'in due way,' RV., I, 68, 4; 95, 6; aryāḥ évaiḥ, IV, 2, 12; S. B. E., XLVI, 437. These verses are unparalleled in other texts.

This means, as Sāyaṇa and Sānkhāyana show, that there is a pause at the end of the half-verse (and om at the end of the verse). The other possibilities are (1) pause at each pāda, with om at half-verse, (2) no pause, om at end. The Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra contains examples of

^{*} If so, it might be taken as two words and translate it 'the giver is to be praised'. Cf. ví duró grntse in RV., VI, 35, 5, and cf. Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, XII, 10.

pragatha verses. These four brhafis he turns into six.2 (Then come the hymns), 'I shall proclaim the deeds of Indra' (RV., I, 32); 'In thee since our father, Indra' (RV., VII, 18), fifteen verses only; 'Who is sharp-horned, terrible like a bull' (RV., VII, 19); 'Dread is he born for strength, the mighty' (RV., VII, 20); 'Ye have uttered glorious prayers' (RV., VII, 23); 'For greatness, O dread Indra, with thine aid' (RV., VII, 25), five hymns; 'From far or near may Indra be with us' (RV., IV, 20) is the sampāta hymn. 'Thus in the Soma, in the carouse' (RV., I, 80, 1), is a pankti verse. (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse. (The verses of the) left wing are connected with the Brhat Saman. The Brhat has for its strophe, 'For thee we hail' (RV., VI, 46, 1), and for its antistrophe, 'Come hither to the worship' (RV., VIII, 61, 7), both being pragatha verses. These four brhafis he turns into six. (Then come the hymns), 'Praise him who surpasses in strength' (RV., VI, 18); 'Thou art attached to the pressed Soma, Indra' (RV., VI, 23), three hymns; 'Thou art the only lord of riches, O lord of riches' (RV., VI, 31), eight hymns; 'What! whose sacrifice has he increased?' (RV., IV, 23), is the sampāta hymn. 'Indra is born for the carouse' (RV., I, 81, 1) is a pankti verse. (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse. The right wing is connected with the Rathantara Saman, and so is the pancadasa stoma.3 There are one hundred and one (verses) in it, and it is called the Vasisthaprāsāha. The left wing is connected with the Brhat Sāman, and so is the saptadaśa stoma. There are one hundred and two verses, and it is called the Bharadvājaprāsāha. The (verses of the) tail, as being dvipadas, are connected with the Bhadra Saman. There are nine verses from the Samhitā, 'These worlds let us conquer' (RV., X, 157), and 'Come hither with thy splendour' (RV., X, 172), and there are also other verses not from the Samhita.4 (These are), 'Ye priests, sing forth a song to Indra, who beyond all others slays the foe, that he may rejoice.' 5

² The two pragāthas give only four brhatīs. The six are made up by repeating twice the fourth pāda of RV., VII, 32, 22, and reading with it the first half of RV., VII, 32, 23. Then the fourth pāda of this second brhatī is twice repeated, and with the second half of RV., VII, 32, 23, makes the third brhatī. By V, 1, 6, for the pāda, RV., VII, 32, 23°, is to be substituted RV., X, 120, 3°.

^{*} These are given also in Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 15, where they follow esa brahmā, &c. Some are also in the Sāmaveda. The two RV. hymns have five and four verses.

'Among the gods the singers sing the song; the youthful Indra, famous, takes up the strain.' 'Resting beneath the plaksa,' rich in honey, rejoicing in wealth, may we meditate on thee, Indra.' 'O thou to whom, most strong, we have recourse, giver on all sides, from all sides bring us (gifts).' 'Thou art the manliest, the lord, most generous to win us booty, when the (rite) is duly paid.' 'For thou alone 'o dost rule from of old, unsurpassed in might.' 'Do thou sing

⁶ Śāňkhāyaṇa has marutaḥ svarkāḥ, a much better reading, which obviates the difficulties of devátāṣv árkāḥ with the unusual accent and use of árkāḥ. Here I would read devátāḥ svarkāḥ, the omission of ḥ before sv being quite common in all Sanskrit MSS. The Sāmaveda, I, 445; II, 464, has Marútaḥ, and the phrase Marútaḥ svarkāḥ occurs also in V, I, I. The translation of the last words given by Benfey is: 'gepriesen wird der hehre Jüngling, Indra,' but though frutāḥ, κλντόs, inclitus, perhaps means 'famous' here, å stobhati must mean something like 'sings in return'. Ĉf. n. 11, below. A noun, prástobha, is unlikely. Passive particles like prastubhānāḥ, RV., IV, 3, 12, 'incited by shouting,' afford no support for a passive use here.

The reading in Sānkhāyana and in Sāmaveda, I, 444; II, 465, is puzyema and ta, which explain the accent on dhimahe (for which, cf. Benfey, Samaveda, Glossar, p. 100; Whitney, Roots, p. 82, and in Colebrooke's Essayr3, I, 111, 112), although the accent might be otherwise explained. There is a parallel difference of reading between Sankhāyana Āranyaka, XII, 16, and the parallel passages pasyema - pasyantah. The words sipa praksé are explained by Sayana as one word, plaksavrksasampāditāni pātrāny atra plaksašabdena vivaksitāni tesām samīpavarttī vagatradela utatraksak, but they must mean 'beneath the plaksa tree rich in honey', as rendered by Aufrecht, Rgveda, II, xlvi, n., or 'in a dwelling rich in honey', as translated by Benfey, who derives the word from pra+ /ksi, but who also (p. 130) suggests a derivation from pra+ / ghas and a meaning 'food'. To take it from upa+ / prc as an infinitive (as in RV., V, 47. 6) is possible but not probable. In favour of Benfey's derivation from \(\lambda ksi \) is the form vanapraksam, Sāmaveda, I, 580, but there is a v.l. vanakraksam. The last words mean, according to Benfey, 'lass deine Schätz' uns mehren, bergen, Indra!' according to Aufrecht, ' mögen wir unseren Wohlstand mehren, und den von dir verliehenen bewahren, Indra.' The translation given above is that of Savana, and may well represent the view of the passage taken by the author. The plaksa (Ficus infectoria) is used as an upper barhis, Satapatha Brāhmana, III, 8, 3, 10. Cf. Zimmer, Altindisches Leben, p. 59.

* In any case viivátodāvan must be considered as practically one word. Probably viivatodāvan should be read as in the Sāmaveda, I, 437; cf. Sāmavidhāna Brāhmaņa, II, I, 5.

Bloomfield (Vedic Concordance, p. 879*) treats the phrase as one word.

Supranīte is so rendered by Sāyaṇa. Hillebrandt in his text of Sānkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 15, 5, apparently by conjecture, reads supranītē, followed by Bloomfield (l.e., p. 998b), but both his MSS., B and K, read supranīte, which is presumably the older reading. I think the reading should be supranīte unaccented, and would translate, 'Thou, O good leader, &c.,' the word being found frequently in this use, and the voc. e.g. at RV., III, 1, 16; 15, 4. Neither this nor the next verse is in the Sāmaveda; tvam hy eka ītiṣe is = RV., IV, 32, 7a; mamhistho vājasātaye = RV., VIII, 4, 18a; 88, 6a.

ámrktah, cf. RV., III, 6, 4; 11, 6; IV, 3, 12; X, 104, 8.

forth, that dost know indeed all that has been aforetime or that is now.' 11 O Mitra and Varuṇa, grant us strength and food. O Indra, make us strength abounding.' 12 '(Grant) prosperity, strength, wealth, to him who seeks gain. 13 Soma impels not him who keeps not vows, gain will not come near him.' Then come three dvipadās, 14 beginning, 'This Brahman.' Then comes one dvipadā, 11 This occurs in Sāmaveda, I, 450, as: viivasya prá stobha purô vā sán yádi vehá nūnám, which Benfey renders, 'Vor allem sei gepriesen nun, seist du uns ferne oder nah,' but this passive use of √stubh is not probable. My rendering is of course very conjectural, and it supposes that āsa is read.

11 This verse, as far as the latter part is concerned, agrees with Sāmaveda, I, 455, which runs: ûrjá mitró váruṇaḥ pinvatéḍāḥ pivarīm tṣam kṛṇuhi na Indra. Here pinvata has the three deities as its subject, and its use is therefore regular. But in the Āraṇyaka text the plural is quite irregular, cf. I, 1, 2, n. 7. The text could be amended, but it is clearly original. Cf. the strange aśvibhiḥ in Jaiminīya Brāhmaṇa, III, 77; on the other hand, uttarābhyām = uttarābhiḥ in Āpastamba Gṛḥya Sūtra, VI, 14, 15 (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, 281, n.). For the form kṛṇuhī, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 704; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 62; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 310. See also Oldenberg, Prolegomena, pp. 393 sq.; Zubaty's articles in Vienna Oriental Journal, II and III; and Arnold's Vedic Metre, Chap. VI, with whose results I regret I cannot on the whole agree (cf. J. R. A. S., 1906, p. 718, and Vedic Metre, pp. xiii, xiv).

In Samaveda, I, 441, this verse runs: Idm paddm maghdm rayisine na kamam avrato hingti na spridal rayim (for the form, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1197b), meaning 'Health, a dwelling, prosperity to him who seeks wealth. The man who pays no vows obtains not his desire, he wins not wealth'. Sayana renders rayisani as havirlakeanasya dhanasya dhatari, but this cannot be right. If the Āraṇyaka form is correct, it is presumably from \(\sigma \) san, as in gosan, RV., IX, 2, 10, &c. It may of course also be the acc. or nom. neut. of rayisani, compare gosanim dhiyam, RV., VI, 53, 10. The only probable construction of the text here is 'there is (or "may there be") in the seeker of wealth, prosperity', &c. R has rayib, which is clearly wrong, as probably is spridal. For the omission of the verb in the Samaveda version, cf. RV., II, 6, 5; Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 19; Geldner, ibid., 166; n. 7 on V, 1, 5.

14 These verses (the accents are from the Samaveda) are given in Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 2, 6: eid brahmā yā rtviya Îndro nāma śrutó grņe II vi srutáyo yāthā patha Îndra tvād yantu rātāyah II tvām te chavasas pate yānti giro na saṃyātah II They occur also (with vi frutayo for vi srutayo, and naḥ for na in v. 3) in Śānkhyāna Śrauta Sūtra, IX, 6, 6, and (with pathā for patha) in Śāmaveda, II, 1116 (=I, 438), 1118 (=I, 453), 1117. The first verse also occurs in Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, II, 4, 3, 10 (pratīka only); III, 7, 9, 5; and the pratīka in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 3. See Benfey and Griffiths' translations, and for grne, Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 719. Perhaps it may be taken as a passive, cf. RV., I, 79, 12: hōtā grnīta ukthyāḥ, rendered as 'is praised' by Oldenberg (S. B. E., XLVI, 106), and see Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 264. On the other hand, cf. nn. 6 and 11 above, where a So also jarate means 'he sings' and 'he is praised' according to Oldenberg, l.c., p. 136, and Neisser, Bezz. Beitr., XIII, 298. I am not sure that in any case the passive sense is quite essential. The uncertainty is of course a sign of early date; cf. the Middle and Passive in Latin, Lindsay, Latin Language, pp. 519-521; Delbrück, Vergl. Synt., IV, 433.

'To the yokes for him' (RV., VII, 34, 4); 15 the sūdadohas verse; the dhāyyā verse, 'What he won' (RV., X, 74, 6); and the sūdadohas verse.

d stobhati and prá stobha must be active, and so here and in RV., I, 79, 12, the activity may be that of the god, not of the poet. In the RV. passage it has just been said: dgnī rākṣāmsi sedhati, and I see no reason to give a passive sense to gṛṇīte. The verses may then be rendered, 'The holy season's lord, Indra by name, famous, utters praise. Let gifts approach thee, Indra, as paths the way. Like songs, to thee, lord of might, do men fare eagerly.' It should be noted that in I, 438, the Sāmaveda has gṛṇē, but in II, 1116, gṛṇē. The accent on gṛṇē is quite unintelligible, and can only be explained by the fact that the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, l. l. ce., has gaṇē. In the Aitareya only eṣa brahmā (not as Aufrecht's text eṣā) is cited, a striking instance of the danger of arguments from the use of pratīkas only as a sign of later redaction (cf. Bloomfield's proof of the posteriority of the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa to the Vaitāna Sūtra, Introd., p. 26), since the argument would show that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa was later than the Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra; cf. also Oldenberg's remarks in Gött. gel. Anz., 1907, p. 234, n. 2.

²⁵ Śāńkhāyana adds the verses, RV., VIII, 29, 4, and VI, 17, 15, but as there are only six instead of nine new verses, the total number of dvipadā verses made up is still only twenty-one.

The Aitareva adds a twenty-second verse, see I, 4, 2.

The passages corresponding to the paksas are given in Sāhkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 4; 5, thus: the sides are divided into the aksas bāhus (arms), and prahastakas (hand). The aksas are VI, 47, 8, and a verse not from the RV., sa sūrye janayan, &c. Then for the right bāhu, the strophe of the rathantara sāman, repeated as a kakubh, then the sūdadohas verse. Then similarly the antistrophe, and a dhāyyā verse. Then the rathantara pragātha. Then the hymn, RV., VI, 22, exchanging for VI, 22, 2, the verse X, 28, 2. For the left bāhu precisely the same treatment of the brhat sāman, but no dhāyyā, and the hymn X, 28, with VI, 22, 2, as its second verse. The prahastakas are respectively VIII, 97, 13-15, and VIII, 97, 10-12.

Then comes XVIII, 6, the caturuttarāṇi, viz. RV., VIII, 92, 19-21; VIII, 12, 22-24; I. 10, 1-3; VIII, 88, 3, 4 (a pragātha, or 3-5), by half verses; I, 80, 1-3 (panktišaṃsam); VI, 34, 1-3; and I, 83, 4-6, pacchas, then the sūdadohas.

It is worthy of note that, just as the Aitareya refers only to the eja brahmā verses by the pratīka of the first verse, so the Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 15, 4, also uses only the pratīka. It is almost impossible to avoid the conclusion that this book XVIII (and presumably, also XVII) must be not earlier-nor later than the main body of the Sūtra, and this will modify to some extent Hillebrandt's view, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 25. Similarly the Āranyaka may be written after the Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra. Cf. my note in J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 410-412.

In the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 18, 1, it is said that Viśvāmitra was the seer of RV., IV, 19, 22 and 23, and that Vāmadeva asrjata them, tān kṣipraṃ samapatat, while in IV, 30, 2, RV., IV, 20 and 21, are also declared to be sampāta hymns: Vāmadevo vā imāhl lokān apasyat tan sampataih samapatat (Sieg, Die Sagenstoffe des Rgveda, p. 103).

(Then come) three verses of the hymn, 'A cake for us' (RV., VIII, 78). Of the verses following, 'Indra indeed is the drinker of Soma beyond others' (RV., VIII, 2, 4), he omits the last three. Of the others he omits, 'Sweet are the draughts of Soma, come hither' (ibid., 28), and puts in its place the verse, 'No other mighty one' (RV., VIII, 80, 1). (Then comes) one verse, 'Born with a hundred strengths' (RV., VIII, 77, 1). (Then comes) the remainder (of the hymn, RV., VIII, 92), 'Much invoked, much praised' (ibid., 2). He omits the last verse of the hymn, 'To him that hath renowned treasures' (RV., VIII, 93, 1). Of these, however, no less than 80 are satobyhatī verses. In Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII. 8-11, the aliti is given as follows: VIII, 97, 1-9; VIII, 62, 7-9; I, 36, 7, 8; VIII, 70, 7-12; = 20 pratyaksabrhatīs: then VI, 46, 3-10; VII, 32, 1, 2, 4-9; VII, 32, 12-21; VII, 32, 24-27; VIII, 1, 1-4; mā u tvā purūvaso; VIII, 3, 9-12; VIII, 3, 17-20; VIII, 4, 1-14; VIII, 61, 3-6; VIII, 61, 9-18; VIII, 66, 3-14. Hillebrandt in his index gives the references differently, but this is apparently due to a confusion between pragathas and stanzas. There are really 43 pragathas. The one ma u, &c., is not apparently from the Samhita; Hillebrandt's indices all ignore it, and it does not appear in Bloomfield's Vedic Concordance. Of the last six, three only are selected to make up the 40. Then come 20 more pratyaksabrhatis, VIII, 1, 5-24. Then 20 more: VIII, 1, 25-29; VIII, 33, 1-15. Then 40 pragathas, the three over the first 40, VIII, 70, 1-6; VIII, 88, 1, 2; VIII, 90, 1-6; VIII, 99, 1-8; VIII, 49-55 (the Valakhilyas), omitting VIII, 53, 5, 6; 54, 3, 4. Then I, 175, 1; VI, 42, 4; III, 53, 18; VI, 47, 19; VIII, 78, 10; VIII, 89, 7; VIII, 101, 13; X, 102, 1; 3; 12; making 10 brhatis, and III, 44; 45, making up 20 in all. The whole barhati aliti consists therefore of 80 brhatis and 80 (not 160 as Friedländer) pragathas, giving (80 + 80 =) 160 brhatis and 80 satobrhatis, just as in the Aitareya. Cf. Sānkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 8 and 9, for the gayatrī and bārhatī alītis. KEITH

According to Sānkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra the verses are: RV., VIII, 13, 1-33; VIII, 12, 1-21, 25-33; VIII, 15, 1-12; VIII, 24, 1-27; I, 84, 7-9; V, 40, 1-3, = 36 treas or 108 uṣṇih stanzas, XVIII, 12. Then, XVIII, 13, come RV., IV, 30, 1-6; IV, 30, 9-22; IV, 32, 1-21; I, 30, 1-15; VIII, 14, 1-15; VIII, 16, 1-12; VIII, 64, 1-12; VIII, 82, 1-9 (Hillebrandt's I, 30, 1-5, and VIII, 82, 1-7 are slips), making 104 gāyatrī stanzas. Then VIII, 21, 1-16, kakubh pragāthas; then VIII, 98, 1-12 in uṣṇihs. We thus get 240 stanzas, consisting of 120 (108+12) uṣṇihs, 104 gāyatrīs, 8 kakubhs, and 8 satobrhatīs (i.e. VIII, 21, 1-16). The Śānkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 10, points out that to get 240 uṣṇihs it is necessary to take away four syllables from each of the 80 satobrhatīs, which with 160 brhatīs make up (V, 2, 4) the bārhatī treāšītī. Then the 8 kakubhs give 8 uṣṇihs, while the 8 satobrhatīs yield each three, or 24 in all, sets of four syllables. Adding the 80 and the 24 we have 104 sets of four syllables, which added to the gāyatrīs give 104 uṣṇihs, to which again must be added 120 uṣṇihs, 8 kakubhs, and 8 uṣṇihs, left after the deduction of 24 syllables from each satobrhatī, making a grand total of 240 uṣṇihs.

This complicated version, as Dr. Friedländer points out, probably arises from an attempt to remedy the apparent inaccuracy of the Aitareya in permitting 80 satobrhatīs in the bārhatī alīti. Its success is not obvious, and that the attempt should be made may fairly be reckoned a sign of lateness.

24, 1). Then three tristichs, 'Who alone bestowed' (RV., I, 84, 7), 'Come hither to what is pressed with stones' (RV., V, 40, 1), and, 'Under whose sway Sambara' (RV., VI, 43, 1). Gāyatrī verses become uṣṇih verses by equalization. Every seven gayatris make six usnihs. (Then come) the hymn beginning, 'If, Indra, I, like thee' (RV., VIII, 14, 1), and the two hymns beginning, 'The lord of men' (RV., VIII, 16, 1). He omits the last two stanzas of the second hymn. He omits the last stanza of the hymn, 'For the strength that slays Vrtra' (RV., III, 37). (Then come) three hymns beginning, 'The doer of fair deeds to our aid' (RV., I, 4, 1). Then two hymns beginning, 'Indra, lasting wealth' (RV., I, 8, 1). He omits the last stanza of the hymn, 'Who has brought from afar' (RV., VI, 45). Then come three stanzas of the hymn beginning, 'Let splendid feasts be ours' (RV., I, 30, 13). (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse. In the case of all these three sets of eighty tristichs, there is made a pause after the half-stanza. The eighty tristichs are the food, and the vasa verses are the stomach (of the bird). The vasa hymn begins,2 'Worthy of thee, O wealthy one' (RV., VIII, 46, 1), and ends, 'Gainer, gainer of good' (ibid., 20). The verse, 'Giving wealth' (ibid., 15) is a dvipadā, and, 'Now then' (ibid.) an ekapadā. It ends with the verse, 'Of that milk yielder' (RV., VIII, 69, 3). (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse.

² Cf. I, 5, I. The explanation of the number 21 stanzas given by Sāyaṇa there and here is that the passage ends with verse 20 and the sūdadohas verse makes up the 21. This view may be supported by the fact that the sūdadohas verse is here set out with its prafūka. It is most probable that we should understand that the 21 stanzas are made up by the inclusion of the sūdadohas verse, and then that there follows again that verse in its usual capacity of separating the different parts of the whole. Sāyaṇa does not clearly appear thus to have taken it, but it seems most probably so, and the translation is based on this view.

Sānkhāyana in Āraṇyaka, II, 11, and Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 14, takes the whole hymn, VIII, 46, as being used. The priority of the Aitareya is evident as vv. 21-24 contain a dānastuti of Pṛthuśravas. The same remark applies to the Śaṭapatha Brāhmaṇa, see Eggeling,

S. B. E., XLII, 112.

It is worthy of note that an annotator in S² considers that Sāyaṇa's explanation of the number 21 is inconsistent (this is not the ease) and inaccurate. He argues that the 21 stanzas are made up by splitting ver. 15 into an ekapadā and a dvipadā. This view is at first sight plausible, but the mention here of these divisions is more probably due to an explanation of pathopapādam in I, 5, 1, and so Sāyaṇa there takes it. The other view is, however, accepted by Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 112. n. 2, who points out that the version of the Mahaduktha contained in MS. Ind. Off. 1729 D gives ver. 15 as an ekapadā and a dvipadā, which certainly tells against Sāyaṇa.

For gāyatrīs and uṣṇihs, cf. Rgveda Prātišākhya, XVI, 10 sq.; for sampadā, Śāṅkhāyana

ADHYĀYA 3.

(Then come) the thigh (verses). In the hymn, 'O Indra and Agni, ye two' (RV., VIII, 40), (he recites) the half-stanzas as gāyatrīs,² but the second half of the second as an anustubh, up to the last stanza. The hymn, 'To thee, the mighty, the intoxicated one' (RV., X, 50), has nivids inserted. Between the two hymns, 'Who in the forest as it were has been set down' (RV., X, 29), and 'Who first is born, the wise one' (RV., II, 12), are inserted the hymn, 'Come hither standing on thy chariot-seat' (RV., III, 43), and the stanza, 'Wandering alone in the midst of many' (RV., X, 55, 5). As many decades of verses in tristubh and jagatī addressed to Indra as they insert, after transforming them into brhafīs, so many years may a man be fain to live beyond the normal life, at the rate of ten verses for a year ; or he need not do so. (Then come) the

¹ Cf. I, 5, 1. The verses are RV., VIII, 40, 1-10; X, 50, 1-7; X, 29, 1-18; III, 43, 1-8; X, 55, 5; II, 12, 1-15; X, 178, 1-3; an ekapadā; I, 11, 1-8; VII, 23, 1-6; VII, 24, 1-4, 6, 5.

In Śānkhāyana the vafa hymn is followed, XVIII, 15, by the dvipadās, I, 2, 2, above; then comes the Aindrāgna sūkta, VIII, 40. Then the āvapana, RV., X, 167, 1; II, 21, 1-6; I, 84, 10-12; VII, 31, 10-12; VI, 46, 1-3. Then the ānusṭubha samāmnāya, RV., I, 10, 4-12; I, 11, 1-8; I, 84, 1-6; I, 72, 2-5; I, 176, 1-5; V, 35, 1-7; V, 38, 1, 2; V, 39, 1-4; VI, 44, 1-6; VIII, 34, 1-15; VIII, 63, 4-6; VIII, 89, 5, 6; VIII, 95; X, 152. Then the tri-ṭupchata, RV., I, 32; VI, 25; II, 12; II, 14; III, 43; III, 46; III, 51, 4-6; IV, 16; VII, 24; VII, 23; VIII, 69, 13-15. See Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 16-20; Āranyaka, II, 12-16. These confused masses of verses show distinctly the later character of the Śānkhāyana ritual. See also Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 6, 2, 3, where RV., X, 50, is called the spine; IX, I, 1, 44; 3, 3, 19; in the last passage the vafa is given as 35 in Eggeling (S. B. E., XLIII, 223), which must be an error as there are only 33 verses, cf. Introd., p. 36.

³ The second verse is a dvipadā in sakvarī. The first three feet make up a gāyatrī, that is, they are recited with a pause after the second foot and om after the third. The second four feet are recited as an anuṣṭubh, with a pause after the second and om after the fourth. The last is a triṣṭubh, and it is recited by pādas, that is, a pause after the first foot and om after the second. The remaining ten verses are in mahāpankti, and therefore are each divided into two gāyatrīs for recitation. It is characteristic of the deliberate differences between Aitareya and Sānkhāyana that the latter, XVIII, 16, divides ver. 2 into an anuṣṭubh and a gāyatrī, not vice versa.

This must be the meaning, and so Sāyaṇa takes it. He, however, takes na vā as meaning that each bṛhatī produces a year of life, contradicting the ten-bṛhatī rule. This is not impossible, in which event he points out the insertion of the nine tṛṣṭubh verses gives eleven bṛhatīs or eleven years' longer life. But it is not natural, and it ignores tṛṣṭubjagatīnām, there being no jagatīs in the nine verses, and therefore in accordance with the ordinary use hymn, 'That steed impelled by the gods' (RV., X, 178), and the ekapadā, 'Indra rules all.' (Then comes) the anuṣṭubh hymn, 'All songs have caused Indra to grow' (RV., I, 11). Having recited the first half-stanza of the first stanza of this hymn, he combines the first half-stanza of the second stanza with the second half-stanza (of the first stanza), (joining) quarter-stanza with quarter-stanza so as to make anuṣṭubhs. Up to the last stanza he combines every succeeding half-stanza with the preceding. The rest are done in the usual way. (There are) six verses beginning, 'Drink, Indra, the Soma, let it gladden thee' (RV., VII, 23, 1). Having recited four verses of the hymn, 'Thy place, O Indra, is made on thy seat' (RV., VII, 24), and then joining the last stanza, he ends with the second last stanza. The Sastra finished, he mutters the ukthasampad. In the place of the ukthavīrya the ukthadoha is used.

2. 'Thou art the head of the world,' the essence of speech, the fire of breath, of na vā in Āśvalāyana (e. g. Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 5, 22), Śaunaka's pupil, a I take it to mean that, unless one is āyuṣkāma, one need not insert the verses. Cf. Sāyaṇa's note: yady āyuṣkāmaḥ syāt tadānīm . . . prakṣipet, whence it appears that he did not regard the āvapana as essential. He may be combining two differing previous comments. The idea is curiously inverted.

Not in the Rgveda. See Sāmaveda, I, 456; Vājasaneyi Samhitā, XXXVI, 8; Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VIII, 2, 21; Sāmavidhāna Brāhmaņa, II, 6, 7, which all have viśvasya rājati.

For a formal definition of samtata, see Aśvaläyana Śrauta Sūtra, I, 2, 10.

In the Agnistoma, the prakrti, the Niskevalya Śastra, Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 339, n., ends with a Mantra, uktham vācīndrāyopašṛnvate tvā, Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, V, 15, 23, of which uktham vācīndrāya forms the ukthasampad, and the rest the ukthavīrya. The Hote here recites the sampad, but in the place of the ukthavīrya come the ukthadoha, i. e. the verses set out in V, 3, 2. For the ukthavīrya, cf. V, 1, 5, n. 6; Haug, Aitareya Brāhmaņa, p. 177; Eggeling, I. c., 327, n.; Caland and Henry, L'Agnistoma, p. 233. Sāyana ascribes the verses and formulae to a śākhāntara as usual.

^{*} The Bṛhaddevatā, IV, 139, in the 'B' recension mentions Āśvalāyana, and though this may point to the verse being late, it may also be quite correct, since a pupil of Śaunaka appears to have been the author of the Bṛhaddevatā, cf. Macdonell, I, xxiv, and Āśvalāyana was evidently one of his oldest pupils.

the abode of mind, the entrance of the eye, the source of the ear, the resting-place of the heart, thou art all. (Thou art) Indra, the undying sacrifice, the ambrosia, the sky, right, truth, conquest, decision, the end of speech, the pervading, that which is beyond all, the light, the udder, the unanswerable, that which was before. Thou art all, speech, the water with the lightning that goes thither and returns, as elsewhere. A striking example of verse disguised as prose is the inscription on the Piprahva stūpa, see Fleet, J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 111 sq., following, with minor differences, Thomas, J. R. A. S., 1906, pp. 462 sq. In the Aitareya, II. cc., we have:—

and in other places fragments of verse appear, as is only natural, since gnomic sayings like them tend in all languages to become verse. The old character of these Slokas appears from their metrical form, and they may be compared with the verse cited from Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, XI, 5, 4, 3, by Oldenberg (S. B. E., XXX, xix). Similar verses composed at later dates are found in the characteristic late metre in the Gṛḥya Sūtras, quite freely (Oldenberg, L.c., xxxv-xxxvii), one being attributed (Āśvalāyana Gṛḥya Sūtra, IV, 7, 16) to Śaunaka, and Ślokas are recognized in the lists of compositions, e. g. Bṛḥadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 4, 10; IV, 1, 2; see Sieg, Die Sagenstoffe des Ṣgveda, pp. 7 sq.

Sápru is so explained by Säyana, and párāg and arvāg probably go with salilam. In the Jaiminīya Upanişad Brāhmaṇa, I, 9; 10, this passage from Indrah . . . amṛtaṃ duhānam appears, but in a different connexion and in an inferior, perhaps secondary, form, which looks as if it were borrowed from the Aranyaka. The parallelism has escaped not only Oertel, but also Bloomfield (Vedic Concordance). Quite irrelevantly appear the words (the gāyatrī as brahman is the subject of discourse): tasyaitāni nāmānīndrah karmāksitir amrtam vyomānto vācah l bahur bhūyas sarvam sarvasmād uttaram įyotil; \ rtam satyam vijāānam vivācanam aprativäcyam I pürvam sarvam sarva tāk I sarvam idam api dhenuh pinvate parāg arvāk II 9 II sā prthaksalilam kāmadughāksiti prānasamhitam caksuššrotram vākprabhūtam manasā vyāptam hydayagram brāhmanabhaktam annašubham varsapavitram gobhagam pythivyuparam tapastanu Varuņapariyatanam Indrofrestham sahasrāksaram ayutadhāram amrtam duhānā sarvān imānī lokān abhivikṣaratīti! Oertel renders, 'These are its names: Indra, action, imperishableness, the immortal, end of the firmament of speech; the manifold, the numerous, the all, the light higher than the all; righteousness, truth, distinction, decision which is not to be contradicted; the ancient all, all speech. This all also, [like] a cow, fattens hitherward, thitherward. She that milks immortality possessing individual oceans (1), possessing wish granting imperishableness, connected with breath, possessing sight and hearing, superior by speech, permeated by the mind, having the heart as its point, apportioned to the Brähmans, pleasant through food, having the rain as means of purification (?), cow-protecting, higher than the earth, having penance as a body, having Varuna as an enclosure, having Indra as leader, possessing a thousand syllables, possessing ten thousand streams, flows in all directions unto all these worlds.' It should be noted that the MSS. read vijijñānam, a clear error for vijigyānam, properly a perf. part. middle of √ji (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 809), a word elsewhere unknown but of interesting function (for g, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 146), which is rendered very probable by the metre, aprativācyah (C), sā, caksuirotram, hrdayogram, brāhmaṇabhraktram (a), °bhratram (B), °bhrtram (C), Varunapariyatanam, duhānāh. These readings confirm the brahmanabhartrkam of the Aranyaka text. Hrdayagram is no doubt a possible and an easy conjecture, but Sayana already had hédayogram, and its appearance here certainly shows that the tradition hardened to hrdayogram at a very early date. Annasubham is tempting, but uncertain as Sāyaņa read annasubhe. Cf. Satapatha Brāhmaņa, IX, 5, 1, 12, satyānrie vācam for Mantrāyanīya Samhitā, III, 7, 3, satyānrtām. So in Atharvaveda, XIV, 1, 11, frotre replaces RV., X, 85, 11, frotram quite wrongly (cf. Whitney, Translation, p. 742). I consider therefore that (especially in view of the accent) it is very likely that annalubham should be replaced. For hydayogram if it really is = hydayagram might be compared Maitrayani Upanişad, VI, 35, dvidharmondham for °andham (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, li). But error of text is easy. Vyománto vácak must, I think, be divided into vyòma and ánto vácák. The sense ascribed to Indrairestham is possible, and Indrairestham may mean (as in RV., AV., and TS.) 'having Indra as its best'. Varunapariyatanam may perhaps be right, but it is far from certain, and Sayana had varunaväyvitamam, a more recondite form (see n. 12 on II, 4, 3) than that of the Brahmana. The words bahur bhūyas should be bahor bhūyah. This example answers the query of Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit Syntax, § 122, n. 2, as to whether the idiom 'sisser als suss' is Vedic as well as classic (his Sanskrit Syntax, § 251, 3). The same phrase is found in V, 1, 5, in a Mantra passage, and in the parallel passage, Sankhayana Aranyaka, I, 8. Cf. also such phrases as bahu ca me bhūyas ca me, Taittirīya Samhitā, IV, 7, 4, 2; J.R.A.S., 1909.

The accents of the R edition are very incorrect. Vivacanám is quite impossible. In the case of the compounds R has hidayogram, brahmanabhartrham, varsapavitram, vakprabhūtam, prthivyupáram, tápastánu, Indrajyéstham, ayútáksáram, bráhmavárcasam. Varsápavitram is supported by varsánirnij (RV.), and varsámedas (AV., omedhas, AV. Paipp.); sahásradhāram by the RV.; ayútākṣaram by analogy with sahásradhāram, &c.; tápastanu and brāhmanábhartrkam depend on analogy; Indrajyestham has abundant authority; góbhagam may be compared with gómagha (RV.), but cf. gobháj (RV.). Vákprabhūtam and satyásammitam are supported by usage (Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 96; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 227 sq.), and hidayogram is probable (Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1287 a, gives several examples of different accents, Wackernagel, pp. 238 sq., decides for accent on the first member as usual in determinatives with adjectives at the end (for examples, cf. p. 233)). On this analogy, pithinyuparam may be right, or possibly we should read prthivy uparam as two words, but the gender of uparam would be strange if it is a noun (meaning either 'lower Soma stone' (RV., AV.; but cf. Ved. Stud, I, 108 sq.), or 'lower part of sacrificial post' (VS.)), since there it is always masc. (cf. n. 5). The accent on Várunaº must remain doubtful, but if it is a case of a past part, the accent should be on the first. None of these words have found their way into Wackernagel's lists.

For similar cases of double accent in MSS., cf. Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, pp. 39, 49 (from B); Wackernagel, p. 40, points out that in cases of compounds the Atharvaveda, XIX and XX, Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, Taittirīya Āraṇyaka and Maitrāyaṇī Upaniṣad (he ignores this work) are very badly accented. His theory of accent (pp. 40 sq.) lays stress on the fact that determinatives (save those with verbal second parts-other than forms in -ta, -ti) originally had the accent on the first part and only later on the second. The accents here must depend to some extent on (a) the validity of the theory, (b) the view as to the age of the Aranyaka.

4 Pinvati as it stands spoils the construction, but may be right. Possibly it was originally measured by truth, which is produced by speech, and proceeds from the mind, what is truth in the heart, and borne by Brahmins. (Thou art) food and prosperity, purified by the rains, rich in cows, that beyond the earth, to which Varuṇa and Vāyu most resort, that which has for its body penance, has Indra as its mightiest, which milks ambrosia, with a thousand streams and countless letters. These, O hymn, are thy powers; there are the powers of speech. With these for me now milk the great wealth of ambrosia. Prajāpati created this prayer, the essence of the Vedas. With it may I obtain all; let it win all desires greatly. Thou art bhūh, bhuvah, and svar, the three, thou art the Veda. Milk, O prayer, children for me. Life and breath milk for me. Cattle and folk milk for me. Prosperity and glory milk for me. The world (to come), splendour of renown, courage, prosperity in sacrifice, milk for me.' All this he makes the Adhvaryu repeat, if he does not know (the Mantras). Then being urged on to sacrifice (by the Adhvaryu, who says), 'Om, offer the Soma singer of the hymn,' pinvat (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 716), the nom. of the participle, or pinvati, reading dhendh. The Jaiminīya Upaniṣad pinvate may arise from a misreading of i or i.

5 Göbhagam may mean 'prospering cows', and varsāpavitram, 'purifying by rains.' Prthivyuparām is yūpasya mūlam (Sāyana). If this is correct (cf. n. 3), the next adjective may belong to it or to tāpastanu, but it is much more likely to be merely = 'beyond the earth', as in the Jaiminīya Upaniṣad, which has Varunapariyatanam and annašubham, 'pleasant through food.'

⁷ Dûhānam is taken as nom. neut. Sāyana renders it as with gokulam. Ayûtākṣaram is due, he says, to the fact that there are so many syllables in the dohanaprakarana, vasūnām pavitram asi sahasradkāram (Taittirīya Samhitā, I, I, 3, I; Maitrāyanī Samhitā, I, I, 3). He takes ayûtākṣaram and sahásradhāram as accus. agreeing with amṛtam. They are perhaps more probably nominative.

Or, as Sāyaṇa, 'these sounds are thy powers.' Bloomfield (Vedic Concordance, p. 300°) reads ukthabhūtayaḥ. The other seems simpler; uktha and vāc are easily identified, or rather the latter lies at the base of the former. For āpyāsam, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 921-925, 573 c; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 352, 353.

The conjecture védäsi for vedä asi is easy, but unnecessary; cf. n. 11 on III, 2, 4; RV., II, 6, 7; I, 45, 6; II, 3, 6; III, 14, 3, &c. See also Aśvalāyana Grhya Sūtra, 1, 15, 3, for veda 'si. To take trayo, &c., as a separate Mantra is wrong.

¹⁰ Sāyaṇa takes brahma as accusative. I prefer to regard it as vocative, despite the apparent parallelism of the next sentences. For another neuter voc., cf. II, 7, n. 1. Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VII, 4, 13, has prajām me dhukṣva, and also āyur me dhukṣva, paṣūn me dhukṣva. On the other hand Atharvaveda, X, 8, 25 has adhok—brahma ca tapas ca.

11 Cf. V, 3, 3. The Adhvaryu utters the praisa twice, see Asvalayana Śrauta Sūtra, I, 5, 3: ekaikam presito yajati. See Sabbathier, Agnistoma, p. 58, for the phrase, and for the gen., Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 297 b; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 160, uttering the cry, 'We who sacrifice,' he offers sacrifice with the usual ¹² (stanza), and holding back as it were his breath, repeats a secondary vaṣaṭ. ¹³ The accompaniment of the vaṣaṭ is described elsewhere. ¹⁴ The Adhvaryu brings up the vessel containing the libation and the (three) atigrāhya bowls. ¹⁵ As soon as he perceives the food, the Hotr descends from the swing towards the east. ¹⁶

13 Anuvasaikr is freely used as a compound verb in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (I, 22, 4, &c.), Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, and Śāókhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, and should be written as one word. Vyavānya is rendered ucchvāsam akrtvā by Sāyaṇa, who takes iva as eva. The reason for the expression anuvaṭat is given in Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 102; Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 351, n. 1. After the yājyā the Hott says: devā 3 vau 3 ṣat and somasyāgne vīhī 3 vau 3 ṣat, thus making two vau 3 ṣat cries. For the vaṣaṭkāra, cf. Āpastamba, Yajāaparibhāṣā, 96 (S.B.E., XXX, 341). The words somasyāgne vīhī occur in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 5, 4; 6: Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, V, 5, 19, and the brevity of this passage is only explained by the fact (see the following note) that the writer clearly knew the Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra (cf. Introd., p. 19): cf. the relation of Gṛhya Sūtra and Śrauta Sūtra in the case of Āśvalāyana and Śāṅkhāyana. Oldenberg, who once thought the evidence was in favour of assigning the two Sūtras of Śāṅkhāyana to different epochs, has now abandoned the attempt and leaves the question open (see S. B. E., XXIX, 5, 6; XXX, xxxiii sq.), while I am inclined to think that there is no evidence worth counting against the traditional authorship in either case.

14 Cf. Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, I, 5, 17: vāg ojaķ saha ojo mayi prānāpānāv iti vasatkāram uktvoktvānumantrayate! This is a direct reference. Cf. also Aitareya Brāhmana, III, 8, 9, where it reads tan anumantrayeta väg ojo saha ojo mayi pranapanav ity atman eva tad hotā vācam ca prāṇāpānau ca sthāpayati sarvāyuh sarvāyutvāya. The reference here might be supposed to be to the Brähmana passage and not to the Srauta Sütra, but the use of anumantranam and the mode of reference are hopelessly opposed to this view. The style of reference is reminiscent of Āśvalāyana Grhya Sūtra, I, 1, 1: uktāni vaitānikāni grhyāni vaksyāmab, which is a clear reference to the Śrauta Sūtra, and I think an assertion of the identity of authorship. It may be noted that, although Oldenberg (S.B. E., XXIX, 158) clearly indicates that he has some novel view on the relations of Saunaka and Aśvalāyana, he does not (in S. B. E., XXX) carry out his promise of discussing the point, save that (ibid., p. xxxv, n. 2) he alludes to the fact that Āśvalāyana Grhya Sūtra, IV, 7, 16, quotes a yajñagāthā by Śaunaka. This of course in no way contradicts the view of the relation as pupil and teacher reflected on the tradition of the Kathāsaritsagara and recorded in the most precise terms by Sadgurusisya. The B version of the Brhaddevatā, which probably was composed by a pupil of Saunaka's, distinctly quotes Āśvalāyana, which suits the tradition admirably (p. 293, note a).

Then they tie up the swing to the west that it may not slay the reciter when about to eat. For the Hotr eats seated on the place of the swing. Then the Hotr consumes the (libation in the) vessel with the words uttered in response, "May speech, the deity, rejoice in the Soma," May Soma, the king, shower life on me for my breath," May my breath milk mightily all life. The third pressing (in this rite) is taken over sfrom the last day of the Abhiplava rite, except as regards the hymn containing nivids addressed to the All-gods (RV., I, 89). In its place are inserted forty-one verses of the 'water' hymn of Dīrghatamas, 'Of that noble grey sacrificer' (RV., I, 164), and the hymn ānobhadrīya (RV., I, 89). The strophe and antistrophe of the Vaiśvadeva Śastra are taken over from the one day form 19 (the Viśvajit). If the Yajñāyajñīya Sāman is omitted.20 in Upasritena is explained by Sayana as itarānujñāpūrvakena; the word occurs often in Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, but not in a parallel passage. Cf., however, XVIII, 1, 12. The verse vāg devī (juṣāṇā) somasya tṛpyatu is found in Vājasaneyi Saṃhitā, VIII, 37, and elsewhere, Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 853b. Sa me, &c., is a quasi verse. It is tempting to render āyuh as if it were a dative, 'may Soma rain on me for life, for breath,' and it might possibly be so taken as the sentence is a Mantra, and therefore not to be judged by the ordinary rules of prose (cf. Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. viii). In that case ayuhpranaya would not be a tatpurusa compound, since 'the breath of life' is not in Sanskrit āyuhprāņa, nor yet a dvandva, but rather a case in which the mere base is accepted as sufficient to denote the case relation when followed by a case form in a parallel word, cf. e.g. RV., I, 26, 9, where Max Müller would so render (see Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 15) ámrta mártyānām, and see Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 60 sq., 225 sq.; Jacobi, Gött. gel. Anz., 1880, p. 855; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, xvii, and II, i, 157, who accepts this view of RV., I, 26, 9. Cf., however, Aitareya Brāhmana, I.c. on n. 14, where sarvāyuh sarvāyutvāya occurs. The gen. is one of partitive force, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 160; Monro, Homeric Grammar2, p. 146. For loc. with as, cf. Aitareya Brahmana, VI, 3, 10; for acc. exx. in Ind. Stud., IX, 295.

¹⁸ For the Abhiplava, see Aśvaläyana Śrauta Sūtra, VII, 6; Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 403. It has six days. The hymn referred to is RV., I, 89; cf. Śankhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 22, 8. The hymn, RV., I, 164, I, is called salila also in Śankhāyana Āranyaka, II, 18, and Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 22, 7. It is of course derived from v. 41, gaurīr mimāya salilāni takṣatī; cf. also Brhaddevatā, IV, 43.

²⁹ The Agnimāruta for the Śāńkhāyana is given in detail in Śāńkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 23; cf. Āraņyaka, II, 18. It consists of RV., III, 3; V, 55; the Yajñāyajñīya or a substitute, VI, 48, not noted by Bloomfield (Vedic Concordance, p. 735*) who omits also any reference to this passage; I, 141. If the Yajñāyajñīya Sāman is employed, the Agnimāruta Śastra constitutes itself in the Aitareya thus: RV., III, 2; I, 43, 6; V, 55; VI, 48, 1 and 2; VII, 17, 11 and 12; I, 99, 1; X, 9, 1, &c., the rest being as in the prakṛti (Sāyaṇa). If the Iļānda Sāman is then the strophe and antistrophe (in the Agnimāruta Śastra) consist of the six stanzas, beginning, 'O Agni, thy fame, thy strength' (RV., X, 140, 1), when the Ilanda Sāman is employed (three stanzas being used). If more (than three) are used in this Sāman, then so many are employed (in the Śastra) as the antistrophe, beginning, 'Agni, for ourselves as it were' (RV., X, 21, 1). Thus is completed the Mahāvrata and this day and the Agniṣṭoma.²¹ At the proper time they should carry the swing to the bath, and burn together the seats.

3. No one 1 who has not been initiated should recite the Mahavrata, nor used, then for the two pragāthas, VI, 48, I and 2, and VII, 17, II and I2, are substituted X, I40, I-3, and 4-6 respectively, being the two parts of the Iļānda Sāman. If, however, all the six stanzas (X, I40, I-6) are used for the stotriya, then X, 2I, I-6, must form the anurūpa. So Śāńkhāyana, who gives further variations. For the Iļānda, cf. Oldenberg, Gött. gel. Anz., 1908, p. 714.

21 The Mahāvrata is a form of the Agnistoma, and so in a sense the Agnistoma is finished. The utensils and the swing are both cleansed, while the vedi and the bṛṣṣṣṣ are both consumed by fire. Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 24, develops the final close of the ceremony in some detail. The Āraṇyaka, II, 18, has: tad Agnistomaḥ samtisthate. The burning points clearly to an original sun spell. The question, however, has recently been raised whether the use of fire is not merely piacular, cf. Frazer, Adonis, Attis, Osiris, p. 151, n. 4; Westermarck, Origin and Development of Moral Ideas, I, 56, n. 3. The usual view is that both the burning and the waving of torches in such rites are intended to evoke heat by magic. Cf. Warde Fowler, Roman Festivals, p. 84.

1 Sāyaṇa, as usual, ignores the difficulties of this passage. (1) The words ity eke most probably refer to the whole passage (cf. III, 2, 4, n. 2), because the very first prohibition contradicts the passage above, V, I, 5, n. 5, when the case of an adiksita Hotz is deliberately discussed. The sense then must be, as Eggeling (S. B. E., XLIII, 367, n. 1) takes it, that (1) no one but a diksita can recite, and even he only (2) if there is a cityagni, and (3) a yearlong sattra, and (4) not even he for another unless he be father or teacher. It may be noted that Śāńkhāyana Āraņyaka, I, I, prohibits recitation to another, save in the case of sattrins and of a father and a teacher, which corresponds with the rule here, since sattrins of course are entitled to recite for one another. But ibid., I, 5, and Srauta Sütra, XVII, 13, 6, regard a cityāgni as optional, perhaps a later idea (cf. Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 217, n.). The rule of those here cited thus excludes the Mahāvrata as anything but a sattra. Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVI, 1, 2, insists on an altar at the Mahavrata (Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, xxv, n. 2). But it should be noted that this is inconsistent with the exception of the father and the teacher, for they could only be concerned-being ex hypothesi not sattrins, in an ekāha or ahīna rite. Possibly, however, the view that one can recite for a father or teacher does not contemplate the case of an ahina or ekāha, but means that in a sattra the sacrificer may carry out the sacrifice for the benefit of his father or teacher though they are not initiated and cannot take part themselves; this view I incline to think the most probable, despite Dr. Friedländer's view (p. 29, n. 2). It cannot mean that, the teacher or father being dikrita, the Hotr recited for them only, for in the Mahāvrata all the sattrins equally obtain the benefits of the rite (cf. Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, xxv sq.), and therefore are forbidden to perform for others outside the circle of the initiated," cf. Satapatha

^{*} It may be noted that the prohibition of performing sacrifices by other than Brahmins is ascribed in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, II, 3, 1, 39 (cf. Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, IV, 14, 11; Max should he recite it when there is no altar, nor should one recite it for another, nor if it does not last a year, so say some. Only one may recite it for a father or a teacher, for that is recited for oneself.² (The only ³ utterance (of the Brāhmaņa, IX, 5, 2, 12 and 13; X, 5, 2, 5. (2) Presumably for this reason Sāyaņa renders the passage as equivalent to 'no one who is not diksita should recite the Mahavrata at another's sacrifice (i. e. an ahīna or chāha) unless there is a cityāgni; or unless that other is a father or a teacher'. His explanation is that the Mahavrata is of three forms, ekāha, ahīna, and sattra. As in the sattra, the yajamāna and Hotz are identical, then the dīkṣā is automatic. In the other two rites the Hotr is not the yajamāna, and may be either dīksita or adīksita. In the Agnistoma, &c., if svarthe he is dīksita, as these are Soma sacrifices (cf. Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 125). If the sacrifice is not a Soma one, then he is not. Only the dikita can perform at a parakīya mahāvratakarman, and he only if there is a cityāgni. But all this is very difficult and inconsistent. The nāsamvatsara ity eke he takes as a separate prohibition confined to one school. But this seems less likely. (3) Max Müller, S.B.E., I, 266, 267, takes the passage thus: 'No one who is adikshita, uninitiated, should recite it for another person; nor should he do so, when the Mahavrata is performed without (or with) an altar, or if it does not last one year.' But this hardly makes sense, since an adīksita can never recite if there is a sattra, and the construction of the sentence shows that the series of prohibitions is not directed to an adīkṣita but to a priest in general. He is not to recite if adīkṣita, nor if there is no fire, &c. Dr. Friedländer, on Sänkhäyana Āraṇyaka, I, I, follows Max Müller, without commenting on the difficulties. (4) The only other possibility is to render, 'No one who is not initiated must recite, nor must one recite if there is no fire, nor for another (i.e. allowing ahīnas and ekāhas if by chance the yajamāna is the Hotr in fact).' Some say, 'nor if it be not a sattra. One may recite for a father, &c.' In this case the passage confirms in part the view that there was probably a cityāgni at the ekāha and ahīna rites, Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, xxv.

² Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 1, has ātmane haivāsya tac chastam bhavati. The one gives the body, the other learning. Ātmano here is no doubt correct as less easy than ātmane. It is a predicative possessive gen., as in I, 2, 2, n. 8. Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 298; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit Syntax, § 64. For asya, cf. Caland, Ueber das rit. Sūtra des

³ Sāyaṇa says: atra kecid vākyāntaram adhīyate. This can hardly refer to recitation, and throws grave doubt on Winternitz's interpretation of a similar phrase in Haradatta (Mantra-pātha, I, xix). The passage is given in all the MSS, but it cannot be original. In addition to being quite out of place, it is almost unintelligible here. It is a general description of the praisa of the Adhvaryu in the case of Śastras, whether accompanied by Nārāšaṇiākhyacamassa or not. In the case of the Hotr's Śastras the praisa is ukthalā yaja somasya. In the case of the Hotrakas, what it is is disputed. Sāyaṇa says (1) some supply ukthalā yaja somānām (cf. Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, IX, 13, 33 (somasya); 14, 12 (somānām); Āpastamba Śrauta Sūtra, XII, 27, 19 (somasya); 28, 14 (somānām)) and make this the praisa; (2) others, so 'yam arthala prakrita eva prāpta iti matvā, reject the passage; (3) others repeat ukthalā yaja somasya, and assume the mention here is hotrakāṇam sastreṣu viseṣavidhānārtham. The second alternative is the most probable. The words ukthasā—somānām, which appear in the text after hotrakānām, are certainly spurious and cannot have been read even by Sāyaṇa, whose note would be Müller, S. B. E., XXX, 321), to the fact that Brahmins only can eat the remains of a sacrifice. The reason is no doubt a reflex of the doctrine of the presence of the divinity in the sacrifice (which in certain cases forbids any eating whatever, e.g. Āśvalāyana Gṛḥya Sūtra, IV, 8, 31), for which see my article in the J. R. A.S., 1907, pp. 939 sq.; Robertson Smith, Rel. of Sem., I, 276 sq.

Adhvaryu) on the Hotr's Śastras, whether accompanied or not by libations for Narāśamsa, is 'Offer the Soma with the hymn', and it also occurs in the Hotraka's Śastras): This day one should not teach to one who is not a regular pupil, and has not been so for a year, assuredly not to one who has not been so for a year, nor to one who is not a brahmacarin and does not belong to the same school,4 assuredly not to one who does not belong to the same school, nor to one who has not come to that place.5 There should not be more than one saying or twice, twice only.4 'One man should tell it to one,' says Jātūkarnya. 'Not to a child or a man in the third stage of life.' 7 Nor standing to one standing, nor walking to one walking, nor lying to one lying, nor seated on a couch to one so seated, but seated on the ground to one so seated (should the teacher teach). Nor (should the pupil) lean backwards,8 nor forwards, nor be over clothed, nor adopt postures, but he should raise his knees, without wearing special apparel, and so learn. He should not learn when he has eaten flesh, or seen blood, or a dead body, or done what is unlawful, or anointed (his eyes) or oiled or rubbed his body, or had himself shaved, or bathed, or has put on colour, or put on a wreath, or had intercourse, or written,9 or obliterated unintelligible if he had had them before him. The reason for their insertion is obvious. For the libations, cf. L'Agnistoma, p. 220. The gen. is presumably partitive, cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 67; V. 3, 2, n. 17.

4 Cf. Gautama Sūtra, XIV, 21, and Bühler's note in his translation (S. B. E., II), where he differentiates it from sahādhyāya. Here, however, it is perhaps used in that usual sense.

5 Where the teacher lives. He is not to go to the pupil's house.

Because it is so sacred. According to Sāyana, Jātūkarnya insists on one lecture only to one person at a time, and the same teacher to avoid sampradāyavicheda.

This sentence must also belong to Jätükarnya. This seems the proper way to interpret the iti, which, however, Säyana explains as sisyaprayuktanisedhasamöptyarthah, and so Max Müller takes it. For the idea, cf. Manu, VIII, 66, &c.

* I. e. lean on a kuḍī (or a wall, &c., Āpastamba Dharma Sūtra, I, 2, 6, 17), or rest with his hands on a stick (on the ground, Āpastamba, l. c., 17). The other renderings follow Sāyaṇa, who gives ucchiṣṭādyākramaṇa for nāvratyam ākramya; cf. Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XII, 8, 19. For ativītaḥ, cf. Manu, VIII, 23: saṃvītāngaḥ. For nāpitena kārayitvā he has nakhanikṛntanādi; cf. Śānkhāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, VI, 1, 6, and for the syntax, Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 224 sq. He takes nāktvā as referring to the eyes. Varnakenānulipya he refers to sandal or saffron being smeared on; for varnaka, cf. Böhtlingk, Dict., VI, 24. For anapaśrita, ibid., 1, 41. For these rules, cf. Āpastamba, I, 2, 6, 23-27.

These translations follow Säyana and Max Müller. Though they no longer 'seem to be the earliest mention of actual writing in Sanskrit literature', in view of the discoveries of Bühler, Indische Palaeographie, and Ind. Stud., III (1898); Hoernle, J. A. S. B., LXIX, pt. i; Rhys Davids, Buddhist India, ch. VII and others, they are interesting. Writing on palm-leaves may be meant rather than on wood. The violent repugnance to writing shown here and elsewhere is certainly in favour of this view, accepted by Macdonell (Sanskrit Literature, p. 16) and Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 29), that writing first came into use on the South Western Coast through commerce, and that MSS. are later. For a different but very improbable view, cf. R. Shamasastry, writing. 'He should not finish learning this in one day,' says Jātūkarnya. 'He should do so,' says Gālava. 'He should finish all before the sets of eighty tristichs, and resting 19 in another place learn the rest,' says Āgniveśyāyana. Where he learns this, he should learn nothing else; but where he learns something else he may at will learn this there also. He who does not study this does 11 not become a snātaka; even though he study much else, yet if he study not this, he does not become a snātaka. Nor should he forget this; even though he forgets something else, he should not forget this. Assuredly 12 never should he forget this. If he forget not this, let him know that it is enough for himself. Let him know that truly it is enough. He who knows this should not communicate 13 nor dine nor amuse himself with one who knows this not.

Now 16 we shall set forth the rules of study. When the old water about ¹º Śamayamānaḥ is taken as samāpayan by Sāyaṇa, which is possible. I follow Max Müller. On the passage as a whole, cf. Oldenberg, Prolegomena, p. 293. On the form Āgniveśyāyana, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1219. It occurs as a name of a grammarian in the Taittirīya Prātiśākhya, XIV, 32. Āgniveśya occurs in the Vaṃśas in Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 6, 2, and IV, 6, 2, in both Kāṇva and Mādhyandina Śākhās (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 118, n.; 186, n.). Jātūkarṇya (the word is found in the gaṇa, gargādī) occurs in the same passages with Gālava. The spelling seems clearly Jātū°, though in Max Müller's translation the two forms Jātū° and Jātū° occur. Jātūkarṇya occurs in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VIII, 10, and frequently in the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta and Gṛhya Sūtras (III, 10, 1), Kātyāyana's Śrauta Sūtra, the Vājasaneyi Prātišākhya, and in Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXVI, 5. Gālava is known to Nirukta, IV, 3; Bṛhadāraṇyaka, II, 6, 3; IV, 6, 3; Bṛhaddevatā, and Pāṇini as a grammarian; see Max Müller, Rgweda Prātišākhya, p. 6.

¹¹ Should not become' is Sāyaṇa's version. Literally it must be 'is not a (true) snātaka'. Cf. Āpastamba Dharma Sūtra, I, 2, 8, 27. The exact force of the optative is rather doubtful: it may be that it is the indefinite use, of which examples undoubtedly occur in Sanskrit (cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 283; also in III, 2, 1, n. 1, and Introd., p. 61), or it may be an opt. in protasis with the apod. in the indic. to denote the certainty of the result, though the rule of similarity of mood is usually strictly observed in the older language, see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 581 f, who enforces his rule partly by alterations in the text of the Maitrāyaṇī Sanhitā (see his review of v. Schroeder's ed., P. A. O. S., Oct., 1887); J. R. A. S., 1909, p. 153.

Säyana renders purusārthāya, and Max Müller gives as possible 'for acquiring a knowledge of the self'. For the dat., cf. II, 4, 2. Ātman, however, is merely the ordinary reflexive, Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 127; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 208, 262.

16 Then come general rules for all Vedic study, not for the Mahävrata alone. These are found both the roots of the trees has been dried up,¹⁷ he should not study, nor in the forenoon,¹⁸ when the shadows meet, nor in the afternoon, nor when a thick cloud has risen; and when rain ¹⁹ falls out of season he should stop his study of the Veda ²⁹ for three nights, nor in this time ²¹ should he tell tales, nor even in Grhya and Dharma Sütras (Oldenberg, S.B.E., XXX, xxxiv, xxxv); Khādira Grhya Sütra, II, 11; cf. Śāńkhāyana Grhya Sütra, IV, 8; VI, 1; Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 56 and reff.; Gobhila Grhya Sütra, III, 3; Āpastamba Dharma Sütra, I, 3, 9-11; Gautama Dharma

17 The time after the full moon of Pausa, i.e. January-February is meant, cf. Weber, Die vedischen Nachrichten von den Naxatra, II, 322 sq.; Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, 77, n.; Āpastamba Dharma Sūtra, I, 3, 9, 2, with Bühler's note; Manu, IV, 95; Yājūavalkya, I, 142; 143. The four months after the full moon of Asadha are forbidden in Sankhayana, VI, 2, 1. The term is five months, beginning in the middle of Śrāvana, Gautama Dharma Sūtra, XVI, I sq.; of Prausthapada, Gobhila Grhya Sütra, III, 3, 1; Khādira Grhya Sütra, III, 2, 16. Śrāvana is also given by Āśvalāyana Grhya Sūtra, III, 5, 2; 3; Śāńkhāyana Grhya Sūtra, IV, 5, 2; Pāraskara Grhya Sütra, II, 10, 2; Hiranyakeśi Grhya Sütra, II, 18, 1. The tmesis upa -nāpīte is very unusual, but upapurane would be almost equally strange, though not impossible. Kaksodake is a curious expression, as explained by Sayana. The separation of prefix and verb is (see Caland, Ueber das rit. Sūtra des Baudh., pp. 48,49) rare in the late Sūtra style and is difficult to assume here, though this may be quoted from an older (? metrical) text. Upapurāna seems elsewhere unknown in the sense 'somewhat (?) old '. Nothing is indeed more characteristic of the Vedic Sanskrit than the separation of particle and verb. Holtzmann (Grammatisches aus dem Mahābhārata, p. 48) says that the only example a in the Epic occurs in a pseudo-Vedic hymn to the A'vins, I, 3, 62: devā adhi višve visaktāh. Even the Brhaddevatā has no certain case of such separation. On Jacobi's theories of the beginning of the year (Festgruss an Roth, pp. 68-74), see Whitney, I. A. O. S., XVI, lxxxii sq.; Bühler, Ind. Ant., XXIII, 238-249 (dates of the commencement of Vedic study at p. 249); Thibaut, ibid., XXIV, 85-100; Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., L, 451 sq.

When study is permissible (hardly 'at any time' as in Max Müller), he must not so study in the forenoon or afternoon, when shadows are meeting; i.e. he should begin at sunrise when

For the case of a cloud, cf. Apastamba, I, 3, 11, 31. Rain out of season (ibid., 27; Manu, III, 104, combines the two into a cloud out of the ordinary in the rains) is explained by Sāyaṇa as rain falling in months other than Śrāvaṇa and Bhādrapada, August and September, or according to the Smṛtikāras, under Nakṣatras other than the 13 from Ārdrā to Jyeṣṭhā.

The study of Vedāngas, like vyākaraņa, is not prohibited (Sāyana). He adds ārdrādijyesthāntasya trayodasanaksatraparimitasya kālasya vrstikālatvam abhyupetya tato 'nyatra

But cf. the warning as to Holtzmann's accuracy in Bühler, Ind. Ant., XXIII, 146, and Winternitz's review there cited. In this case the fact seems substantially correct.

at night at this time be fain to set them forth.22 'This' 23 is the name of this great being. He who knows thus 'this' as the name of it, becomes brahman.

22 The text reads: nāsya rātrau ca na ca kīrtayiset. Sāyaṇa, followed by Max Müller, takes this as consisting of two sentences, (1) nasya ratrau ca, (2) na ca kīrtayiset. Sāyaṇa renders, (1) kimcāsya mahāvratasya pāṭham rātrau na kuryāt, (2) kimca mahāvratābhijāo 'ham ity evam janamadhye kirtim api nechet. Max Müller's version, which is much more probable, is cited above. But 'not even at night' would more properly be na rātrau cana than na ratrau ca, cf. III, 1, 3: natidyumne cana. Further kirtayiset is quite impossible. The form required is cikirtayiset, and no easier error than cana cikirtayiset being changed to cana ca kirtayiset can well be conceived. Then the whole must mean, I think, 'nor even at night in this time (probably adhīyamāne svādhyāye) should one be fair to proclaim (tales).' The adhyayana takes place during the day (see above), and neither then nor even at night, when the adhyayana stops, is the telling of tales to be permitted. For the form cikirtayiset, an opt. desid. from a denominative (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1056), see Whitney, § 1068. Such forms are very rare; hence the non-recognition of this case by the commentators. Cf. also Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 30: vāci kalpayiṣan, where Aufrecht (p. 430) proposes to read cikalpayisan (presumably by haplography for vāci cikalpayisan); I, 24, 5: ālulobhayisāt (cf. Liebich, Pāņini, p. 32, n.); Āpastamba Śrauta Sūtra, XII, 24, 5: bibhakṣayiṣet; Kāthaka Samhitā, XVII, 3: pipāyayiset; Ind. Stud., IX, 264; Holtzmann, Grammatisches aus dem Mahābhārata, p. 46, Sāyaṇa renders, followed by Max Müller, 'This, the krtsnādhyāyavākyam mahāvratavākyaṃ vā, thus learned (=itt), is the name of the paramātman.' He explains that the Veda produces brahman and so is identified with it, and its sacred character resulting from this power causes the long list of niyamas here given. This cannot be right. The word tad is the name of the brahman; see I, 3, 4, where this is most expressly stated.

The end of the section renders it probable that it may be accepted as coming from Saunaka. Otherwise the passage would be suspect, since it contains passages whose genuineness was doubted even before Sayana, and the possibility of it all being an interpolation cannot be entirely excluded. The use of brahman is striking, especially in the pred., and confirms the view that brahmā is not to be found save on good grounds in any early texts. For Atharvaveda, IV, 35, 2, see Weber, Ind. Stud., XVIII, 140; for Maitrayani Samhita, II, 9, 1, see v. Schroeder, Ind. Lit., p. 91, n. 1. Muir, Texts, V, 323, finds him in Satapatha Brahmana, XI, 5, 6, 9, &c., but needlessly. Hopkins, Religion of India, p. 195, and Oldenberg, Buddha 5, p. 30, n. 1, are vague. The St. Petersburg Dict., V, 138, cites Taittiriya Brahmana, II, 7, 17, 1, as the oldest passage, but Sayana's view may be wrong, and none of the passages in Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 168, are necessarily so taken. He occurs, of course, in the Taittiriya Āranyaka, X, but that is not early, though its lateness has been needlessly exaggerated on insufficient grounds. Eggeling (cf. S.B.E., XLIV, 525) finds him nowhere in the comparatively late Satapatha, though he appears in the Brhadaranyaka Upanisad (cf. Deussen, Phil. of the Upanishads, pp. 172 sq.), and in the later Upanisads and in the earliest Buddhist texts, which, however, can only be doubtfully dated.

ŚĀNKHĀYANA ĀRANYAKA VII-XV.

This Appendix contains the text of Śāńkhāyana Āranyaka, VII-XV, edited from the Berlin MS. Orient., fol. 630 (A)1 and Bodleian MS. Sansk. e. 22 (B). The Bodleian MS., which is at least 200 years old, save for ff. 65 and 87 which were replaced in A. D. 1781, is extremely accurate on the whole, and the text which it presents is in most cases also supported by parallel readings in other Upanisads and Aranyakas. In many cases the old method of denoting the e, ai, o, au is retained, but not consistently, showing that the MS. belongs to the period of transition to the new style. Frequent errors are (1) the reduction of double consonant to single, e.g. tare dvişantam, XII, 20; (2) the insertion of a needless h, e.g. sapatnahksayanam, XII, 19: this may be a mere graphical sign as apparently in the Mānava Gṛhya Sūtra 3; (3) haplography, e.g. pramive tare(d), XII, 20; hence probably bhavisyati for bhavisyafifi in IX, 7; (4) the writing of i for i, e.g. maricir, VIII, 7. Many, though not all, of these errors have been corrected in a later hand, or sometimes by the first hand in the margin. The most serious source of error is probably omission, see e.g. VIII, 2, n. 7; 4, n. 3. As usual ch is written for cch in all cases,4 and 1 replaces 1; I have restored cch and 1. Further, as the text is attached to the Rgveda, I have treated two verbal prefixes as each separate and accented, as usual in the text of the Rgveda.5 Both MSS, agree in several errors, e. g. the omission of trayasya and the reading sicyet (for sicyeta) in VIII, 2.

The following list gives the correspondence between the two texts of the Aitareya and the Śāṅkhāyana Āranyakas:—

The verses in Adhyāya XII sometimes make nonsense, and could be corrected from the parallel texts. But all that can usefully be done is to edit what apparently was the text of the Āraṇyaka, recognizing that it already contained much that in the course of oral tradition had become corrupted. This is the principle on which Winternitz has edited the Mantrapāṭha,¹ and is the only sound method of procedure.

In the latter part bruvantam and para and upavādah for bruvan, param, and apavādah seem essential, giving the reasonable sense: 4 if one is rebuking one who says the nirbhuja, the one (the latter) should say, "Thou hast fallen from the two lower (avara) places." So in the case of the pratrnna the two upper places are referred to, but in the case of the ubhayamantarena rebuke is impossible, and no reply is suggested. It would really be more natural to put the words of the apodosis in the mouth of the rebuker, but besides the difficulty of avara and uttara, it is hardly possible that the section should give directions for cursing persons who recite.
